Flag at half-staff

The Old Capitol flag will be flown at half-staff on Tuesday in honor of Professor Emeritus John Bennett, who died Sept. 1. Bennett worked in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication from 1978 until his retirement in July. It also flies in honor of Professor Arthur Miller, who died Aug. 19. Miller was a professor of political science.

Law going to dogs

Ivan, Coralville's police dog, locates drugs hidden in a locker during routine training on Sept. 3. When he's not on duty, the 2-year-old Belgian Malinois lives with his handler, Officer Chad Bender.

K-9 dogs come home and are part of a family.

By Ashton Shurson
THE DAILY IOWAN

Chad Bender and Kevin Berg wake up with their dogs, get ready for work with their dogs, and ultimately — and most importantly — take their dogs to work.

Bender and Berg are both officers in charge of K-9 units in local police forces. Bender works with Ivan, a Belgian Malinois, for the Coralville police, and Berg handles Naton, of the same breed, for the Iowa City police.

While the dogs spend a majority of their time doing routine drug searches or tracking people and items, K-9s sometimes work on high-profile cases, such as the recent search for former UI Professor Arthur Miller.

Naton searched Hickory Hill Park for two days for Miller, who was later found in the park. He had committed suicide.

And though both dogs are primarily used for police work, the two can be like regular pets when they get home after a day at the office.

"It's cool having a partner with you all the time," Bender said.

Bender, 38, applied to work with Coralville police's first dog a year ago. After working for the station for seven years, he said he was bored and ready for a change.

The Place to be

Second in a seven-part series

Every season, the Black and Gold faithful flock to Kinnick Stadium with beer, brats, football, and family, transforming the typically tranquil residential roads surrounding the stadium into raucous roosts. Beer-bong, pong, and flip-cup tips from drinking game experts.

By Bryce Bauer
THE DAILY IOWAN

On game day, ask the people around Melrose Place their strategies for drinking games.

Why? The Place, a short road off of Melrose Avenue, is amenable to the alcohol advocate, of course.

"Anywhere you can go and drop a beer [can] or kick, it is the place to be," UI student Alex Johnson said around the time he proved that very point.

A quarter hour before the Hawkeyes' contest against Florida International, Johnson stood at the intersection of the two Melroses, near the food stands, smoking a cigar and holding a mug that turns pink when filled with cold liquid — beer, in this case. He said he had 150 of the mugs — which read "Oktoberfest 2007" (their apparent reason for being) and "Advocate Good Samaritan Hospital," a Christian-affiliated facility near Chicago and the cups' source. They came by way of a friend's mother, who is a nurse, and are good conversation starters.

"If I were just holding a can, you wouldn't have come up to me," he said.

While the cigar certainly helped as well, he was right, although there is no lack of casual conversation among the partiers on Melrose Place. Most were generally jovial and eager to chat, especially when loosened by liquor and asked about the process by which they became that way.

Good information can be had. For example, a college-age student who identified himself as Tyler Mickelson was quick to share a beer-bong maintenance strategy.

"You rub the side of your nose and rub around the tip and you get rid of the foam," he said while standing with friends on the street in front of 5 Melrose Place.

Though Mickelson — wearing a black T-shirt imprinted with the text "You look like I need another beer" — noted the alcohol-acceleration apparatuses come in many shapes and sizes.

"The best is a five-person one," he said.

Meanwhile, on the lawn behind him — the one fading from grassy green to muddy mess — revelers were raging. People wearing the same colors as those of the Hawkeye-bedecked bus on which they were standing perfected their own beer-bong protocol. Next to

Event leaves some GOPers out

While one UI Republican made it to the convention, several others wanted to go, but couldn't.

By Shawn Gude
THE DAILY IOWAN

Last week's Republican Convention produced disparate reactions from UI Republicans.

For UI student Sarah Milani — who was set to go to St. Paul as a volunteer before Hurricane Gustav altered the GOP's convention schedule — it was one of disappointment.

"I was so excited," she said. "I'd been looking forward to it for like the whole year."

But Milani and two other UI students — Katherine Morrison and JJ Usedom — changed their plans on Aug. 31, the night before the convention. Republicans canceled the next day's major events, and Milani had school-related conflicts that prevented her from going later in the week.

UI student Greg Baker, the chairman of the Iowa Federation of College Republicans, had a slightly different perspective as an attendee, lauding the convention as a "great success."

He attended the convention as a guest of Iowa's delegation, a simple process compared to that of other potential attendees.

"They called me up, asked me if I wanted to go, and I said, 'Hell, yeah,'" he said.

For non-guests, it was relatively difficult to get the credentials necessary to volunteer at the convention because of the relatively small size of the Xcel Center, Baker said.

Eric Rossow of the UI College Republicans — who signed up in June to volunteer at the convention, only to be denied — attributed the difficult entry process to another factor.

Busted

Football is a game of numbers both inside and outside Kinnick Stadium. Inside, the Hawkeyes racked up 512 yards of offense and 46 points in their second game, tromping Florida International. Outside, revelers pocketed 78 alcohol and drug-related charges, totaling at least $15,700. But tailgaters weren't quite as offensive as the previous home game: From Aug. 29-31 police doled out $16,050 in tickets. Make sure to check out Monday's DI after every home game to make monetary cents of the weekend's blotter.

Trial reset in alleged kidnapping, sex abuse

The trial for a man accused of kidnapping and sexually abusing a 50-year-old woman was rescheduled.

— by Olivia Moran

Michah Matthews, 33, is set to go to trial on Dec. 8, rather than the anticipated date of Sept. 15.

According to online court records, Matthews was recently granted a second attorney. He is now represented by Iowa City attorneys Paul Miller and Davis Foster.

Matthews was charged in February with first-degree kidnapping, first-degree sexual abuse, and first-degree burglary.

On June 5, 2007, he allegedly entered a woman's home without permission and forced her at gunpoint to drive to a local bank and withdraw money. Once back at her residence, police said he "pistol-whipped" her across the face after she attempted to escape. He then allegedly sexually abused her where she fell.

First-degree kidnapping and first-degree sexual abuse are Class A felonies, each punishable by life in prison. First-degree burglary is a Class B felony, punishable by 25 years in prison.

Student accepts plea deal

A UI student who reportedly fled a robbery scene in February pleaded guilty to a lesser charge.

Michael Schroeder, 20, was originally charged with escape of a misdemeanor, a serious misdemeanor; he pleaded guilty last week to interference with official acts, a simple misdemeanor.

Police reported that Schroeder was receiving a PAULA citation on Feb. 28 when his friend, UI student Michael Fabinski, grabbed the officer's ticket book before their other friend, Michael Bakerdjis, pushed him. All three then fled the scene.

Online court records show that Schroeder will pay a $250 fine for the charge.

Fabinski was sentenced to two years' probation and 168 hours of community service and was ordered to pay a $625 fine. Bakerdjis was also ordered to pay a $625 fine and was sentenced to one year's probation and seven days in jail.

Prosecution wants slight delay in murder trial

Johnson County prosecutor Janet Lyness filed a motion Sept. 5 to reschedule the trial for Curtis Fry, a 21-year-old Wilton, Iowa, man charged with second-degree murder.

At a conference call, Lyness asked 6th District Judge Mitchell Turner to push Fry's trial to Nov. 17. His trial is scheduled for Nov. 3.

Lyness said the trial would conflict with Election Day, when she needs to be available at the Auditor's Office.

Fry's attorney, Peter Persaud, did not resist the motion.

Both attorneys agreed to keep the pretrial conference scheduled for Oct. 23.

Persaud told Turner he expects to finish most of the depositions by Sept. 16 and to expect a wave of motions in the near future.

Fry is being held at the Johnson County Jail on a $1 million cash-only bond.

Culver pushes for fed relief

Iowa Gov. Chet Culver reasserted his commitment to rebuild Iowa after this summer's destructive weather, outlining steps the state is taking to ensure those affected are adequately aided at a recent press conference.

"My administration is doing everything that we can possibly do under state law to quickly get money into Iowans' hands so that they can start rebuilding their lives," Culver said in a statement. "We've been vigilant about identifying damages and identifying federal funding to help in our recovery, and we'll soon see the results of our proactive efforts."

And, echoing elected officials around the state, he urged federal bureaucrats not to stymie the flow of needed money.

"Iowa has a plan. [Housing and Urban Development] has the money. Now, cut the red tape so Iowa can move forward," the governor said.

The state's plan — as outlined in a Sept. 5 press conference — includes using $85 million in federal HUD grants to help subsidize buyouts, fix houses affected by the floods, and finance anti-flood infrastructure updates.

Along with HUD grant money for small businesses rebuilding, the governor also pledged millions more for the state.

Culver also announced flood damage for public facilities had surpassed $800 million threshold. Thus, the federal government will finance 90 percent of the total, while the state will pay for the other 10 percent with funds Culver diverted from the state's appropriations.

Story time

The UI Libraries want to hear your stories from the Flood of 2008.

The library is teaming up with StoryCorps, a national project, to document local stories from this summer's devastating floods.

The project, titled "Under the Current: Collecting Stories from the Flood," is seeking 72 people from the Iowa City and Coralville area to be interviewed about their personal experiences. The deadline to sign up is Sept. 21.

The project is asking for those who volunteered during the flood or those who were directly affected by the floodwaters.

"This project is our thank-you to the community," said Kristi Bontrager, the UI Libraries public-relations coordinator.

The interviews will be conducted by StoryCorps staff and UI anthropology students. The interviews will be held Sept. 30 through Oct. 11 at the UI Main Library, as well as at the Iowa City and Coralville Public Libraries.

StoryCorps is one of the largest oral-history projects of its kind, according to the UI news release.

Those who would like to share their flood stories can call 335-5069 or visit the UI Libraries website.

Man charged with attempted murder

An Iowa City man has been arrested for allegedly trying to kill a property manager after being told to move from his residence.

Gregory Phillips, 54, 2401 Highway 6 E. Apt. 1609, was charged Sept. 4 with attempted murder and going armed with intent.

Iowa City police said that Phillips confronted his property manager with a pistol at the Dolphin Lake Point Enclave office, 2401 Highway 6 E., and allegedly told the manager that he was going to kill him and said "you are not going to make me move."

Reports said Phillips pulled the trigger, but the weapon did not fire. When the defendant attempted to chamber a round, the manager grabbed the pistol and struggled to gain control of the gun, police reported.

Police said that Phillips admitted to being upset about being forced to move from his apartment. He reportedly told authorities that he planned to kill the manager and himself to "make a statement."

The property manager had previously told the defendant that he had to move from the residence because of renovations, a report said. Phillips has lived in the apartment for 35 years.

As of Sunday evening, he was being held at the Johnson County jail on a $50,000 cash-only bond.

Attempted murder is a Class B felony punishable by up to 25 years in prison. Going armed with intent in a Class D felony punishable by up to five years in prison a fine up to $7,500.

Area woman faces forgery charges

A Coralville woman faces more than a dozen forgery charges after allegedly writing checks from another person's account.

Gina Mathes, 41, Coralville, was charged Sept. 4 with 13 counts of forgery.

Police said that Mathes presented the checks to several local businesses between May 30 and June 16. The checks presented to Tobacco Outlet, Pizza Hut, Yellow Cab, Jade Sisters, and Falbos Pizza totaled $410, police said.

The checks were written from a US Bank account, and the owner of the account was reportedly in the hospital on the dates when Mathes allegedly used the checks, a report said.

Authorities allege that Mathes admitted to writing and using the checks with a codefendant, Charlotte McKeone.

Forgery is a Class D felony, punishable by up to five years in prison and a fine up to $7,500.

"Flip cup is finesse," Reed, a UI student who refused to give his last name, said while taking a break from his alternating games of flip cup and beer pong with Busch Light and Keystone Light.

Most players, he said, are too nervous to adroitly upend their cup after emptying it of liquid.

"You got to take your time and go easy," he revealed.

And while the Place is a good place for the aspiring drinking-game athlete to head — invitations to play are frequent, a can of beer is often offered freely — it, like other areas where teeming masses team, is not without hazards.

Take UI student Johnson with his cigar and color-changing cup. He is apparently not the only one fond of kicking a can, a liberty that when exercised, often sends beads of beer flying toward spectators. Inevitably this aluminum can — or Champagne bottle, or any type of container, really — must also land, crushing, cracking, and just generally spraying

Berg, who had worked for the Iowa City police for almost 20 years, said he was looking for a new challenge and he loved dogs and how they are used in law enforcement.

Naton, a $10,000 dog from the Netherlands, arrived in Iowa City in February 2005, and Ivan, who is also from Europe, joined the Coralville force in August 2007.

Bender and Berg each trained with the dogs for five weeks — Bender in Michigan, Berg in Indiana — where they worked on obedience, tracking, drug detection, handler protection, apprehension, and article searches. Both dogs received a few months of training in Europe before coming to the U.S. Each officer also had to learn a new language — Dutch and Czech — to communicate with his dog.

Now, the policemen are required to complete 16 hours of training a month, which is often based on scenario exercises.

Ivan and Naton are trained to detect four main drugs and their derivatives: marijuana, methamphetamine, heroine, and cocaine.

Naton won an award for a drug bust in 2005. While searching luggage on a Greyhound bus early one December morning, Naton discovered a bag with 48 pounds of marijuana inside. He won the U.S. Police Canine Association Award for "detector case of the year" for this region.

Meanwhile, Ivan has helped locate robbers, including one who was facing terrorism charges in Georgia, Bender said.

Despite long days of routine drug searches and tracking cases, the two canines spend their free time at home with their officers and their families.

"He is the most devoted, loving, and attentive dog I've ever had," said Berg, who also has a yellow lab named Bubba. Naton is great once he gets to know a person, he said, and he's very loving with his family.

But Naton rarely leaves Berg's side.

"He is a big baby," said Teri Berg, Kevin Berg's wife. "He actually needs a lot more attention and pets than Bubba does."

Bender said Ivan is great around children — especially his 8-year-old daughter.

"It's just like having another kid," Bender said.

"Security has just become so high at the events, it's just difficult to get in ... It's not like you can just show up and get in," he said.

In addition, UI Republicans looking to go to St. Paul didn't have the same opportunity as six UI Democrats, who volunteered at their convention through the Washington Committee.

The highlight of the convention for Baker was the energetic Sept. 3 speech of Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin, the Republican vice-presidential nominee. For Palin, still new on the national political scene, it was a chance to introduce herself to viewers.

"She gave by far the best speech ... It was the first time, really, that I could sit here and see her speak and see what kind of a vice-presidential candidate we've got," Baker said. "She impressed me very much, and I think she impressed a lot of people in the media as well."

Baker was also impressed by former New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani's keynote speech, praising the former presidential candidate's attacks on Democratic presidential nominee Barack Obama. And he commended the authorities' handling of the thousands of protesters at throughout the week.

"I really felt sorry for [the police] and what they had to go through," the former UI College Republicans chairman said. "You don't know which ones are going to get out of control. You're looking out on thousands upon thousands of people, and it's not that easy ... I think they did a wonderful job."

A local chef gives a lesson in cuisine at the Field to Family Festival.

By Mary Harrington
THE DAILY IOWAN

While crowds of black-and-gold-clad football fans marched to Kinnick Stadium on the morning of Sept. 6, a more modest gathering of around 30 people had their eyes on one vegan chef's yellow produce and blackened pans at the Iowa City Farmers' Market.

The Seventh-Annual Field to Family Festival carried on through the weekend with the "Chef at the Market" cooking demonstration.

David Burt, executive chef and co-owner of the Red Avocado, 521 E. Washington St., gave a cooking demonstration to market visitors at an outdoor booth.

The chef showed what was possible in the kitchen with local shopping, purchasing all of his fresh ingredients that morning at the market.

"I always try for organic," he said. "But mostly, I just want the food that looks the best."

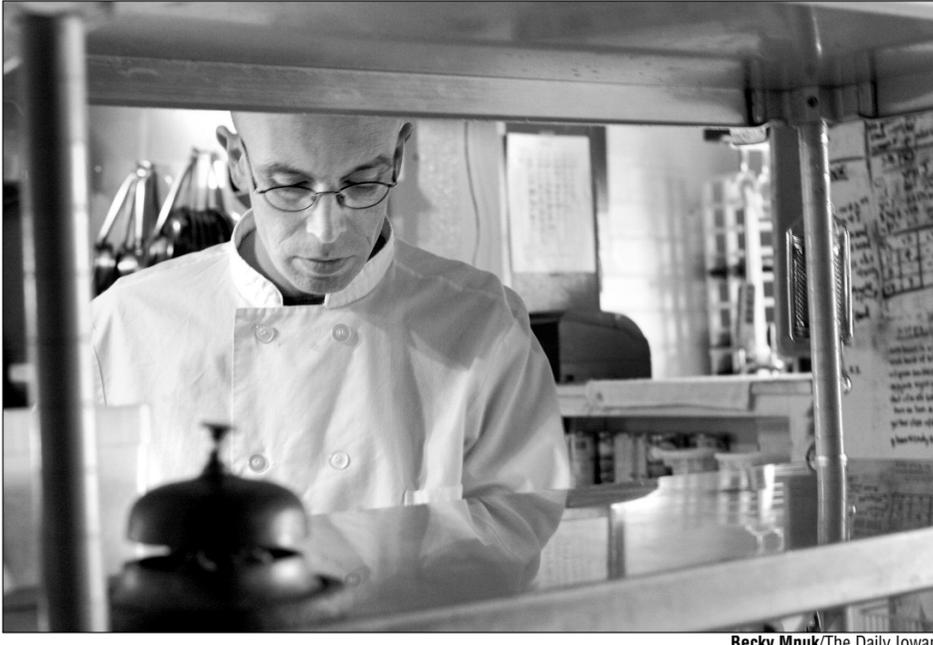

The market offered more than 60 vendors from around the area.

From his shopping there, Burt prepared an Indian dish of spiced yellow and green beans, a potato salad with blue Peruvian potatoes, and a dish of sautéed zucchini and peppers. His preparation seemed as natural as the ingredients going into the meals.

"Smell that," Burt said as he lifted the lid from a pan of green and yellow beans. "When the quality of smell starts to change, that's when you know it's done."

Burt has been serving organic vegan dishes at the Red Avocado for nine years now, though he has been cooking since high school.

"I started out washing dishes, and I realized kitchens are a place where I just feel comfortable," he said.

It is this kind of love for food that the local chef said is catching on throughout Iowa City and across the country. Several hundred people paid to participate in the festival's culinary walk — sampling food from various restaurants — which took place earlier in the week, despite rainy weather, said Sarah Ertz, a volunteer at the Johnson County Local Food Alliance.

For folks such as locals Betty Mitchell and Peggy Bothell, paying closer attention in recent years to what goes into their bodies — such as calories or cholesterol — has ignited an intense interest in locally grown foods.

For others, the economics and even politics involved in transporting meat and produce long distances has led them to such Iowa City outlets as the farmers' market.

And some, well, they just like the way the fresh food tastes.

"I like to support the local economy," Iowa City resident Jim Mitchell said. "Especially when it's quality food that tastes great anyway."

Whatever the reason, a love for local food and cuisine is attracting Iowa City residents to Field and Family activities throughout the week.

"It's an event to raise awareness," Ertz said, "But really, it's a celebration of what this area already has to offer."

Man involved in semi accident charged with OWI

A man involved in a semi-trailer truck accident last week now faces an OWI charge.

Clinton Hernandez, 23, Spring, Texas, was charged Sept. 3 with OWI after he allegedly drove his car eastbound in a westbound lane of Interstate 80, a quarter mile west of the 242 mile marker. Hernandez reportedly sideswiped two semis and hit another one head-on around 3 a.m., police reported.

Authorities said Hernandez smelled strongly of alcohol. The defendant reportedly admitted to having three to four drinks earlier in the day.

Hernandez refused a preliminary breath test and later refused to give blood or urine samples for chemical testing, police said.

The defendant was taken to the UI Hospitals and Clinics but was released shortly after. None of the other drivers involved in the accident were hurt.

First-offense OWI is a serious misdemeanor punishable by up to a year in jail and a fine up to $1,250.

Allen charged with OWI

A former Hawkeye football player — currently involved in a lawsuit — has been charged with OWI.

Antwan Allen, 25, 2510 Bartelt Road, was arrested Sept. 6 after police stopped him for erratic driving.

Police allege that when they approached the defendant, he had bloodshot, watery eyes and slurred speech. Allen reportedly failed field sobriety tests and registered a .185 blood-alcohol content.

First-offense OWI is a serious misdemeanor punishable by up to one year in jail and a fine up to $1,250.

Allen, a former Hawkeye cornerback, has faced trouble in the past. In October 2007, Allen was arrested for allegedly abusing his girlfriend, but the charge was later dismissed. A 2004 lawsuit, in which Allen allegedly injured another person, remains open.

Allen played for the Hawkeyes from 2002 to 2005, and according to sports statistics, was the only Hawkeye to ever start in four-consecutive January bowl games.

CR man gets 3rd OWI

A Cedar Rapids man received his third OWI over the weekend after police pulled him over for reportedly driving erratically.

Randy Michael, 20, of Cedar Rapids, was charged Sept. 6 with third-offense OWI and driving with a denied/revoked license.

A report said that police pulled Michael over for erratic driving at approximately 1 a.m. at the intersection of Melrose Avenue and Camp Cardinal Boulevard.

Authorities said the defendant had watery, red eyes and smelled of alcohol. Michael also showed signs of impairment and blew a .2 blood-alcohol level, reports show.

Police allege he later admitted to drinking.

Michael was convicted of his first OWI in December 2007 and his second OWI in July. Police reported that Michael's license was revoked from Feb. 6 to Feb. 5, 2010.

Third-offense OWI is a Class D felony punishable by up to five years in prison and a fine up to $9,375. Driving with a revoked or denied license is a serious misdemeanor punishable by up to one year in jail and a fine up to $1,000.

Student arrested after allegedly hitting officer

A UI student was arrested after he allegedly punched a police officer over the weekend.

Jeremy Graves, 19, of 1113 Slater, was charged Sept. 6 with public intoxication and interference with official acts.

Iowa City police reported that Graves ran from an officer and led him on a four-block foot chase between houses.

When the officer caught him, Graves reportedly resisted arrest. During the struggle, Graves allegedly punched the officer in the mouth, causing a small cut to the officer's bottom lip. He continued to resist and swing his fists before the officer shot him with his Taser, reports show.

Police allege that Graves later admitted to swinging at the officer and apologized for his actions.

Interference with official acts causing bodily injury is an aggravated misdemeanor punishable by up to two years in prison and a $6,250 fine. Public intoxication is a simple misdemeanor generally punishable by up to 30 days in jail and a fine up to $500.

2 female profs marry

CEDAR FALLS (AP) — Two female UNI professors flew to San Francisco and were legally married in a civil ceremony.

Rebecca Burkhardt, a professor of music, and Cynthia Goatley, a professor of theater, said they initially did not want to publicize their marriage, but they feel they can now deal with any disapproval they may face.

"Both Rebecca and I needed to make a public affirmation of our love, and a marriage ceremony does that," Goatley said. "We're both happy we did it, and we're now making sure that we have some legal rights in Iowa."

The two have been together for five years. Their marriage is not recognized in Iowa.

They both declared ownership on the house they now jointly own, and they are looking for ways to become full beneficiaries for each other should the other die. To have visitation rights in the hospital, they also must seek full medical power of attorney for each other.

"Those are the rights that married people have, so we think we deserve those just like any married couple," Burkhardt said. "Under current Iowa law, we do not have nor will we ever have the same survivorship rights as married couples."

The announcement of their marriage comes more than a year after 5th District Court Judge Robert Hanson struck down the state's ban on gay marriage. The move lasted a day, before Hansen stayed his ruling while it goes under appeal to the Iowa Supreme Court.

Only one gay couple, Sean Fritz and Tim McQuillan, managed to get married legally on Aug. 31, 2007. The Iowa Supreme Court is expected to hold oral arguments in the fall and could issue a decision next year.

Before the California wedding, Burkhardt and Goatley flew to Texas, where Burkhardt's father is an ordained Methodist minister. Her father performed a blessing but could not marry the two without risking losing his ministerial status.

Grain expert: Prices to be volatile

NASHUA, Iowa (AP) — Iowa's leading grain marketing specialist is more pessimistic about the state's corn and soybean production than the federal government after this summer's record flooding and a poor start to the growing season.

Chad Hart of Iowa State University said the days when farmers could predict the market are over, and he said to expect the current trend of volatile prices on the Chicago Board of Trade to continue.

The country's store of corn bushels is predicted to drop by 500 million this market year, and the projected soybean drop is predicted to be even more harsh — about 75 percent since the 2006-07 market year, or about 440 bushels.

Police actions against press were unwarranted, unconstitutional

In St. Paul, Minn., riot police detained and ticketed journalists who were covering a peaceful protest against the Republican Convention on the night of Sept. 4. The officers' actions against these reporters were a grossly outrageous violation of the most foundational and sacred of American values.

The First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution reads as follows: "Congress shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

That unqualified statement of idealistic principle was ratified and became law in 1791, but it seems that 217 years was not enough time for the authorities in St. Paul to get the message. Although the American press has long been one of the freest in the world, the events of Sept. 4 are an ominous indication that perhaps that is no longer the case.

The Minnesota Independent reported that Nancy Doyle Brown, a media-reform organizer from the Twin Cities Media Alliance who spoke at a press conference on the morning of Sept. 5, defended the rights of the reporters ticketed the night before.

Journalists have "been detained and arrested, subjected to raids, pepper-sprayed, and more simply for showing up to work," she said. "These have been dark days for press freedom in the U.S."

Among the journalists detained Sept. 4 were Christopher Patton, a member of the Daily Iowan Editorial Board, Matt Snyders, and Dean Treftz. Snyders and Treftz are both former Daily Iowan writers who were covering the convention for other outlets; both of them were wearing press credentials, enabling them to enter the convention center itself at the time the police detained them. All three of these reporters conducted themselves in a thoroughly professional manner and at no time did anything that could be reasonably construed as identifying them with the protesters they were observing.

There is no question that the police specifically intended to detain journalists.

Writing on a blog maintained by City Pages, a Twin Cities alternative weekly, Snyders described how a police officer responded upon seeing his press credentials.

"Well, I heard that press are going to jail tonight, anyway," Snyders reported the officer said. "So it doesn't matter."

Treftz, blogging as a Youth Vote '08 correspondent for UWire, also described what the police told him when he asked how many people were being arrested.

"You're not press," the officer said. "You're prisoners."

Yet another member of the press who ended up becoming a prisoner on the night of Sept. 4 was Art Hughes, a freelance writer and board member of the Minnesota Pro Chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists. Hughes had written a guest opinion in the St. Paul Pioneer Press decrying the police's treatment of journalists in St. Paul in the days before his own arrest.

"[The police] have the choice of whether they're portrayed as brutish thugs trying to squelch the rights of citizens or as protectors of public safety tolerant of the First Amendment they're sworn to uphold," he wrote.

Unfortunately, the authorities made the wrong choice. Rather than simply acting to keep the crowd of protesters from disrupting the convention or damaging any property, the police choose to act aggressively to break up the demonstration. And rather than allowing the journalists observing the unfolding events from the protest's periphery to leave once the decision had been made to arrest all of its participants, the police instead elected to forcibly detain them as well, indiscriminately using pepper spray against those who had the misfortune of crossing paths with some of the more trigger-happy officers.

On Sept. 4, the police in St. Paul ceased being the public-safety officers they were supposed to be and became the sort of brutish thugs who harass and intimidate journalists simply trying to do their jobs. If it's against the law for journalists to observe the police's interactions with protesters, even those who are protesting without a permit to do so, then there is no one to watch the watchers. And history shows that no government can be trusted with such unaccountable power. Thus, this brazen assault on America's most basic freedoms must not go unchallenged.

Lost art

I love sending mail. I do, and I have vehemently defended the practice in an age of technology. It's easy, (forget about the penny stamp increase people, seriously) cheap to do, and a whole lot more exciting to receive than a block of text on a computer screen. It's also about the gamble. Will or will not the post office deliver my mail in a timely way, and will it get there in whole or dismembered? It's better than the roulette table, though I've been wondering, lately, if the odds aren't a little worse.

See, I don't think I'm a particularly lucky person, and when things go wrong, I'm keen on calling myself a moron or blaming the incident on some personal, ill-formed superstition.

"While I was wearing the white shirt again?! It's cursed. It's cursed!" And then the shirt moves to Goodwill. But lately, I'm pretty sure the mail is rigged against me. This summer, I mailed a book to my cousin. A month later I got an envelope from the post office. Inside was a tiny scrap of paper, part of my return address on the package.

Along with it, something like, "It appears your mail was damaged in processing. This is all we have left. Please fill out the form enclosed so we can pretend to look for it."

It appears my mail was damaged? Then, over Labor Day weekend I needed to overnight a key to my office that I left town with in my purse, that my senior Metro editor needed for his weekend meeting, and that my boss said — as he placed it in my hand — to "never, never, never" lose.

No big deal, said I. The post office has overnight service.

I stopped at two post offices off the interstate. The first, in Dike, Iowa, closed from noon to 1 p.m. Since it was only 12:30, I forced my friends to drive another 20 minutes and stop again. The office 30 miles away, of course, closed from 1 p.m. to 2:30.

Fort Dodge was our last option. See, there's a deadline you have to meet to overnight mail, and we were getting close to it. Panting, I ran to the door of the downtown office.

It had closed. Next was a failed stop at Hy-Vee, where the guy at the mini-P.O. got as far as to ring me up before his manager walked over, frowning, and said that they were too small an office to offer overnight.

Next was the new office, as far away from Hy-Vee as it could be and still be in Fort Dodge, I'm sure. But I finally got that package in the mail. Here comes the sigh of relief —

The post office lost it. Yeah, it was gone. My co-worker checked his mail, I went to the office downtown, the worker at the desk called the post master, the post master said he'd "seen nothing like it" before.

It had disappeared. "If it turns up," the guy at the counter offered hopefully, "we can refund you $12.60."

Only if it turns up? I went about my week, knowing, dreading the day my boss would ask for the key, and I would have to shrug and say, "The post office lost it." And then it reappeared, just floated out of a bin somewhere.

And an ecstatic me waited in line for half an hour to get my $13 refunded. The guy at the counter took the package and my receipt.

"Do you have the white slip?" he said.

"Which white slip?" "The one that went to the addressee."

Said addressee, Danny, who I love dearly, once lost a check I wrote him not once, but twice, and then after cashing it found the other in his wallet (of all places), and asked if he could cash it, too.

I suspected Danny had lost it, and I told the postal worker that.

"Then I can't refund your money," he said. "Or else you could both try to come in and get refunds."

For $13? Really? The government is worried about $13?

"But it's lost," I said.

"You can come back if you find it."

It was sort of like gambling away my rent money and finding out the nice casino loan shark would let me keep my legs. ■

Palin grossly unqualified

In watching the Democratic and Republican Conventions, I discovered an interesting difference in the two. The Democratic speakers spoke of the issues and their plans to heal the woes of this country. They praised John McCain as the true American hero he is and demonstrated the high regard in which they hold him. Their only criticism: his stance on the issues and his continued support of the failed Bush polices of the last eight years.

The Republican speakers, including the nominee for vice president, did not mention the issues but spent their time in personal attacks on Barack Obama. They ridiculed him, poked fun at him, and twisted his words in attempt to belittle him, all while they continued to pound the pity pot for John McCain.

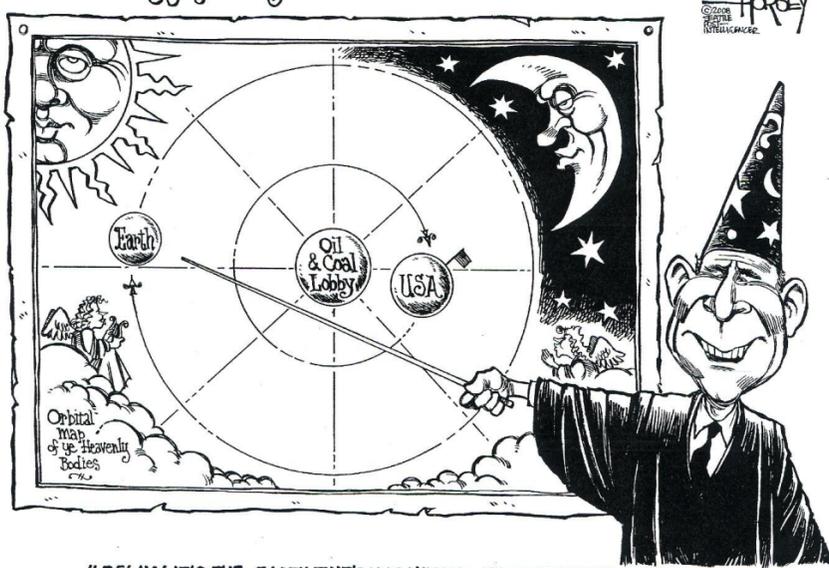

At least McCain rose above those who spoke before him and did not indulge in personal rancor. Sen. McCain did take a couple of jabs at Sen. Obama, but they were not in a make-fun of, ridicule vain. He did, though, do a little creative interpretation of Obama's tax plan and formula for curing the economic woes of the nation. McCain, like the other speakers, did not mention the issues, but dwelt on shaking up Washington. We need to shake up more than just Washington; we need to shake up the nation.

It's too bad John McCain had no control over the vicious rancor of the other convention speakers. Their attempts at standup comedy demeaned the convention.

Then there was Cindy McCain's assessment of the Republican vice president pick: a hockey mom, moose-hunting, salmon-fishing, and pistol-packing mother of five. I have nothing against hockey moms, moose hunting, salmon fishing, gun advocates, or mothers. But if that is Gov. Palin's résumé for VP, a heart beat away from the presidency, then thanks but no thanks.

Bibles are books, too

A perennial — and politically potent — argument made by religious conservatives is that secular humanists and activist judges have banished religion from public schools. True, the U.S. Supreme Court rightly has banned official prayers from the classroom, but it hasn't prohibited student religious clubs from meeting on school property on the same basis as other clubs. Unfortunately, some school districts continue to give the religious right ammunition by discriminating against Bible study groups.

That, say some students at Esperanza High School in Anaheim, is what school officials did when the students tried to organize a Bible club. A lawsuit filed in federal court alleges that school officials told organizers of the club that they would have to study the sacred texts of all major religions if they studied the Bible. Otherwise the club couldn't meet on campus or be listed in the school's yearbook and on its website. Last week, a federal judge issued a temporary restraining order against the Placentia-Yorba Linda Unified School District on the assumption that the students likely would prevail at trial.

It's not surprising that school boards, which are notoriously skittish, would be wary of the controversy that might attend the recognition of even a voluntary, after-hours religious group. Lawyers for the club concede, moreover, that members will discuss hot-button issues such as "human sexuality [and] human-rights issues, including the intrinsic value of human life."

But the notion that school property is a religion-free zone is a misreading of the law. As the First Amendment Center points out in "A Teacher's Guide to Religion in the Public Schools" — easily available on the Internet — Congress has spoken on this issue: "The Equal Access Act passed by Congress in 1981 ensures that students in secondary schools may form religious clubs, including Bible clubs, if the school allows other 'non-curriculum-related groups.'" The law was upheld by the Supreme Court in 1990.

Under the law, schools may bar religious clubs if they prohibit all after-school clubs, a policy that has been employed by schools that oppose the establishment of Gay-Straight Alliance groups. The Placentia-Yorba Linda district argued that it had excluded non-curricular clubs for decades, but District Judge Cormac Carney noted that Esperanza recognizes clubs — such as a student Red Cross — that aren't related to academics. (The district says the Red Cross is linked to the school's health curriculum.)

Rather than wrangle over legalities, the district should honor both the letter and the spirit of the Equal Access Act and allow the Bible club — and other voluntary student groups — to meet on school property outside of class.

Delving into dysfunction

Iowa City-based writer Bart Yates explores the dynamics of music and family in his novel The Distance Between Us.

By Jake Jensen
THE DAILY IOWAN

For his latest novel, Iowa City resident Bart Yates departed a bit from his previous works.

His last two protagonists have been young, gay men, but in The Distance Between Us, the main character is female. And straight. And 71 years old.

"I'm drawn to older women [as inspiration]," said Yates, who will read from The Distance Between Us at 7 p.m. today at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. "A lot of women become interesting as they get older. They're strong; they almost come into their power. This character is in her 70s and doesn't take much from people. She's like women I've known."

The septuagenarian character Yates speaks of is Hester Parker, a former pianist forced to retire because of an injury. Now teaching piano lessons, she suffers further loss when she becomes embedded in a nasty divorce from her adulterous husband of 50 years. As she hits rock bottom, she rents out her attic to a 20-year-old man and their close friendship is what

Yates says "pulls her back into the world."

Yates describes himself as being "really into character more than plot," and The Distance Between Us is evidence of that. As with his two other novels, it's told in first person. "Virtuosos are always fascinating people," he said. "Complicated, edgy people make the best characters. I'm drawn to strong narrative voices. My humor tends to be on the dark side. I'm most drawn to that in others."

Although it centers on a new kind of protagonist, The Distance Between Us — which Yates describes as "black comedy or gallows humor" — still deals with two main themes in Yates' writing — family and music.

"It's all about dysfunctional families and the dynamics in them," he said. "It's a story about how you learn to forgive and get past the anger and damage in your own family. There's a way outside of the cycle."

Citing music and writing as his two loves, Yates, 45, combined his lifelong passions into one career. After getting an undergraduate degree from Drake University, Yates attended Boston University for a master's. His writing career started with short stories and poetry, but he moved on to novels after taking a course in the Iowa Summer Writing Festival.

Musically, Yates teaches private lessons in clarinet, saxophone, and bass. He also plays clarinet in the "chronically unemployed" (according to his website) jazz duo Nica's Dream.

Despite creating such complicated family dynamics in his writing, Yates is glad he's nothing like his characters.

"My family is normal by comparison," he said. "Thank God we're nothing like my books."

Nothing screams, "I refuse to believe it's autumn" like sinking your chops into a juicy, messy slice of melon. But if you're anything like most college students, it's really hard to know how to pick out a killer piece of fruit. Here are a few tips (some learned by trial-and-fail, some bestowed by grandparents) for selecting a premium cantaloupe. Because cantaloupes are picked while they're still unripe, you have to hunt down a few key elements when you're standing in the store:

- Tap the melon with the palm of your hand. You should hear a hollow sound. It should smell a bit fruity, but not overly sweet.
- Pick a cantaloupe that feels heavy given its size.
- Make sure it doesn't have any bruises or massive soft spots (these will make for a gamy melon), but a few small soft spots are perfect.
- The rind should be yellow or cream colored — not green.
- The place where the stem was attached should be somewhat indented with no stem remaining.
- Don't refrigerate your cantaloupe until you cut it up. The longer you wait to slice it open, the softer the inside will become. Beware: If you wait more than five days, you've overshot your melon.

Art school shows off first exhibit

By Claire Lekwa
THE DAILY IOWAN

The banging and whirring of hammers and power tools reverberate through the lofty Menards building. It doesn't necessarily seem like an atypical scene, but, in fact, it is. Here, the aisles of home-improvement items have been replaced by long rows of cubicle-style classrooms, the makeshift home of the UI School of Art and Art History after the summer flood.

The current ruckus comes from a group of graduate students hanging paintings and prints in preparation for the first exhibit at the new location.

The Incoming M.A. Graduate Student Exhibition will run from today through Sept. 18 in a special room of gallery space at the Studio Arts Building, located at 1375 Highway 1 W. In its second year of existence, the show features the multifaceted work of around 25 incoming studio-art graduate students, representing all the art departments. And as the first pieces to decorate the vast, sterile whiteness of the transformed space, the artwork gives it a more familiar feeling of home.

"It's a great way to introduce the grad students to the community," said Nicole Pietrantoni, a second-year printmaking graduate student who participated in the exhibit last year.

Pietrantoni, who is teaching classes this semester, said most of her students are reacting well to the transition to the new site so far. "They want to make art, and they want to come out here no matter what," she said. "The show must go on."

However, she did admit that transportation was a barrier for some, especially those who rely on buses.

The removed location not only affects the art students, but also the number of people who will filter through the featured exhibits. In past years, the exhibitions were displayed in Art Building West.

"That building was really well-traveled," said Cate Boarini, an art project assistant. "We need to make sure that we publicize even more so that we get people out here to see these students' work."

The school hopes to utilize the university e-mail system to inform students and faculty about the exhibits, she said.

The new location also lacks the ideal gallery setting that the space in Art Building West had. Boarini said lighting is the biggest issue, because harsh fluorescent overheads are the only available option. The brightness makes some of the exhibit's art forms, such as one video projection piece, more difficult to see.

"In the other gallery, you could manipulate all the lights, every individual bulb," she said. However, despite the setbacks, the graduate students' overall attitude is one of enthusiasm. For the optimistic, the move even holds the prospect for more synergy among the departments.

"Everyone's together, and we're still this big community," intermedia graduate student Courtney Cable said. "It's inconvenient because it's so far off campus, but that being aside, it's a great bed for collaboration. It's a great opportunity."

Dean touts effort

'If we win Iowa this time, we will win the election,' Howard Dean says.

By Shawn Gude
THE DAILY IOWAN

When former Vermont Gov. Howard Dean put the 50-state strategy into place after taking over as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, there was no shortage of grumbling.

But Dean stuck with the strategy, putting volunteers and resources in each state, and he now touts the positive effect he says it will have on the upcoming presidential election.

"States such as Indiana are in play that haven't been in play for a long time," he said after a voter-registration rally on Sept. 5 in Iowa City. He also mentioned Colorado, Nevada, Virginia, and North Carolina as newly up for grabs.

And, he contends that the appeal of Democratic presidential nominee Barack Obama reinforces the effectiveness of that all-encompassing approach.

"Obviously, we have a candidate who appeals to a wide cross section of America, including Republicans and independents. That helps," Dean said. "But we also have an infrastructure in the Democratic Party now in every single state. So whenever we have a good candidate, we have a chance of winning now."

Shortly after his speech on the UI's T. Anne Cleary Walkway, Dean offered his thoughts on McCain's vice-presidential pick, Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin.

"I think she'll help stimulate the base for McCain, but I think she'll turn off a lot of Republican women voters who are pro-choice," Dean said, admitting it was "hard to tell" what kind of effect the pick will have on the race.

The chairman's address to approximately 100 focused heavily on generational comparisons and the effect today's youth could have on the political process.

Dean spoke somewhat nostalgically of the change the baby-boomer generation created — the civil-rights movement, ending the Vietnam War, fighting for equality for women and gays and lesbians. However, he emphasized the ways in which the boomers fell short.

"The mistake that we made was that after we changed America so that everybody could be included in the American dream, we decided it was OK for us to sit back ... What you need to do is learn from that mistake," the former Vermont governor said. "George Bush and Dick Cheney would not be in the White House today if we had stayed involved in politics."

Dean said in order to win Iowa and elect Obama as president, the youth must get involved. He urged young attendees to knock on at least 25 doors a minimum of three times.

"You actually have an enormous amount of power, more so than Rush Limbaugh, or Bill O'Reilly, or all those famous people who are on television," Dean said. "When you are actually talking with someone and connecting with another human being and there's a relationship that you build, they're much more likely to listen to you than to believe anybody on television."

UI student Jaimie Hoskins said Dean's emphasis on the efficacy of young people in the political process is spoke to her.

"He's really on our level — all about the students," she said. "I left the speech feeling really motivated again about the Obama campaign."

Dean also compared this election with the 1960 election, in which John F. Kennedy, a U.S. senator at the time, bested then-Vice President Richard Nixon. Obama — like Kennedy — represents the future, Dean said, while McCain and Nixon both represent the past.

And in order to secure that positive future — one in which Dean said Obama will rebuild America's "high moral authority in the world" and change the politics of squabbling — the chairman said he will need the Hawkeye State.

"If we win Iowa this time, we will win the election," Dean said.

2 area men face 3 charges

Two North Liberty men were arrested after they allegedly tried to purchase drugs with counterfeit money.

James Augustine, 19, and Harold Hunter, 65 were charged Sept. 4 with money laundering, conspiracy to commit a felony, and four counts of forgery.

After taking possession of counterfeit money, police said the two defendants tried to purchase drugs, but the dealer found out the money was fake.

The two men allegedly conspired to launder the money at Iowa City businesses, and reportedly gained legitimate money in the processes. According to a report, Augustine and Hunter purchased marijuana with the legitimate money.

Three of the four known laundering locations accepted the counterfeit money, but one kept the bill and reported the fake money to law enforcement, police said.

Augustine and Hunter later admitted to the actions, authorities said.

Money laundering is a Class D felony punishable by up to five years in prison. Conspiracy to commit a felony and forgery are both Class D felonies and are punishable by up to five years in prison and a fine up to $7,500.

Bears defense turns tables on Colts

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Chicago Bears found their winning formula still works.

Rookie running back Matt Forte ran for 123 yards and one touchdown in his NFL debut, and Kyle Orton committed no turnovers as the Bears surprised the Indianapolis Colts, 29-13, at the first regular-season game played at Lucas Oil Stadium.

Two-time league MVP Peyton Manning didn't look like himself in his first game action since having surgery to remove an infected bursa sac from his left knee in mid-July.

And the loss snapped the Colts 21-game winning streak in September and October, the longest streak since the Green Bay Packers won 23-straight pre-November games from 1928-32.

Patriots QB Brady injured

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. (AP) — Reigning NFL MVP Tom Brady left Sunday's game against Kansas City after being hit on the left leg, depriving the New England Patriots of the quarterback who last season led them to a 16-0 regular season and their fourth Super Bowl in eight years.

Brady
quarterback

Brady, who has started 128-consecutive games, went to the turf clutching his left knee midway through the first quarter when he was hit in the pocket by Chiefs' safety Bernard Pollard. After being tended to on the field, he walked off, limping, between two trainers.

Brady, 31, went to the locker room and was not seen again on the sideline as backup Matt Cassel led the Patriots to a 17-10 victory. The two-time Super Bowl MVP was not available for comment after the game, and coach Bill Belichick said he had nothing to add to the in-game announcement that it was a knee injury. "They're looking at him, doing some tests on him, so I don't have any information there," the coach said, cracking a smile as he added, "doubt anybody's interested."

The Chiefs also lost their starting quarterback when Brodie Croyle was sacked in the third quarter. The team said he had a bruised right shoulder; he was replaced by Damon Huard.

Quarterback Ricky Stanzi rushes for three yards to the Florida International 38 in the first quarter on Sept. 6. Stanzi ran for 30 yards on five carries in his first career start as Iowa's quarterback in the Hawkeyes' 42-0 win over the Golden Panthers.

In his first career start at quarterback, Ricky Stanzi shines.

By Brendan Stiles
THE DAILY IOWAN

Ricky Stanzi was told by the coaching staff on Wednesday that he would get the start against Florida International, as the team attempts to solve its quarterback situation.

He hasn't officially won the starting job yet, but Stanzi made a pretty compelling argument in his first career start, Iowa's 42-0 victory over the Golden Panthers on Sept. 6.

"I was nervous coming into the game," Stanzi said. "After a couple of plays, the nerves were gone, so it was easy to relax and just play the game from there."

As teammate Jake Christensen did against Maine, Stanzi led the Hawkeyes down the field to two touchdowns on the team's first two possessions. When the contest was complete, the Mentor, Ohio, native

The Iowa Hawkeyes make it a long afternoon for Florida International in a 42-0 victory.

By Brendan Stiles
THE DAILY IOWAN

With two games under their belt, the Iowa Hawkeyes have done just about what was expected of them up to this point.

After a 46-3 win on Aug. 30 against Maine, Iowa showed no hints of complacency when it laid a 42-0 massacre on Florida International in Kinnick Stadium on Sept. 6.

In a somewhat surprising move, sophomore Ricky Stanzi got the quarterback starting nod for Iowa and made an enormous statement, throwing for 162 yards and three touchdowns on 8-of-10 passing. The highlight of his day came when he dialed up fellow Ohio native Derrell Johnson-Koulianos for a 59-yard touchdown strike on the team's second drive of the afternoon.

Junior Jake Christensen got his opportunity to perform as well, going 8-of-12 for 99 yards and one touchdown pass coming off the bench for the first time since the Hawkeyes' 26-24 Alamo Bowl loss in 2006 to Texas.

On offense, Iowa piled up 512 yards, its highest output since a 34-24 loss to Minnesota on Nov. 18, 2006.

At the moment, the battle between Stanzi and Christensen remains ongoing.

"It's tough, but it's a good problem," Ferentz said. "We have two guys who are competing hard and doing everything they can to give themselves a chance. That's a good thing."

After Iowa had built a quick 14-0 lead in the first quarter, running back Shonn Greene, who finished with 130 rushing yards on 13 carries, suffered his first career fumble, setting up Florida International at the Iowa 39. But three plays later, the Hawkeyes created a turnover of their own when linebacker A.J. Edds came up with an interception and returned it to the Florida International 31 yard line.

"I was dropping into coverage, and I looked back and saw the quarterback. There was some pressure on him," Edds said. "I think he kind of threw it up for grabs a little bit, and at that point, it's anybody's ball, so I Texas."

Hawks' balancing act

Iowa struck early and often using a myriad of weapons.

By Alex Johnson
THE DAILY IOWAN

Kirk Ferentz might as well be Libra. When things are going well for Iowa's head coach, all it takes to level the scales is a little run here and a little pass there — he's the master of balance, offensive balance.

Against Florida International, Ferentz's offense was able to do whatever it pleased. Iowa had nine rushes gaining at least 10 yards, six for at least 15, three for at least 20, and one for more than 30 (35).

"I'm a little bit of a relic I guess," Ferentz said. "I still think running the football helps you win football games. If we can do that, it's going to make us a better team as the year goes on."

Ferentz-football resurgence the story

ALEX JOHNSON

The quarterback saga continues, but the return to Ferentz football should be getting attention.

Everybody wants to talk about the quarterback. It's a hot topic for good reasons. Sophomore Ricky Stanzi looked fabulous — calm and cool, calling audibles and faking Christensen looked like a good backup. But Christensen has started 13 games, Stanzi just got his first. Afterward, the incumbent's expression seemingly said his time was over at the helm of Iowa's offense: "I didn't want to talk to [the media]," Christensen said, looking frustrated by endless "controversy" questions. "But that's something coach preaches, we talk to you guys good or bad, that's something we live by." Later, the younger QB spoke as if the conversation was stale.

"The questions are, you know, they're questions," Stanzi said. "Whatever, it's not really a big deal to me, you know, it comes with it."

went up for it. I was just thinking, 'Get the ball and get up field as far as I could,' and because there was a receiver close."

Edds wasn't the only member of the defense to have a big day for Iowa. The Hawkeyes were led by linebacker Jeremih Hunter with a team-high 10 tackles, defensive lineman Karl Klug, who finished with two of Iowa's six sacks during the second half, and defensive tackle Adrian Clayborn, who had six tackles and a sack.

"We just came ready to play," Clayborn said. "That was our emphasis all week during practice, getting to the quarterback.

"It feels good to get a goose egg. You always want to get one of those."

Overall, the effort definitely pleased Ferentz, and said he hopes the squad will build on before next week's contest with Iowa State, which will also have a 2-0 record coming in.

"I think we showed up ready to play," Ferentz said. "We still have a lot of work to do certainly, probably not different from last week, but we're doing some good things, and it will be good to see how we can continue to improve."

Stanzi looks sharp in start

had eight completions on 14 attempts.

Of the eight passes caught for a total of 162 yards, three were touchdowns, all to different receivers.

Head coach Kirk Ferentz hasn't anointed Stanzi the starter for Saturday's game against Iowa State, nor will he at his weekly press conference on Tuesday, but he did give a reason for handing Stanzi the nod.

"It's just a matter of we hadn't seen Rick start," Ferentz said. "We wanted to give him a start and see how he would react to it and give us more information to go off of."

The first of these came with Iowa up 7-0 in the first quarter. On the Hawkeyes' second drive, Stanzi got a Florida International corner to bite on a pump-fake and floated a 59-yard touchdown pass to sophomore wide receiver Derrell Johnson-Koulianos.

"Beautiful ball," Johnson-Koulianos said. "We ran it in practice all week, and it looked the same way in practice as it did in the game, so we executed."

The two other scores came in the second quarter. Stanzi's second touchdown pass came on a tight end screen to senior Brandon Myers, who got in the end zone from 23 yards out and put Iowa up 28-0.

"That was a great play by Brandon," Stanzi said. "He made a great catch and at the goal line, there were about four or five [Hawkeyes] ready to block for him, including the receivers. It was a great play, and it worked out exactly how we planned it."

Then right before the half, Stanzi found sophomore wide receiver Colin Sandeman on an 8-yard completion, his first career touchdown reception as a Hawkeye.

It was an outing that left his teammates talking afterwards.

"I think he did a good job," running back Shonn Greene said. "He managed the game very well, he led the team down the field to score. I think he did a good job."

As for whether he'll get the start against the Iowa State Cyclones, who are also undefeated, Stanzi is leaving that up to the coaching staff.

And he doesn't feel he now has an edge on Christensen.

"I don't know if there's any upper hand or anything," Stanzi said. "Coach will make the decisions."

Hawk balance nearly perfect

Pushing the Golden Panthers around on the ground made aerial work a breeze.

"It's unbelievable," sophomore Colin Sandeman said. "There are so many guys looking to tackle Shonn on every play that it just opens up the passing game, and we're confident with coach [Erik] Campbell's ability to teach us and help us know the offense so that we can get open with whatever route we run."

Sandeman was the only Hawkeye to score twice against Florida International, catching one touchdown pass from both sophomore starter Ricky Stanzi and junior Jake Christensen. The pair of touchdowns were the first and second of Sandeman's career — and also one illustration of how well the Hawkeyes spread the ball on offense.

Eight players had at least one reception, seven had at least seven, and only two — sophomore Derrell Johnson-Koulianos and senior Brandon Myers — had three, tops on the team. On the ground, nine players had at least one rush attempt, while only junior Shonn Greene and freshman Jewell Hampton had as many as 10 carries.

"We're deep, and it's good," Johnson-Koulianos said. "We have a lot of different weapons on offense this year, and we feel good about that. That's just an indication that we spread the ball around quite a bit today."

With 58 touches spread among a total of 16 players for 512 yards, the Hawkeyes showed a balanced attack able to move the ball without much trouble. Hunger will keep them on the upswing.

Despite rushing for 130 yards on just 13 tries, Greene hardly celebrated his performance after the win.

"It was all right," he said. "I didn't really do much but fumble."

Stanzi, asked many times if he thought he played well, wouldn't say much.

"Not bad," he said. "Like I said, we have to look at the film. That's the only way to tell, you know, from the mistakes that we made what we can correct and what we can do better next week."

If that means finding 10 receivers and giving 10 players a rushing attempt, that would only put a bigger onus on opposing defenses. Either way, as difficult as it may seem to spectators, there is still room for improvement, not just room to repeat.

has a way of drawing attention. But this is the last I'll say on the position battle: From the bird's-eye view, Stanzi looks like a Big Ten starting quarterback, and Christensen is probably set to be one of the conference's best No. 2's not named Terrelle Pryor.

Iowa top two gunslingers threw for 261 yards and four touchdowns, completing 16 of 22 attempts. A stellar 241 rushing yards combined to give the Hawkeyes their first 500-yard offensive performance since 2006.

So far in 2008, Iowa is playing Kirk-Ferentz football, which means that offensive balance — so far, Iowa is averaging 484.5 yards per game, with 241.5 passing and 243 rushing. It also means defense — zero touchdowns, three points allowed, and 219 yards per game allowed (plus seven sacks and five forced turnovers). And it means executing special teams — averaging 27.3 and 11.9 yards per kick and punt return, allowing just 17.8

and seven and netting 34 yards per punt versus allowing opponents 27.3.

Much as in 2002 when the Hawkeyes avoided Ohio State — the national champions — Iowa has all the tools — and the absence of the Buckeyes on the schedule — to play in January.

I'm optimistic when I say Iowa could win nine games, but that's only if it improves on the weekend.</

Volleyball takes 2 of 3

The Iowa volleyball team evened its record at 3-3 after a picking up a pair of victories at the Pioneer Classic in Denver over the weekend.

Iowa started the tournament strong with a 3-1 defeat of Tennessee on Sept. 5 (25-18, 27-25, 22-25, and 25-22).

Outside hitter Catharine Smale led the attack with 21 kills and 13 digs, while Megan Schipper slammed home 20 kills. Setter Kiley Fister dished out 48 assists, and Emily Hiza had 17 digs at the libero position.

Host-school Denver swept Iowa on Sept. 6, 3-0 (25-22, 25-23, and 25-21). Laura Kremer had 10 kills to lead Iowa, and Fister had 22 assists and eight digs.

In the finale on the evening of Sept. 6, Iowa took on Virginia in a match that went the distance. The Cavaliers took the first two sets, 25-15 and 25-20, before the Hawkeyes soared back to win three straight and take the game 3-2.

Kremer and Schipper both collected 14 kills, followed by Smale with 12. Fister had 49 assists, and Hiza had 21 digs. Kremer, Fister, and Hiza were all named to the all-tournament team.

Soccer drops two

The California sunshine proved to be too much for the Iowa soccer team, as the Hawkeyes were defeated 1-0 in both of their games during the Nike Pepperdine Challenge in Malibu this past weekend. The losses dropped Iowa to 2-3 on the season.

Pepperdine hit the Hawkeyes hard on Sept. 5, but Iowa was able to stay afloat long enough to force the game into overtime. However, the Waves capsized the Hawkeyes' hopes when Amanda Rupp ripped the ball past freshman goalkeeper Emily Moran, clinching Pepperdine's first win of the season.

With little time to mope or enjoy the bright lights of Hollywood, Iowa was back on the field to play San Diego on Sunday.

Despite Iowa's ferocity, the Toreros had a spark of magic late in the first half when freshman Stephanie Ochs sank a spectacular goal from 20 yards away. Later, Iowa senior Kelsey Shaw headed a last-second shot toward San Diego's goal, only to have Toreros goalkeeper Courtney Parsons make an impeccable save that sealed the Hawkeyes' fate.

For the second-straight week, the Hawkeyes played like a team determined, as they blew Florida International out of Kinnick Stadium with a 42-0 victory on Sept. 6. The win puts Iowa at 2-0 as it heads into its game with Iowa State next week in Kinnick.

BY THE NUMBERS

Sophomore quarterback Ricky Stanzi threw three touchdowns, one a 59-yard bomb to sophomore Derrell Johnson-Koulianos.

Iowa's 42-0 win over Florida International proved time of possession unimportant, as the Hawkeyes only had the ball for 2:32 longer than the Golden Panthers.

The Hawkeyes totaled more than 500 total yards of offense against Florida International, the first such offensive outburst since 2006 against Minnesota.

Iowa put points on the scoreboard in impressively rapid fashion on Sept. 6, needing just 2:35 to push Shonn Greene past the goal line on a 11-yard touchdown run.

PRIME PLAYS

Returning the opening kickoff for 35 yards, sophomore Derrell Johnson-Koulianos gave Iowa half the field to score on its opening drive.

On the fourth play of Iowa's second drive, sophomore quarterback Ricky Stanzi connected with Johnson-Koulianos on a 59-yard pass that put the Hawkeyes up 14-0.

With 29 seconds left in the opening quarter, sophomore Paki O'Meara took off for a 17-yard touchdown run to give the Hawkeyes a 21-point cushion and solidified Iowa's offensive dominance early.

IOWA GAME BALL

RICKY STANZI

Stanzi delivered a strong performance in his first career start at Kinnick Stadium, connecting on 8-of-10 passes for 162 yards and three touchdowns through the air.

FLORIDA INTERNATIONAL

CARLOS MUNERA

Although Florida International only managed 73 yards of total offense, Carlos Munera was solid in special-team play, averaging 42 yards on five punts, with his longest sailing 52 yards.

THUMBS UP

The Iowa offense — It totaled 512 offensive yards on 66 plays, averaging 7.8 yards per play and going 6-for-11 on third-down conversion situations.

THUMBS DOWN

Turnovers — While junior running back Shonn Greene fumbled midway through the first quarter, the Hawkeyes had one other turnover, an interception tossed by Marvin McNutt.

LOOK AHEAD

Now sitting at 2-0, the Hawkeyes seek revenge against Iowa State on Sept. 13 with the Cy-Hawk Trophy on the line in Kinnick Stadium. Last season in Ames, a last-second field goal lifted the Cyclones to a stunning 15-13 upset over the Hawkeyes. Like Iowa, Iowa State enters the contest with a 2-0 record, coming off a 48-28 victory over Kent State.

Field hockey splits 2 again

The Hawkeyes beat American, then fell to Duke this past weekend.

Ryan Formanek/The Daily Iowan

Iowa senior Caroline Blaum charges amid Duke players to defend Iowa's goal on Sunday. After taking the lead at 1-0 in the first half, the No. 5 Hawkeyes lost to Duke, 2-1.

By Jeff Pawola
THE DAILY IOWAN

After beating No. 15 American on Sept. 5, 4-1, the No. 5 Iowa field-hockey team lost in its second home game Sunday against No. 12 Duke, 2-1.

American and Duke accounted for the Hawkeyes' third- and fourth-consecutive game against opponents ranked in the top 15; the Hawks split against No. 1 North Carolina and No. 3 Wake Forest last week.

Senior forward Caitlin McCurdy started the Hawkeyes on Sunday, giving the Hawkeyes a 1-0 lead on an unassisted goal when she stole the ball inside the circle from a Duke defender.

"I didn't really have any other options, so I just swung on it, and luckily, it went in," she said.

McCurdy's goal gave the Hawkeyes a 1-0 halftime lead in a half that was dominated by the Black and Gold with five shots compared with the Blue Devils' two.

The second half was a different story, with Duke scoring on two goals by sophomore forward Susan Ferger. Her first came amid controversy only six minutes into the half, when it appeared the ball

'I didn't really have any other options, so I just swung on it, and luckily, it went in.'

— Caitlin McCurdy, senior was controlled by her body following a deflection.

"I thought [Ferguson] hit it with her body and then her leg," said Iowa coach Tracey Griesbaum. "I was just asking for [the officials] to talk about if [the ball] hit the Duke player's body."

Following the goal, Duke picked up the intensity and continued to pressure Iowa's defense, forcing the Hawks to call a time-out with only 10 minutes remaining. The Blue Devils took advantage of the time-out and scored within minutes of returning to the field.

"We were trying to have our team play a little bit more of a small game and just take one play at a time and one line at a time, and they didn't do that," Griesbaum said about the Hawkeyes' talk during the time-out.

Iowa's second loss of the season is very comparable with its first against Wake Forest last week. Against the Demost Deacons, Iowa started strong, building a 2-0 first half lead before collapsing in the second half and giving up three goals.

Not only are their losses comparable, but their two victories also have similarities. In their first victory against North Carolina, Iowa came from behind after going down two goals in the first half. In the match against American, the Hawks gave up the first goal and followed up with four straight to take a convincing victory.

The win over American was the 500th in program history and moved Griesbaum within one of 100 career victories as Iowa's head coach. That accomplishment will be put on hold until next weekend, when the Hawkeyes will try to regroup out West against Stanford and Pacific.

With that in mind, they will try to not make too much of Sunday's loss to the Blue Devils.

"It's never a good thing to not be able to finish off the weekend like you'd planned on," McCurdy said. "Better happening now than later on in the season."

“I think the government will end up having to put in far more money than it is planning right now [given all the problems facing housing], but the important thing is [Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac] have been taken over by the government. That means there will be less panic in financial markets.”

— Sung Won Sohn, an economics professor at California State University Channel Islands. The Bush administration seized control of the troubled mortgage giants on Sunday.

— by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you expand too quickly or take on too much you will fall short of your goals, get stressed out, and cause problems in your personal and professional life. Don’t fall victim to temptation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take time to smell the roses, enjoy the people and places you are fond of, and do something special just for yourself. Don’t scrimp when it comes to your quality of life and your health and well-being.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Extend your weekend, if possible, and plan a special day. A great idea can turn into a lucrative venture if you talk to someone who has a little experience and an interest in what you want to do. Try something new.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don’t let anyone persuade you to take over her or his duties. A problem at home will leave you concerned about one of your relationships. Don’t assume anything. Instead, stay calm, and wait to see how things unfold.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Rely on a friend for backup if you start to fall behind. A partnership looks very promising. Speak from the heart, and don’t take no for an answer. Your generosity and kindness will be hard to resist.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emotional matters will get the better of you if you don’t learn to say no. Someone will push you to the limit if you let her or him. Don’t allow your love for someone to cost you financially. Get tough.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Confusion may set in if you let your heart rule your head. Back up, and regain your position by recognizing what is best for you and your family. Take a conservative approach, and you will avoid a loss.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don’t make financial changes or promises that leave you short. Be careful about spending and stick to the budget you set for yourself. Take responsibility for your actions and you will find a solution to any problem that arises.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Put your ideas on paper and proceed. Once you convince people in the know to take a look at your plan, you can move ahead safely. Keep things small and you will impress people willing to contribute financial assistance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don’t give in to someone putting pressure on you. Love can cause you to make foolish mistakes. Don’t lose sight of what you have and who continually takes from you. You may have to make some changes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Put your heart and soul into looking over your life financially, medically and legally. Once you have paid back what’s owed or at least have a plan, the rest will be easy. A creative idea will help you bring in some extra cash.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don’t let a partner talk you out of doing something you believe in. A deal may be on the line; if you waffle it will be withdrawn. Don’t let uncertainty on someone else’s part alter your way of thinking. Stay in control.

Torres, Timberlake make splash at NY Fashion Week

NEW YORK (AP) — The stars descended on New York Fashion Week on Sunday, with Olympian Dara Torres hitting the catwalk, Justin Timberlake putting on a runway show, and the likes of Jennifer Lopez and Uma Thurman lining the front rows.

The high wattage came on a day of birthday parties for DKNY and Calvin Klein, which was celebrating 40 years in business with a star-studded party Sunday night, competing with Timberlake’s presentation of his William Rast collection.

Torres strutted the runway holding her 2-year-old daughter Tessa at the Charles Nolan show, wearing an indigo and white-striped silk jersey tank with navy swim shorts.

Backstage, she confessed that she worried about stumbling on the runway like Carrie Bradshaw did in “Sex and the City.” But the 41-year-old silver medalist kept up with the 20-somethings: “There was a girl [modeling] who said that she was really nervous, and I said, ‘Swimming in the Olympics is much more nerve-wracking.’”

Lopez, Thurman, Eva Longoria, and Venus Williams were at Diane von Furstenberg’s spring preview along with Anderson Cooper and Lorraine Bracco, while Winona Ryder and Christina Ricci were both in the front row for Donna Karan’s 20th anniversary collection.
