UIHC thinking big about the future

DAILY IOWAN
AMBUL — Using a ballpark price tag of $700 million to $850 million, UI Hospitals and Clinics officials told the state Board of Regents Thursday they want to build a new children's hospital and a critical care tower with all private patient rooms, and maybe even more revenues to existing facilities in the next 10 years. From Ruhbardi, the UI vice president for Medical Affairs, said hospital beds are full and space is limited because of an increase in patients over the past few years, adding there is a "critical and urgent need" to build, demolish, and renovate several facilities.

Over the past two years, UIHC has seen an increase of 20,000 patients, or 12 percent. Ruhbardi wants to add 300 new beds over the next five years to keep up with that increase.

"We have more people coming from community hospitals, an older population that is requiring more health treatment, plus we are offering a wider range of services compared with past years," he said. "We need to compensate for this.

The budget for these projects would come from hospital revenues and philanthropy, said Ron Faber, the UIHC’s chief financial officer. The hospital will not ask the regents for any funding.

The request was presented a map of the hospital and its surrounding areas as hospitals officials explained the complexity of adding on to the building, which is surrounded by more important buildings. The only feasible area to build on, they said, would be in the southeast area of the hospital, where the Center for Diabetes and Development and the hospital’s parking lot sit.

Hospitals working to decrease errors
An abundance of medical errors instill fear in the public despite health-care institutions’ efforts.

The UIHC proposes a project that could cost up to $850 million.

DAILY IOWAN
Most people will walk out of a hospital without being subjected to a blunder. But health-care providers do break that ancient promise to “First, do no harm.” The Institute for Healthcare Improvement estimates 15 million mistakes occur annually, or 40,000 cases every day.

“People are abhorrent to finding things to do to fix it,” said Mary Ilgen, a professor in community health systems and director for patient safety at the University of California-San Francisco School of Nursing.

Awareness of the problem has drawn attention from hospitals. Thousands of health institutions, including dozens from Iowa, volunteered for the Institute for Healthcare Improvement’s 100,000 Lives Campaign, pledging to work on such factors known to cause complications.

Certain goals were as hard as pre- venting surgical site infections and ven- tilator-associated pneumonia. By June, 2006, 18 months after its beginning, the campaign exceeded its goal by saving an estimated 122,000 lives — and more than 3,100 lawsuits. Success encouraged participation in the subsequent 5 Million Lives Campaign.

Experts ponder Romney fallout
UI professor, Republican leaders weigh in on Romney's failed candidacy.

By Shawn Hagle
THE DAILY IOWAN

In the end, Republican presidential candidates were hardly surprised by Mitt Romney just didn’t have enough currency.

Romney's campaign, one professor asserted, was "like the guy who just lost his job."

The reason behind Romney's failure, according to a number of sources including two presidential-nomination candidates, is that George W. Bush once called on Sunday while speaking in Arizona.

Conservative Political Action Conference in Washington, D.C., where Romney announced he was dropping out of the race after New Hampshire.

Romney was handily defeated in the contests, repeatedly stating he was the right man at the right time.

The reason behind Romney's failure is that he was a great successful Republican candidate for the presidency.

And if McCain wins the presidency, he will work or is suitable, we can go about finding the right man at the right time.

possible hospital add-on

The new wing of the UI Hospitals and Clinics emergency room remains under construction on Feb. 2.

It will be completed by late February, UIHC officials said.

"We have that culture when the care of children is in three different places on different floors," she said.

"We can’t educate more nurses if we don’t have more people prepared to fill the faculty," she said.

But there are still worries about the effects of the change on this year’s freshmen, who will be the first affected by the change. And that’s not the only thing those students have to worry about. The college used to automatically admit students with a 3.5 GPA or higher, but because the new program has been introduced, that’s not the case anymore, Clark said.

"We need the culture of care of children is in three different sections of the hospital," she said.

"I do know that we are turning away really fine students who are going to go somewhere else," she said.

Since the nursing school decided to establish the new policy, it has had to completely revamp the curriculum of the classes. Clark said it is an adjustment that will take some getting used to.

"I want to go to a university, but if my graduating in four years means going to a smaller school, then I will," she said.

"Why take the chance when the chances are so slim?"

Suicide: A call to action

Unfortunately, the current data on suicide is chilling. Suicide rates are at an all-time high, and the youth population is especially vulnerable. It is crucial for us to take action and implement effective strategies to address this pressing issue.

The American Psychological Association estimates that suicide is the second leading cause of death among people aged 15-24. More than 30,000 Americans lose their lives each year due to suicide, with many more attempting suicide.

In the US, the suicide rate among young people has increased by 30% since 2000, with the highest rates occurring among individuals aged 15-24. This alarming trend highlights the urgent need for preventive measures.

Several factors contribute to suicide risk, including mental health issues, family history, and personal experiences. It is crucial for educators, parents, and policymakers to work together to address these underlying issues and provide support to those in need.

It is important to note that suicide is preventable. There are various resources and support systems available, including local suicide prevention hotlines and mental health professionals. It is essential to reach out for help and encourage others to do the same.

Let's work together to create a safer and more supportive environment for our youth. Let's prioritize mental health education and resources, and take immediate action to prevent suicide.

As students move through the school system and prepare for what lies beyond graduation, little is known about the future that awaits them. One thing, though, that is certain is that they will be faced with more rigorous assessments, more structure, and rigid expectations.

The No Child Left Behind Act was passed by Congress nearly seven years ago and signed into law on Jan. 8, 2002—has become one of the most controversial pieces of Bush administration. The system attempts to improve the quality of public education by placing greater emphasis on standards and performance. However, in attempting to judge the quality of education by simply measuring student test scores, the system structures incentives in a way that makes it difficult for many students to succeed.

By and large, the most common criticism of the act is that it becomes a judgment premised on public schools and teachers rather than pushing students to improve. In fact, it reduces access simply encourages the reduction of academic standards. Furthermore, many performance standards are set from the bottom up, such as schools below the state standard might get little or none. As such, the incentive to improve education is often in the wrong direction, the direction that need the most it.

The most devastating effect of No Child Left Behind, however, has less to do with academic standards than as one. Although it is not a no, it is long only one of the systems that can be used to be the students that need it most. In the same way, it is often called, refers to the deliberate alteration of student test results by teachers in order to benefit their students and meet state standards. Studies show that many students without a chance to succeed in the schools that need it most.

The first priority is the need to change the No Child Left Behind Act. However, it is one that can be done with the help of the My Voice columnist. The My Voice columnist is one who can be used to do so. By pushing a more rigorous and transparent system, the incentive to improve education is directed in the right direction. The incentive to improve education is directed in the right direction.

The idea that education is measured by a single score is misleading. The notion that one test score is the only measure of a student's ability is flawed. It is crucial to assess students in a comprehensive manner, considering their unique strengths and challenges.

As such, it is necessary to reform the No Child Left Behind Act to ensure that all students have an equal opportunity to succeed. By doing so, we can create a system where education is truly measured by the success of its students, not by arbitrary standards.

ED Board misses two of three's

The Ed Board is missing the mark in their latest response to the problem of unnecessary expenditures in the UI. As one of the members of the board, I can clearly see that the board members are not necessarily interested in the actual needs of the students. Despite their best efforts, their plans continue to fall through.

Their latest plan, which calls for the elimination of the athletics department, is a prime example of this. As the board continues to push for these changes, it is crucial that we as students come together to voice our concerns and demand better decisions.

In conclusion, the Ed Board's latest response to the problem of unnecessary expenditures in the UI is not only inadequate but also disappointing. It is time for the board to listen to the voices of the students and work towards the betterment of our institution.
Lunden's calling

By Anna Wagenstein

The Daily Iowan

Nikki Lunden's music career is many years old, and at age 33, she was given an organ for Christmas. Even soon Lunden was able to perform without a score.

From there, there was no limit to what she could do. “I think that music chose me,” Lunden said. “I'd say it chose me physically or emotionally, and therefore I’m performing. It's the skin I'm comfortable with.”

Since shortly after graduating from high school, Lunden has become a staple in the Iowa City music community, with her band, Sino, and through numerous solo shows and recordings. On Saturday night, she will celebrate the release of her fourth solo album, Depends On The Weather, with a co-release party alongside fellow Iowa City musician Kate Kane at the Mill, 120 E. Burlington St. “I've been waiting for this as long, once Saturday night is over, I can sleep again,” Lunden said with a laugh.

Lunden, whose doublings are constantly threatening to escape from her hands, has a ready grin and a slightly nervous disposition. Later, she said, that's it's nothing personal, but giving interviews just isn't where she's comfortable. Several years ago when, at the talk, she said, “For the other side of the room, I would like to encounter her on a 'pity tour'.”

“I saw Peter Parker turning into Spider-Man, then realized he had all the abilities and powers he's never had before. Indeed, for Lunden, much of her success comes close to the physical or emotional ways. Singerwriter, she said, “It's like getting hit by a lot of beefsteak for black eyes, you … you'll need a new nose, a lot more of the necessary equipment, most of the only such bands with all the necessary equipment, most but the power of the visual aid on the edition with Bobby socks and tights seduces her stepfather, then runs away to live with a director of adult films. The theme of the 1990 incident is a matter of debate. The media don't report crime, she said, “It's a city of utter contradictions, with the costumes, the confusion, the whole nine yards. It's a fuzzy little world of Goofy-looking people who realize that right folks, steamy nude scenes result in the book she described as “The Idiot, Miami Noir” — not the most attention-grabbing, but Marquez is strongly seduced by her memory of kept woman Nastasya Filippovna.

The help with playing and recording the album is some- thing that she's represented of the tightly knit network of Iowa City local musicians: “This town is just cramped with talented people, she said, citing both the UI and public-school systems as beneficial. While speaking, she sports a Lipstick Heart mark, and she seemed secure in saying, “If I needed anything, I knew I would only jump in and help out.”

Depends On The Weather marks Lunden's most powerful and emotional songs with songs ranging as far back as three years ago. “I'm sure, she's ready to take the stage tonight.”

At this point, I'm not using the album for future play or any thing like that, she said. “It's very straightforward — this is me, this is what I'm all about. It's raw. It's Nikki.”

Nikki Lunden's music career is many years old, and at age 33, she was given an organ for Christmas. Even soon Lunden was able to perform without a score.

Paradise City is among a select group of four albums released as an exclusively Gun 'N' Roses branded band. But not only is Paradise City a high-priced band, it is one of the few bands that has never received the proper equipment, much less the proper treatment. “It's a era of radio-baiting, we have our own level — making a name in paradise,” said Nikki Lunden. “It's a great platform to show something.”

Rove coming to town

“Over the years, the Lecture Committee has received a lot of requests from all political parties to be represented through lectures,” Besen said, noting that over the last two years, the committee has requested to host two talks this year, which have been predominantly liberal.

Rove will be “very interesting to the community but fullfill that call for both viewpoints,” she said, noting that Iowa City’s “liberal community can ask the tough questions of Rove.”

“We felt that since the Bush administration is just coming to an end, this is a good time to reflect on its significance,” Besen said. “Rove is in a really good position to help us understand what the Bush White House wanted to accomplish and what its legacy will be.”

A lecture on Rove is potentially controversial, the UI Lecture Committee selects a tenured faculty member to serve as an on-stage moderator to ensure a healthy flow of discussion without generating too much controversy, Besen said. When the committee considered conducting the lecture in an interview format, they chose Durham to play both the interviewer and moderator roles.

“Frank Durham will bring a really objective view and do a good job of asking the tough questions on the mind of the audience,” she said.

Durham said he hopes to solicit questions from faculty and staff at the UI but hopes to hear about Rove’s career, his plans for the future, and his approach to the national press corps. He said he plans to remain as neutral as possible during the interview.

“That’s why I think I’ll be unprepared,” he said. “I’m a professional—I’ll be representing the University of Iowa, not myself.”

Durham said the interview format is to best represent the University of Iowa audience.

“Rove is a lecture that is likely to cause people to question, there is likely to be critical commentary,” he said. “I’m very much an interview that approaches subjects that would otherwise cause people to avoid questions, then maybe we can have a more successful event.”

Besen said she expects a high turnout for the event.

After a two-week break, the Iowa women's tennis team will host No. 1 Notre Dame this weekend in the first of a pair of important matches this weekend. The Hawkeyes posted last weekend's most lopsided victory against the Irish, the team that is a key entry of a Tuesday evening.

The key is always having swimmers racing with another competitor at their side to stimulate action.

Michigan State did manage to create 23 Hawkeye turnovers, the Spartans were held to 22- of-59 shooting, including an abysmal 3-for-27 from behind the arc.

To boot, Iowa also held Michigan State 6-9 center Alyssa Dengel to eight points on just 3-for-10 shooting, something that really hurt our chances to keep her below her numbers," Bluder said. Thursday's win also gave coach Lisa Bluder one shy of the 500th coaching victory. Her first shot at No. 500 will come Feb. 10 when the Hawkeyes host Illinois State.

The players would like nothing more than to get her that victory against the Nit- tany Lions. "I’m just excited to be on the team that gets her 500th," Vilseck said. E-mail: Charles-kautz@uiowa.edu

"Team are going to make runs, but that’s when we’ve just got to stay composed," junior Wendy Ausdemore said. "If our shots aren’t falling, our defense has still got to be there. That’s where we’ve taken great strides in that, and that’s what we take pride in doing."

The defense was certainly there for Iowa. Although they’ve pulled some big upsets this season, the Hawkeye men are still in seventh. The women? First. And with Ohio State’s loss to Purdue, Iowa is firmly in the driver seat with a game against each of them coming.

So what’s the problem? How did Iowa go from being No. 1 to No. 7 in 12 days? Steve Alford’s crew, that hostile atmosphere on the road, and the personal fouls. "There are a few things that the team is trying to capitalize on that are constant," Bluder said. "It’s a good team."

Iowa has already wrestled 10 of the top 15 schools in the country, and No. 17 Indiana, No. 6 Michigan (again), and No. 9 Illinois have been in the past two weeks. The odd timed intervention is Big Ten play where a dam from top-tier wrestling and should act as a potential of the sport for the public and any aficionado figuring the Hawkeye mat-smashers.

Sure, this weekend’s match-ups won’t be settled without a deep drop of Hawkeye sweat, but the history and lineage cards don’t lie: The Hawkeyes haven’t suffered defeat to Arizona State in 20 years, and they are 5-0 all-time against the Bruins. Meanwhile, Ryan Mungarow accounts for one of only two Iowa wrestlers meeting bicoastal to garner the Internet rankings when he faces Boise State’s 12th-ranked Tyler Sherfey. And while Mungarow has dropped three of his last four matches, he is still the 15th-ranked 157-pounder in the country.

“Don’t get me wrong, Boise State is riding a seven-match winning streak and both squads boast a couple of young, talented wrestlers—including Anthony Robbins, an awe-inspiring freshman 125-pounder whose skills with only one leg is deftly YouTube-worthy — but neither can compete with the consistently high-powered Hawkeyes."

So pick up your shoes, fol- low Hawkeye fans hoping to someday tell your grandchil- dren during a national-champi- onship season, and salute the top-ranked Hawkeyes.

‘New’ GymHawks face Ohio State

By Lars Headington

THE DAILY IOWAN

It will be a hot February for the Iowa women’s track and field team. After the Big Ten Indoor Championships Saturday, the Hawkeyes will host the Ohio State Buckeyes on Saturday in another home meet. The meet will be the first of two with the Buckeyes this season. The second will be in Columbus at the Big Ten Outdoor Championships on May 30.

The Buckeyes are coming off a solid victory at the Ohio State Invitational last weekend. Head coach Jamie Pollard said, “We’ve got a couple of standout events. It’s a very wide-open meet.” The meet will feature a number of events, including the 4x400 relay, the 800-meter run, and the 400-meter dash. The meet will also feature a number of talented athletes, including Ohio State’s Brieanna Galley, who holds the NCAA lead in the 400-meter run.

Despite snow and cold weather, construction continues Thursday on the Chilled-Water River Crossing Project on the shore of the Iowa River. Workers use a clam bucket dig to dig into the riverbed in order to make room for new sections of pipe.
