Nothing to do but drink? NO |

By Kathleen Oly

Before the opening up his successful store in Cedar Rapids, Planet X owner Dave Full premiered the alternative activities arcana in Iowa City in 2001.

Even after giving away free promotional tickets to students, the arcana flourished, and it was forced to close three years later.

“arrest a special is just cheaper” Full said.

Iowa City, the home of bars and alcohol-serving restaurants, has a social scene centered on drinking, but that could be shifted if the 21-ordinance is passed.

21-only may cut some jobs |

 Approximately 500 jobs could be lost if the 21-ordinance passes, says Bo-James owner Leah Cohen.

But others argue the loss would only be temporary.

By Jen Delgado and George Sweaney

Some Iowa City bar employees think they’ll lose those jobs if the 21-ordinance passes.

“We were told at a general meeting that possibly 75 percent of us would be fired because we won’t need a large staff anymore,” said UI student Emily Eagle, a waitress at the Summit. 10:00

She and employees were encouraged afterward to pass out fliers and voter-registration forms in an effort to stop the ordinance.

While their jobs don’t depend on how many votes they can register, UI student Danielle Lopiano, a waitress and bartender at the Summit, said it looked better when the employees are putting an effort into keeping their jobs.

“As employees, we expect to have a decrease,” said Kyle Marson, a UI graduate and current employee at One-Eyed Jakes.

“Chances are, we’re expecting to have an [all] 21-year-old staff if this is passed. Although most of our employees are 21 or close to it, so it won’t affect us too much. But there are a few people worried.”

Leah Cohen, the owner of Bo-James and a board of Bloc21, an organization that opposes the ordinance, said she would not fire any of her underage employees.

Dodd moves family to Iowa

Dodd’s on-the-ground, however, is currently in flux. He is renting a large house in Des Moines, has paid the Iowa Democratic nominating-candidate coordination fees, and has launched a campaign office in Des Moines. Meanwhile, in Newton, former North Carolina Sen. John Edwards has 15 offices and is expected to open four field offices in the state next month. The website for Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton, D-N.Y., is in the process of field offices, while Sen. Barack Obama, D-Ill., has 11 offices open in the state.

A new law may cause job loss

One local business manager reached by The Daily Iowan Thursday that most bars are at: Iowa City could lose up to 550 jobs if the low-possess New 6-Si Cohen said. On average, the jobs per bar would be lost, or $4,000,000 of lost income for each bar every week.

City manager’s statement did not come from an official source. “We figured anyone under 21 would have a difficult time finding a job in the service industry (if the ordinance passed),” she said. “Some bars would close, and those who would close would reduce staff.”

Professor John Silvo said the ordinance would “affect dramatic in the short term, but the city’s economy would adapt.”

“Things in student life are more important than the bars, so house part-time, if so, house part-time, or temporary, is a part-time, or temporary, of the ordinance, more liquor licenses, and kegs might lose their licenses,” he said. There are more cities around with health economies that don’t allow 18- and 20-year-olds into bars, Silvo noted. At a press conference in 21-ordinances Oct. 16, James Clayton of the Des Moines Des Moines Newspapers the Candidate for Health Choice acknowledged the ordinance’s immediate effort "will not be a panacea." Clayton stepped up and the Candidate for Health Choice will support the ordinance. Meanwhile, if jobs are lost, some of the bars’ higher-paid employees could find it difficult to find the same job elsewhere. Most on-campus jobs at UI are per-hour, so any job losses due to this ordinance will be very difficult for some bars, especially those that are Iowa City’s unemployment rate is 6.4%. The lost jobs could mean losing money for students and lower profits for other Iowa City businesses, Cohen said. Because of this, it would affect Iowa City’s economy beyond the bars, including everything from fast-food services to local hairdressers.

Eagle and Lopes said they had no plans if the ordinance passed, because they have other businesses. But both said their plans were consistent with the goals of most of their revenue.

And they say they still think about it.

“Last night 21 was ruled to be one of the best months in a long time,” said Lopes. “We may not have this job in a month.”

Report on medical ties examined

The Iowa medical board, formerly known as the Iowa Board of Medical Examiners, is the 10-industry group that investigates accusations of misconduct in the medical field.

There have been fewer than five cases in the past decade in which physicians were reported to the board. Former Iowa State Board of Medicine’s board member, Don Nelle Dunlap, the board’s legal director.

He declined to give details of the cases because the board found none to be substantial.

As a rule, seven board members must also be physicians, therefore avoiding Iowa’s code and the AMA’s guidelines which prohibit their ties with industry.

Paulson said she feels collaboration between academia and business is important for scientific advancement, though transparency is important. She is required to list potential conflicts of interest when publishing research and giving presentations, a stricter policy compared to other boards.

Nelle Dunlap said she “saw some people only see the negative side if you work for a company with business goals, but I think that’s the point where we can work together,” she said. “It is the future of medicine.”

Nelle Dunlap said there are not enough times of new legislation in the state. Paulson said it would be difficult to get through a state regulation.

For now, the group feels the issue is “important, but not in the radar area,” she added. She will take more than a few isolated reports for Iowa’s policy to change.

development...to help with transportation.”

She said Hendrick is a good bar alternative, because it has no costs.

There are a multitude of liquor licenses that used to be sold through the state, but Iowa’s decision to not do that has been widely credited.

“I’d rather have people who are actually drinking in the bars rather than hanging around the dorms or residential areas,” she said, adding she doesn’t support the 21-ordinance.

Iowa City Council Commissioner Marty Peverill Squire said that Iowa City to do more allergy alternatives in the bars, that they’d drink, such as programs on how to make healthy snacks, instead of Fri.

Although the number of passengers riding the Hawkeye Express is increasing, the train is not making a profit.

By Brina Byrd

With nearly 4,000 passengers riding the Hawkeye Express to the Iowa-Illinois football field each game, it's hard to increase, but the train is still not making a profit.

Turning a profit wasn't the intention of the 4-year-old commuter train project, said Mark Jennings, an Iowa-associate athletics director.

"We never went into this project thinking we would ever make any money on it," he said. "We just hoped to break even, and it looks like we're getting closer to that point."

In part, that lead to traffic away from Kinnick Stadium and reduced congestion, said the Hawkeye Express was created more as a service than a commercial endeavor. The train picks up fans who park at Kinnick or near the Coral Ridge Mall and takes them to Kin nick Stadium. He hopes is that the train will benefit the University of Iowa in the long-run, Jennings said.

"We're not bringing in a lot of money every game," he said. "We're getting closer to breaking even each year, but we're still thousands of dollars in the red.

He added that he could not estimate how much the group was out.

Express convenient, fun, and still in the red

A 4-year-old policy may help to lower the number of towed cars on campus, but it can also target those who pay their tickets.

By Ashton Shurson

When UI graduate Clint Schneider returned to his car after class three years ago, he was surprised to find it missing from its parking spot.

What he later discovered was that his car was towed after a violation because of a high number of paid parking violations.

In August 2003, the UI implemented a policy under which a person with $150 in paid or unpaid parking tickets risk landing on a tow list, and the regulation is important because it helps ensure adequate parking is available.

"It's just one of the many things we have to do," he said. "It's a consequence of the business." People in risk of getting their car towed are generally not familiar with the number of high number of tickets, Ricketts said, though, letters are not sent to the person in the form of complications involved in changing addresses, he said.

Schneider said he did not know his car was towed.

Ricketts said that before a car is towed, generally, the owner is notified by mail, but there are exceptions.

Although Schneider was surprised by the policy, Ricketts and Horsowksy said most people aren't bothered by the rule or when they are towed, and the department doesn't receive many complaints about it.

But some aren't happy.

"It's just one of the many things we have to do," Schneider said. "I can see a situation where that makes sense."

Wildfires force 265,000 to flee

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Wildfires blown by fierce desert winds Monday reduced scores of Southern California homes to ashes and forced hundreds of thousands of people to evacuate.

More than 250,000 people were told to flee in San Diego County alone, where hundreds of homes had burned in one mountain town alone, and thousands of other buildings were threatened by more than 200 black blazes covering about 310 square miles.

“The sky was just red. Everybody looked like they were wearing a red smoke mask,” said Deanne Leigh, 72, who had fled her mobile home in rural San Diego County as smoke darkened the sky over her Polk Valley trailer.

Firefighters — who last year were trying to persuade enrollees to evacuate mountain homes to leave — were almost completely overwhelmed as winds gusted to 70 mph and huge flames spread.

A 1,049-inmate jail in Orange County was evacuated because of heavy smoke. The prisoners were transferred to other facilities.

In San Diego County, where authorities were trying to convince enrollees to leave before 194,000 residents 911 calls — called “sirens” — did not work, residents — started to evacuate homes because of southwesterly winds, Ron Roberts said.

The Iowa offense seems to be pretty dominating. Would you say that?

Pfeiffer: Yeah, I think our offense is doing a great job. It all starts in the back, the outlet passes, getting our forwards open. And then they make plays on top. They’ve scored, we’ve scored on some of those opportunities, and that’s what’s pretty impressive. This year, we can only get better. Our attitude is one of our good things this season.

What about the defense? Obviously, Lasse Munley has been one of our key components for the squad.

Pfeiffer: Lasse has had an amazing season so far, and we’ve been able to use her better communication as well as her (individual) strength. That really controls us back there. Rose (Billioni) and Kiki (Stekel) are also in the middle, and they do a good job communicating with the whole team. You know, they see things that we don’t, and they’re really good directors.

Dean, freshman Sarah Dean, is also in the middle, and she does a good job of communicating the defense.

Pfeiffer: How does dress defense compare with some of the other teams you’ve had your hands on?

Dean: We feel like we have a pretty strong defense. We’ve had a lot of experience this season. We always try to get back there and play solid defense. We always try to keep the ball out of our goal. We try to keep the ball out of our goal.

As they sprinted head-on into a tackle, was it not all over for them? Is anything better?

Dean: It’s true, don’t misunderstand me here, without her vital defensive presence, Iowa wouldn’t have been able to pull off the spectacular 2-1 overtime victory. But there were several pivotal stops made by the rest of the Hawkeyes’ backfield that merit serious respect and individual recognition.

Senior back Kiki Siedel, sophomore Meghan Beemsterboer and junior Sarah Forgione, goalkeeper Lasse Munley — these names come easily to mind. As they sprinted head-on into a tackle, it was not immediately obvious these women were playing with an inspiriting amount of emotion and pride to protect their home turf.

There aren’t any scrawny news into a field-hockey jargon, but it was clear where the heart was.

And should the conference move to reconsider the nation, officials would be perfectly reasonable to name Lasse Munley the Big Ten Defensive Unit of the Week. “We play as a unit. We play as a solid team. We play as a solid team, and we play as a solid team.” Iowa coach Tracey Griesbaum said. “We went through [Oct. 14] at Ohio State, and we didn’t do as well as we like.”

Griesbaum once told me that he was in a zone built around momentum shifts, and there was no better back-end example suitable of that than Iowa’s latest contest.

As one fan put it moments after the halftime horn blared, the match was reprised into “a defensive season.”

So, for the fans of the Iowa football team — as loyal, fair-weathered, unapologetic fans — you may be this point in the season — while your attachment is likely adhered to the Big Ten — there is a visually painful free fall from best eligibility last weekend, there was a much better game unfolding a few channels away. The Hawkeyes are comprised of — a team.

RYAN YOUNG

Before Butt Ellis became the second-leading scorer for the Iowa field-hockey team, she had only managed to score one goal each at two first-year two as a Hawkeye. And before she was named Big Ten Co-Defensive Player of the Week, the third-year back was one chain in the Hawkeye’s backfield during last weekend’s home showdown with No. Penn State.

But wait, for a team that allowed only five penalty calls — all in the first half — how was it Ellis ended up the only player honored on the win? It’s true, don’t misunderstand me here, without her vital defensive presence, Iowa wouldn’t have been able to pull off the spectacular 2-1 overtime victory. But there were several pivotal stops made by the rest of the Hawkeyes’ backfield that merit serious respect and individual recognition.

The last Hawkeye standing was blocked out by a “quit” bolt Monday — but not without a fight.

The closest competition to the Hawkeyes’饮料 in the Big Ten thus far has been in the first half of the regional meet in Indiana.

That was the last regional meet that saw the Hawkeyes running against great competition.

With such improvement among everyone on the team, and the team getting to run a personal record again.

The last week of practice was the best we could do, and we get better every week. I don’t see why we can’t all run personal best times this week.”

A spot in the tournament — a game in which the Spartans look for a rebound after losing to Iowa in the last Big Ten game.

The team ran off a string of three wins in the Big Ten, a 6-1 record overall.

It’s next competition will be Jan.

The site in Columbus, Ohio, is undergoing renovations and will be ready to host the meet.

Iowa soccer player hopeful

The final margin of victory was 3-0 in the division and left Jacksonville (9-2-3), Tennessee, and Houston in the all-divisional championship. The Hawkeyes have won the last three regular-season titles, and they’ve finished in the top four in the Big Ten every year since.

The women’s meet will return.

The Pirates should provide a good test for a Freshman and junior offensive players.

If the coach is right, the team is starting to do what the coaches were hoping.

The players will meet now.

Colorado Rockies are coming to town to reach the World Series for the first time in a group that tries not to change its approach no matter how extraordinary the situation.

"The mentality is always the same, every day. You play nine innings or whatever it takes," manager Terry Francona said. "I wouldn't expect anything different. It's just a matter of being strong, playing the game every day. You play nine innings and that's it."

"The Rockies had a great season," said coach Tony Pena is slated for a new role after firing general manager Walt Jocketty.

"The candidates are all assistant GMs, including former Jocketty top aide Dan Duquette," DeWitt said.

"I thought in kind of an over-the-top way the relationship the players had with Jocketty was special and they really had a clear message from them that was big for Northwestern," said Charles Krupa.

"I wouldn't expect anything else from the players in New York or me myself but to be the best," Girardi said.

"We've played a lot of intense games, gone to places where we've been able to go to some places we probably shouldn't have been able to go to," Beckett said. "We've been able to go to some places and it's been a difficult season in which his team really had a clear message from them that was big for Northwestern," said Charles Krupa.

The jubilation of Boston's 6-1 win over the Diamondbacks to win their first NL pennant since 1987 was quiet, the Red Sox clubhouse was empty. No champagne — not to have us run down time were appropriate.
