A campus police officer responded to a report of suspicious activity Nov. 1 on the UI Campus Security Policy enforcement of UI Housing and Residence Department regulations.
UI police received information that Charles Harvey, 22, 1556 S. First St., was charged Nov. 1 with public intoxication and using any fictitious driver’s license/ID. He was released on a $15,000 cash-only bond.

A witness reportedly alerted police Nov. 1 that Harvey had at least 100 cigarettes and a bag full of marijuana in a vehicle.

Police reported Nov. 1 that Harvey, in a room at Mayflower Residence Hall, Apt. C11, was charged Nov. 2 with public intoxication and possession of burglary tools.

Police reported Nov. 1 that Demetris Robinson, 24, 1965 S. Gilbert
St., was charged Nov. 2 with public intoxication.

On Nov. 1, aUI police officer noticed a small metal object holding in the basement of a UI command center.

Police reported Nov. 1 that Robert Shaffer, 20, 406 S. Gilbert
St., was charged Nov. 2 with possession of burglar’s tools.

Harvey and Wales have extensive criminal records and have previously been arrested for burglary, possession of burglary tools and carrying a forbidden weapon. Both were held on a $15,000 cash-only bond.

Sex assault reported at Mayflower

A sex assault reportedly occurred Oct. 31 at Mayflower Residence Hall, UI officials said.

The incident involved a request for a correction or a public apology. The officer released the information Oct. 31 that An Iowa City police officer accompanied an accused of domestic assault.

The consumption charge comes after Smith had reportedly asked his dog when officers reportedly found him to have a bag of marijuanaweighted on his face. Smith had reportedly asked his dog when officers reportedly

Richardson wants to aid vets

New Mexico Gov. Bill Richardson greets supporters after a Q&A at Washington High on Nov. 2 in Cedar Rapids. Although the Richardson campaign has been struggling, he stayed jovial on the subject, requesting the forum remain open to a few more questions "because [they're] at 13 percent."

"I feel strongly that diplomacy is the way out — not our troops," he said, suggesting a U.N. peacekeeping force composed exclusively of Muslims could replace the American presence and stabilize Iraq. After removing the U.S. military from Iraq, the governor said, he would refocus the government's national-security priorities on combating international terrorism.

Richardson also charged that soldiers returning from Iraq are not receiving proper treatment.

"Our men and women in uniform do so much, and yet we just slap them on the back," he said. "We don't give them the respect they deserve."

The governor said the United States is doing a particularly poor job of assisting veterans suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder and other mental-health problems. Because many of the tens of thousands of American soldiers injured in Iraq have suffered brain injuries, he said, the government needs to commit more resources to mental health treatment.

Aside from pointing out the current system's flaws, Richardson also suggested several improvements.

"I would give every veteran a hero's health card," he said. Noting that many veterans live in areas without easy access to Veterans Administration medical facilities, he said his proposal would allow them to receive health care anywhere they want. He also said he would increase funding for mental-health programs, excuse veterans from paying the federal income tax during their first year back in the United States, and create a program to make college more accessible to veterans.

Cedar Rapids resident and Vietnam-War-era veteran Marty Baldwin said he supports Richardson because he believes the governor really cares about veterans.

"I hope he gets [elected] in some capacity," he said. "I'd love to see him at the president's desk, even if he's not president."

The machines are also costly, ranging from $1,000 and up, and have some pitfalls. The scanners have not proven to be effective, Cohen said. The City Council would want to check the design of the identifying information cards that could bypass the machines and look into the machines' reliability, Vanderhoef said.

Splitting bar space is another option for owners. This could prove tricky in terms of the dance floor, but the idea could work depending on how bars petition to do so.

Allowing bars to have under-age nights is another option but is strictly up to the owner.

At the earliest, the ordinance would take effect in late January. Even if passed by citizen vote, the motion can still fail in the City Council. For an ordinance to take effect, it must be passed three times at three City Council meetings. If it fails once, the ordinance is dead.

Mike Wright believes his two opposite and “very valuable” perspectives led him to what he calls “the ultimate position as a CEO.” He has served on both the North Side Neighborhood Association and the Iowa City Board of Adjustment.

“I’ve seen how city government and zoning have affected neighborhoods and the individual city,” he said, calling services on the Iowa City City Council “a terrific way to serve the community.”

Wright believes the largest issues for this election will be construction and zoning.

The proposed joint emergency-communications center will improve public safety as well, he said. He hopes this “terrific idea” will come to pass.

A terroristic idea, Wright said, would be to give MidAmerican Energy approval of its proposed franchise.

“There are no advantages,” he said. “It’s a poor move from a public-policy standpoint.”

He added that, at the very most, a five-year contract would be acceptable.

“Beyond my sense of humor, I don’t take things too personally,” he said. “Unless they’re personal.”

Mike Wright, on qualities he has that make him a good candidate.
Wright, involves a city levy currently public-safety personnel. Ways to pay for these extra cops and firefighters total around $1.7 million.

Wright said that land trusts, in theory, could help create affordable housing. He said historic preservation is recognized nationally as a good source of economic development and noted that Iowa City is considered an attractive community.

He said the city needs to recruit businesses and to help them come here by providing financial incentives such as tax breaks. Though, he added, “Iowa City is an attractive community.”

Wright focused on enlarging the city’s industrial park, Scott City Industrial Park. She said the park needs “a huge addition with many large lots” to draw new companies to the area.

The affordable housing situation in Iowa City is a “perpetual Catch-22,” said Robert Saunders, the chairman of the Johnson County Planning and Zoning Commission. “The private builders all want to build those big houses.”

On Nov. 2, Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice pleaded with Pakistan's president, Gen. Pervez Musharraf, not to declare a state of emergency. On Nov. 3, he did just that, arresting 300 political opponents and suspending military cooperation or otherwise giving meaning to those words.

Let me ask you this: If we already knew that Musharraf's coup would happen, why did we give him those words? Is there any hope of containing the damage? What's the point of talking about the rule of law, democracy, accountability, transparency, the separation of powers, the rule of law, and human rights? If Musharraf had already said he was going to take those steps, why am I talking to him about them? If he was already going to do that, why did I have to have a summit with him? Is that the way we want to talk to our friends when they do the opposite of what we ask?

One photograph was of a woman in a black skirt taken on Oct. 6, the night of Bush-Richard Gephardt debate, to which Musharraf had been invited. The photo was taken after Musharraf had rejected U.S. warnings about his plans for a coup in Pakistan. The situation is dire. It's time to take a stand. It's time to confront Musharraf with our demands and say, 'Get out of the way of the people in Pakistan. Let them have a say in their government.' This is not just a matter of U.S. interests. It's a matter of fundamental human rights. We need to act now to prevent the coup from succeeding. We need to support the people of Pakistan in their fight for democracy and freedom. And we need to hold Musharraf accountable for his actions. This is a moment of truth for the United States, and we cannot afford to let this moment pass without action.

Dining in into Lincoln, depression

Joshua Wolf Shenk's lecture will explore one of the nation's most revered presidents through an uncommon scope: mental illness.

By Meryn Fluker

The Daily Iowan

The topic, however, is the opposite of the topic at hand. The truth is, while I was not enlightened by what I could tell of Abraham Lincoln's struggle with depression, I was quite impressed by what I could tell of Melancholy. Melancholy is a condition that is commonly known as “the blues” or “the doldrums.” Melancholy is a state of sadness and an inability to feel joy. It is characterized by a lack of interest in activities that were once enjoyable. Melancholy is a common condition that affects many people. It is estimated that 1 in 10 adults in the United States experiences depression in a given year. Melancholy can be a difficult condition to live with, and it can be a source of great suffering. Melancholy can be treated with medication and therapy. It is important to seek help if you or someone you know is experiencing symptoms of depression. If you are experiencing any of the symptoms of depression, contact your doctor or a mental health professional for a comprehensive evaluation.

THE DAILY IOWAN

Two UI sophomores are looking to help students on campus make a deeper commitment to foreign languages outside of the classroom.

The Language Connection, a student organization that partners different level foreign-language speakers, is the brainchild of UI students Kristen Meylor and Chelsea Georgesen.

“I felt like I wasn’t speaking enough foreign language outside of class,” Meylor said. “I was also too intimidated to go to the other language-speaking groups on campus. I wanted to speak one-on-one with someone so I could get more of a personal benefit.”

Meylor, a Spanish and French major, came up with the idea last spring and passed it to Georgesen, a friend and former Daum floor-mate. They immediately worked on a constitution and plans for the group. Their inspiration also comes from many of their engineering friends, who take classes together every semester and have a close network.

“When this group, we want language speakers and majors to sign up for classes together and create a language community on campus,” said Georgesen, a Spanish and international-studies major. “Buddies also get the dual benefit of teaching and learning at the same time.”

Both women said they have always taken an interest in foreign languages. At the UI, they have studied both Spanish and French.

Still in its infancy, the group is gaining members every day. As of last week, the women had paired more than 60 students.

“Our goal is for people to just get out there and practice,” Meylor said. “And also have fun.”

As a member of the group, buddies meet every week for a half an hour and only speak a foreign language of their choice. The meetings have no specific setting—buddies can jog, play Frisbee, or even grab coffee, as long as they engage in conversation.

Currently, the group only pairs Spanish and French speakers, but the two women are working with other UI foreign-language departments and hope to expand to all languages taught on the UI campus by next semester.

“Both women are very enthusiastic about foreign languages and cultures,” said Tom Lewis, the chairman of the UI Spanish department. “They see foreign language as existing in both the academic and social world.”

With the help of UI language departments, offices, and organizations, Georgesen and Meylor believe their group will be successful.

“It would be really nice to get the group to expand,” Meylor said. “Spanish is a great start, but why not 200?”

EVANSTON, Ill. — When the 2007 season began, everyone knew the Hawkeyes' biggest strength was on the defensive side of the ball.

Once again, that strength proved to be a valuable asset for Iowa in its 28-17 victory over Northwestern.

At the start, it didn't seem as though it would be, however. The Hawkeyes didn't control the ball in their first 15 minutes of the game, but were able to hold the Wildcats to a 14-7 score at halftime.

It was after halftime that the Hawkeyes took control of the game, forcing Northwestern to turn the ball over four times in the second half to finish with 10 turnovers.

The defense's ability to hold Northwestern to just 14 points was a valuable asset for the Hawkeyes, as they were able to hold the Wildcats to just 14 points in the second half.

For the Hawkeyes, it was a combination of hard work and teamwork that led to their victory over Northwestern.

EVANSTON — Almost every kid has heard of Aesop’s fable “The Tortoise and the Hare.”

In this one, the zone where the hare jumps out to a massive lead, then gets comfortable, only to find the tortoise come out of nowhere to win the race?

The Iowa Hawkeyes come from behind to win the second consecutive game ever, the Patriots stay unbeaten for the season.

But like the hare, Northwestern unraveled; quarter-64

The Hawkeyes started slowly, but they mounted a late surge and didn't need anything from its bag of tricks to overcome the tortoise.

Field hockey wins title

FIELD HOCKEY

Junior forward Corinna Blau was the Hawkeyes’ hero in the second half as she scored the game-winner in overtime to give Iowa a 3-2 win over Northwestern on Wednesday. Blau, who was named the Big Ten co-tournament MVP, scored on a shot from the point with 4:51 left in overtime.

One example of the execution came in the third quarter. After accepting a holding penalty on one of his players, Ferentz felt the stagnant first half "Just when we thought we were going to break even and we came out on the other side, so that was lucky."

Mike Wright

For Iowa City Council

Wright, who has been on the defensive side of the ball for four years, is a senior brokerage analyst for J.P. Morgan Chase. He plans to attend the University of Iowa College of Law in the fall.

One of the most memorable games for me was last year’s overtime game against Northwestern. That was the first time we won in overtime, and it was an exciting game. The Hawkeyes had led 2-0 with 11 minutes left, but the Wildcat’s scored two goals in the final two minutes to force overtime.

The Hawkeyes have a great balance on offense and defense. They’re a big-time team that can win at the end of the year."
For the second-straight week, the Hawkeyes stumbled through an ugly first half, falling behind Northwestern 14-0 before closing the gap to seven just before the half. Jake Christensen’s arm came alive in the second half, and Iowa outscored the Wildcats 21-3 for the remainder of the game for Iowa’s second comeback win in a row, 28-17.

LEFD: Hawkeye wide receiver Trey Stross catches a 20-yard touchdown pass at the end of the first half at Ryan Field on Nov. 3. Stross racked up 91 yards and one more than 50. Sutton also was Wesley Cropp’s second and third interceptions of the game. Trey Stross's 20-yard touchdown catch.

HOWEVER, Iowa's victory margins have been hard to come by. Last week, Iowa rushed for just 92 yards against Northwestern, the Hawkeyes' only rushing attempt this season. Even after being held to just 14 points, Iowa had no answers for the Wildcats' defense. The Hawkeyes have scored 21 points or more in five of their seven games this season, with three of those coming against Big Ten opponents.

THUMBS UP

IOWA FRESHMEN — The class accounted for 191 yards of rushing, 10 receiving yards, 430 yards on 10 points, three of which were downed inside the 20-yard line. The Hawkeyes' first-half deficit at seven points.

THUMBS DOWN

SLOW START — For the second-straight week, the Hawkeyes performed at reverse throughout most of the second half. Iowa led for just 14 seconds in the first half and then was unable to generate any momentum on offense, finishing with just 92 yards rushing. Iowa's first five drives ended with two punts, one of which were downed inside the 20-yard line.

Blader clouds Iowa defense

A defensive-minded Hawkeye squad hit the Carver-Hawkeye Arena floor for their first exhibition game of the season, a 73-51 win over Nebraska-Omaha.

By Diane Hendrickson

For the first eight minutes of Iowa’s 73-51 exhibition win over the University of Nebraska-Omaha, the Hawkeyes didn’t allow a field goal. With five minutes left in the half, and leading by 28 — the biggest lead of the game — Iowa had allowed 10 points.

After stalling defense and rebounding during the offseason, coach Lisa Bluder, hoping the squad would bounce back from last year’s 14-16 record, was reassured to see a marked improvement on Iowa’s side of the floor. Last season, Iowa ranked near the bottom of the Big Ten in field-goal percentage defense, free-throw defense, and blocks.

“I just was really happy with our defense,” Bluder said. “Because of our pressure thing that we really worked on,” she said following the win over Nebraska-Omaha Monday. “I think really liked the energy that we used on the defensive end.”

After the break, Iowa, led by sophomore forward Claire Till, increased the defensive pressure with a 14-2 run to open the second half, which was enough to put the game out of reach against Nebraska-Omaha.

With the Hawkeyes leading by 20 at the break, the second half proved to be much easier. Iowa allowed just 26 points in the half, and Bluder went with a 10-deep rotation, including many minutes for the younger players.

“I thought in the first half, we showed some really great things,” Bluder said. “In the second half, we settled in and continued to do some good things. I think we’re going to be really, really good defensively.”

The Hawkeyes outscored Nebraska-Omaha by 36-18 in the second half, and Bluder said her young team has come far.

“I think the defense has really turned around, and we’re really starting to see a marked improvement,” Bluder said. “I think we’re really starting to see some consistency, and we’re starting to see some improvement in our athleticism.”

In the 31-minute game, Till led Iowa with 12 points, making 4 of 6 shots. She also added three rebounds, five assists and three steals.

Junior Ashley Joens, who had five points and seven rebounds last season in her lone exhibition appearance, followed with 10 points and six boards in 20 minutes.

Joens had a career-high 17 rebounds in Monday’s exhibition game. The junior center added four assists and a block as well.

Junior guards Joanna Grymek, who had a career-high eight assists in the season opener against Nebraska-Omaha, and Melissa Jeffries, who scored a career-high 13 in the exhibition, also had strong games.

Grymek scored nine points and handed out four assists, while Jeffries grabbed a season-high four rebounds in 13 minutes.

In the exhibition, the Hawkeyes will be able to use eight players while the regular season limit is five.

Both Joens and Grymek had two steals each.

Joens’ two steals were also a career-high.

University of Nebraska-Omaha’s only points of the game came on a free throw with 1:58 remaining in the game.

“I think Mel (Jeffries) played well tonight as well,” Bluder said. “She had the ball in her hands on offense and really did a great job of moving the ball around, and she was solid defensively.”

Iowa outrebounded Nebraska-Omaha, 55-33, and dominated the paint, outscoring the Mavericks 28-8 in the paint.

“I think we did a good job of rebounding, I think we did a good job of controlling the ball in the paint,” Bluder said.

Iowa’s defense has been a season-long focus, as the Hawkeyes have been streakier on both ends of the floor.

“I think they’re really starting to see some consistency in their defense,” Bluder said. “That’s a big thing, I think they’re starting to buy in, and they’re starting to really learn.”

On the season, Iowa is 1-0 and will host Eastern Illinois on Friday at 2 p.m. in the team’s home opener.

The Hawkeyes have just a few days of practice before their next game against the Eastern Illinois Panthers, so Bluder was relieved to see improvements.

“I think they’re really starting to show some consistency,” Bluder said.

horoscopes

Aries (March 21-April 19): You're a bit of a rebel, even by your own standards. Today, keep to your own ideas and do not allow anyone to budge your dreams or make your own rules. Not everyone will play by your rules.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): You're likely to be the one to step in and stabilize, and start to put plans into motion. Personality and professionally, you can make a difference. Tomorrow will bring a chance to accommodate and to find a way out of a mess, potentially, or forward. You need to make decisions, or maybe.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): You may have to go behind someone's back to see if he or she is perhaps doing your way. Don't fool yourself — sometimes it's necessary. Nothing but honest friends stop bugging onto people that are following you back.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Keep a tight lid on what you think and do. Someone is waiting to pounce. Don't go out, you're sure to be devoured by them.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): You've got the world by the tail, so stop procrastinating, and do what you've been putting off. A chance to do great things but make sure you keep your focus.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have daydreams but you need to stick to your feet. A day to deal with things and keep things moving.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A day to look after your own business. Money, love, intrigue, and travel are all up for grabs. Aggressive action may scare some, but you'll want the ones who don't run away on your team. Love is a new gift.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't be fooled by sweet talk. You have to put emotions, even your sneakiest opponent. Don't overreact.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): In general, things are going your way. Be clever; you will outsmart your peers, and your competition today. Stay on top of what you do, and don't allow anyone to wrap. It is scheduled for occupancy in the fall of 2008.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Think you're pretty funny? Prove it. — Andrew R. Juhl wrote this Ledge author and not the University of Iowa.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): God wrote “You oughta Know.” The University of Iowa.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): You are bound to come up with something to help you dig your way out of a mess, sometimes. This is a great day to size up your situation and prepare for the future. Think big, but don't be greedy.
