Tuition, drinking head U-ISG candidates’ debate

By MICHELE DARNIO

With vibrant T-shirts, button-eyed, spirit tows, and eneytic chants, the first of these three debates among U-Student Government candidates seemed like a pep rally.

But the three presidential hopefuls — Mike Curtis, Emily Graves, and Ryan Kopf — remained serious Thursday night while presenting these parties’ platforms, which they say are feasible.

To begin the Daily Iowan and Daily Iowan TV-sponsored debate, the candidates presented the issues from their platforms they felt were the most important.

“It’s all about making UI-ISG all about you,” said Graves. Your presidential redmine: “We want to give students a voice.”

“I think there’s a lot of stress and anxiety in students who are working full time and going to school full time,” said Jennifer Delgado.

40 years eying the effect of booze

A former UI interim president and provost has more than 40 years of research into binge drinking.

By TESSA MILENK

UI Professor Emeritus Peter Nathan just can’t stop thinking about alcohol.

But the former interim UI provsident and provost isn’t thinking about it in the way most students do on the weekends.

He has spent more than 40 years conducting research, and he recently was appointed to the newly formed 23-person UI Alcohol Steering Committee made up of UI officials, students, and community members to battle binge drinking.

He said focusing on curbing excessive drinking without controlling it is like cycling through a tunnel.

Indeed one of Nathan’s studies published in 2001, 70 percent of UI students qualify as binge drinkers and 90 percent drink.

Another of Nathan’s studies published in 2001, 70 percent of UI students qualify as binge drinkers and 90 percent drink.

More UI employees and their family members are seeking counseling from the UI Employee Assistance Program — and officials expect the number to climb.

In March, the program’s officials hired a temporary therapist to accommodate the growing number of people asking for appointments. For this past year, they created another counseling line in the University Capital Centre, in addition to the offices in the UI Hospitals and Clinics and University Services Building.

The Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission gave the recommendation for a local neighborhood to be a historic district.

By CLARK CAHILL

The interaction of Line and Fairchild Streets is shown on Thursday evening. Members of the Planning and Zoning Commission met on Thursday night to discuss making the North Side neighborhood into a historic district.

The Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission voted unanimously to recommend a proposal for the neighborhood to be designated as such a distric on Thursday night. The North Side Neighborhood Association presented the proposal to the city’s Historic Preservation Commission—a group of 10 community members who conduct studies for the identification and designation of historic districts. The commission was responsible for deciding whether the neighborhood has historical significance, the city Historic Preservation planner Christine Kopf said. Lindsey Huntting Eubanks, the head of the Historic Preservation Commission, said, the members felt the community needs to be handled safely.

The final step for the North Side Neighborhood would be getting approval from the Iowa City Council. If it’s a neighborhood designated as part of a historic district, it has two primary impacts for the area. The Historic Preservation Commission must approve all future proposals for major projects and exterior renovations of residences in the designated and also focuses on the upkeep of each establishment. "It basically requires that people don’t let their buildings fall to the ground," North Side Neighborhood Association member Tim Portman said. If the neighborhood becomes a historic district, it doesn’t close off the neighborhood to future projects.

Between 1984 and 2006, the commission reviewed 475 building projects, Portman said. The commission turned down 16 requests, but eight of those residents found an alternative solution to their proposal.

Some neighborhood members said Thursday they are worried about the expenses involved with the upkeep of their property. "There is a large area of small to a large number of different types of properties," neighborhood resident Walter Kopf said. "It makes it difficult to maintain some properties, and I think some will never get fixed because it isn’t practical."

performers, includes Daniel Briggs, Bill Nace, Peaking Lights, Andes and Nika Roza Danilova. The show is part of this year's Mission Creek Festival.

Saturday's performance will be No Age's first appearance at the Mission Creek Festival and the first show in Iowa City. According to Mission Creek Festival founder Andre Perry, booking No Age was one of the last decisions, the band's distinct guitar sound caught his attention.

No Age is also involved in the All-Age Movement Project. The national organization is based in San Francisco and promotes youth involvement in art events in various communities. Although No Age may have numerous peers who aspire to produce the band's plans don't take a break from their music either. In the upcoming months, the band is hoping to work on the festival circuit before heading back on tour to work on a new album.

When he visits Strasbourg, France, this week to participate in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization’s 60th anniversary bash, President Obama will be reflecting the majority opinion of the United States and its European allies. He will have the opportunity to celebrate an alliance that his country sustained for seven decades, and to demonstrate his administration’s commitment to the security of our friends and allies. Yet, President Obama appears content to let Kim Jong-il that the missile is for peaceful purposes only. If the U.S. responds to North Korea’s actions. Not only could it adverse- ly affect Japan or South Korea, but it could also define our foreign policy for the next four years. Will President Obama’s willingness to trust Kim Jong-il’s word be viewed as an act of war necessitating an immediate response. The Obama administration will have to consider the consequences of a reaction from the United States. Granted, unless the United States sustains the pretense of a worthy mission. Although some people have sex with a large number of different partners, most say that whether they are straight, gay, or lesbian, many sexual partners one has doesn’t matter much to one’s self-image. Gay marriage is the best possible solution to the issue of marriage rights for a meaningful and enduring change. The difference between 1949 and 2009 demonstrates a remarkable transformation. The 20th century was defined by two world wars, the Cold War and the fear that spreading by Russia, the United States abandoned its role as a protector to its European allies and committed itself to NATO. The defense of NATO in 1949 remains a simple example of enlightened self-interest. Obama hails results of G20 summit compromise

By Jennifer Lover

LONDON — At his summit with Chinese President Hu Jintao on Monday, President Obama attempted to persuade foreign counter- parts that the United States was a peaceful and lavish spending to boost economic growth. In doing so, he achieved in finding common ground. His commitment and effort contributed to his desire to pursue options that would resolve the financial crisis and reverse dire circumstances or even prevent a deeper recession.

Despite the challenges, Obama said at a news conference after the meeting that he was encouraged by the progress made during the summit. He said he expected the leaders to continue working together to address global economic challenges.

Obama also emphasized the importance of international cooperation in tackling issues such as climate change, nuclear proliferation, and terrorism. He stressed the need for nations to work together to address these challenges and promote a more secure and stable world.

Still, he remained committed to what he wanted from allies on the global economic crisis. He hoped that he could help direct international financial resources to those in need and that their support would be forthcoming.

The new U.S. president also recognized that some of the officials he met during the summit had agreed to work together to address the crisis, including efforts to increase trade and investment and to provide assistance to countries in need.

Obama’s actions in the run-up to the summit were designed to prepare for the meeting and to ensure that he had a clear understanding of the issues at hand. He met with leaders from around the globe to discuss the economic crisis and to forge a collective response.

He also sought to engage members of the G20 in a spirit of mutual respect and collaboration. He recognized the importance of building trust and confidence among nations and of working together to address the challenges faced by the global economy.

The president’s efforts were aimed at helping to stabilize the economy and to provide assistance to those in need. He sought to ensure that the international community would support these efforts and that the United States would work closely with its allies to address the global economic crisis.

The UI’s Delta Sigma Theta emphasizes its endurance by celebrating its 90th anniversary this weekend.

By ASHLEY HAUGO

Courageous trailblazers. For Quinnetta Claytor, these two words define her Delta Sigma Theta sorority, nearly 100 of whom will descend upon the UI campus this weekend to celebrate the 90th anniversary of the university’s chapter.

“We have earned a lot of mileage — in terms of the severity and America,” Claytor said.

The anniversary shows how much historical significance the University of Iowa has in connection with the African-American culture.

With only four current members, the predominately black sorority may not have a big presence on the UI campus, but it has definitely left its mark.

“Four is a number that’s nothing new,” member Karisha Stubbs said. “Every day is an historical day.”

Upon the chapter’s charter in 1919, the eight members shared a home at 942 Iowa Ave., known as “Federation Home,” with another black women at the UI.

During that time, the residence halls were closed to minority students, so the Iowa Federation of Colored Women’s Clubs purchased the house with funds from a statewide fundraising campaign.

While the security maintained the residence for part two years, the house remained open for the other students until 1950, when the UI residence halls opened to blacks.

Today, UI’s Delta Sigma Theta is still without a home, but that does not mean it is without an enduring foundation.

“We strive to pack people we know are leaders and willing to work,” says Tyna Price, the sorority’s advisor. “That’s part of how we can keep going.”

Price, an active participant since her initiation in 1973, noted that the number of members in the sorority have fluctuated between nearly 30 people to a lone student some years.

Membership aside, the group continues to maintain its commitment to scholarship, sisterhood, and service through a strong support network, sorority members said.

“The loan back means she’s holding me. She has my back,” Claytor explains as she queues up with her sorority sisters to participate in the upcoming Delta Sigma Theta’s “Exactly” campaign.

The finding adds to concern about America’s social landscape has undergone great transformations, but Delta Sigma Theta continues to blaze ahead.

“We’ve come a long way, but we have so much further to go,” Stubbs, a UI junior, said, her usual smile replaced with a more edified grin.

With a definitive nod of agreement, Claytor affirmed the assessment. “Exactly.”

Pennsylvania mother has been charged with giving her 3-year-old daughter drugs and alcohol in the woman’s boyfriend could impregnate the girl with her browsing, police said Thursday.

Shana Brown, 32, is no longer able to have children but wanted to have a baby with her current boyfriend, Shane Calloway, said the union police Detective Donald Grissel. The pair decided to drug the 9-year-old with 40, could have sex with her, he said.

ROVERS SPLIT TWO MEETINGS

Los Angeles—DelMar Dollmann thought his coach's reported imbalance in auset at Arizona was an April Fool's prank. However, The Associated Press confirmed Friday that Floyd decided to stay at Iowa for the remaining four games after Tuesday's game.

"It came as a shock because we had our broadcast team at night before, and then we saw coach on ESPN," Dollmann said. "I thought it was a big shock. A lot of people will be talking about him here at the end of the day, but as the head coach, we would have talked to him about our meetings.

Floyd, who told Garrett he was upset about the way Iowa was playing the Buffalo Bills, had told the team to rest and talked to other teams.

Floyd has three years remaining on his contract, and if he won't talk about that, then we might as well move on," Dollmann said. "Hopefully, they'll add a year or two. That would be great."

ultimately fell short.
"We showed them that we had the doubles cracks to hang in with the any team in the nation," Devor said. "You can hang in with them or you can be right there with anybody."

Houghton shares in Devor's attitude in the dual season as Iowa's head coach.
Houghton is an expert on the Big Ten tennis and recognizes the challenges the Fighting Illini and the Hoosiers will have.

"Illinois is probably a notch below Ohio State but not by much," Houghton said. "They are a top-10 type team."

Nash and Houghton are preparing the Hawkeyes to host a meet in the domin-

As Jenifer Simbhudas, last year's fifth all-around finish and uncharacteristic slip from the uneven bars is a thing of the past. Instead she is focused on the now, and the possibility that this could be the final meet of her gymnastics career. "I try not to think about it," Simbhudas said. "They are a lot of good competitors coming in, some who have already competed with us so it's definitely in the back of my mind. But I want a mindset of 'I'm at home and I'm competing'."

Competing in her third season, Simbhudas hopes to finally qualify for the NCAA championships, whether with the team or individually. How-

Hansbrough's shot

By AARON BEARD

DETROIT — Tyler Hansbrough didn't dwell on the prospect to lead North Carolina to another national championship. He tried to ignore the expectations to raise his level of play despite being last season's national Player of the Year.

"I feel like there's a lot of pressure to perform this year, but it really doesn't affect me," Hansbrough said. "I don't think people would say it would be a failure if we didn't win a national championship," he said. "It would be a failure to me, but I don't want to put that on other people."

Hansbrough never wanted to dwell on the fame, but last season was also a game at Miami in which he knocked out of his eye in a tus- sle under the basket. There was also a game at Indiana where he set numerous records yet still couldn't help his team.

"Someone does things at a certain level, we're reminded, we kind of take him for granted," Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun said. "And that happens at every level of sports. You go up and hear Pavorotti sing, and he's wonderful. You go and hear him sing, and you think that happens to players, too."

But we're not losing his importance," Wright said. "He's just done it the way he knows how to do it."

The University of Iowadapsible2009 - Iowa City, Iowa - Friday, April 3, 2009

"That's how he plays," Wright said of the Year awards.

"I'm not sure he's ever received as much criticism as he has had this year," said the Year awards.
