Lawmakers approve flood bonds

Over the weekend, lawmakers passed a bill giving the state Board of Regents the power to issue $100 million in bonds to help with flood recovery.

By SHAWN GUDE
shawn-gude@uiowa.edu

Students will likely see a tuition increase akin to last year's 4.2 percent hike, Regent Robert Downer said Sunday night.

"I am not excited about going back to the days of double-digit percentage tuition increases such as we had at the beginning of this decade," he said. "My general feeling is that we're about maxed out on tuition."

His comments were in reaction to the fiscal 2010 state education budget, which the Iowa Legislature completed early Sunday morning.

In a budget year with few winners, college students have made out relatively well.

While various departments and programs across the state are being forced to work with thousands — or millions — of fewer funding dollars, the state Board of Regents won't see a significant slash to its budget.

UI Student Government President Mike Currie and Vice President JD Moran shake hands after being sworn in during the UISG inauguration at Kinnick Stadium on Sunday. The two will take the place of former President Maison Bleam and former Vice President Bridget Szeluga.

The UI Student Government inauguration ceremony makes Mike Currie's 2009-10 administration official.

By MICHELE DANNO

Forty-ninth UI Student Government President Mike Currie said on Sunday his administration is committed to accomplishing its 11 platform goals over the next year.

"Student government gets a lot of criticism for what it is and what we actually do," he said in his inaugural address. "According to some, we're all résumé-packing opportunists who are only in it for ourselves and our own self-interest. But that's OK, let the talkers talk — that's what they do best. The Student Government I know is full of doers, risk-takers, movers, and shakers."

Currie gave his speech before his fellow party members, guests, and some UI administrators in the press box at Kinnick Stadium Sunday. He and Vice President JD Moran were sworn into office, along with their 37 senators.

Moran noted the hard work of all the senators, both new and returning, and said he looks forward to working with the new administration.

"I cannot thank these senators that ran on our ticket enough," Moran said. "I'm truly excited for the Go Party that all but two of our senators were elected, and I welcome the senators from Your Party. We have a lot of work to do, and I can't wait to get started."

Iowa City's next city manager search could come without much of a price tag.

The Iowa City City Council paid a recruitment service more than $30,000 over nine months to find former City Manager Michael Lombardo. On April 17, the council unanimously voted to fire Lombardo.

Same-sex marriage finally arrives in Iowa

Same-sex couples across Iowa — roughly 5,800 living in the state — can apply for marriage licenses today. Three weeks ago, the state Supreme Court decided a ban on same-sex marriage was unconstitutional.

By ZHI XIONG
zhi-xiong@uiowa.edu

"We'll be at the recorder's office at 10:30 a.m.," said UI graduate student Lindsey Quinn, who plans to officially marry her wife, Cybil Wriedt. "Starting Thursday, we'll be the Quinn-Wriedts."

On top of objections from the political and moral arenas, the decision raises several issues based on logistics and technical details:

• Johnson County is home to more than 300 same-sex couples, according to recent census data. It is the highest percentage compared with all households in the state. Five judges handle marriage applications, which are filed in the county recorder's office.

• The Iowa judicial system, suffering furlough Fridays and magistrate reapportionment because of budget woes, could take an estimated 55,000 same-sex couples from other states seeking marriage licenses in Iowa. However, Iowa could gain $5.3 million from sales-tax revenue and income each year by allowing gay marriage, according to a UCLA study.

• The state's new marriage forms will say "Party A" and "Party B" rather than "bride" and "groom." The Johnson County recorder's website has not yet changed its traditional wording but notes the forms issued today use the gender-neutral terms.

• Same-sex couples can seek a waiver so they can become legally married the same day they apply for the license. A judicial district judge decides whether to abandon the three-day waiting period.

Based on the Iowa Code, a judge can grant waivers in cases of emergency or extraordinary circumstances. Frequently a waiver helps couples who made costly wedding arrangements without knowing about the three-day wait period, said Sac County Magistrate Warren Bush.

The waiting period was also a corrective to hotheaded decisions.

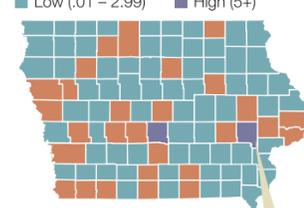

"It was to give people time to come to their senses," Bush said.

Across Iowa

Johnson County has more same-sex couple households than most of the other counties in Iowa.

of the Spanish/Portuguese department, said in an e-mail.

Though the course won't be for strict interpreting, Lewis said, it will prepare students for a variety of other professions.

He said many large companies publish some form of in-house communication in both English and Spanish, creating a need for students with good linguistics skills in the business world.

Lewis said the department is also working with the medical school to develop a medical Spanish course, and he would also like to eventually create a law Spanish course. But the law project is on hold until the UI is able to hire faculty members with the necessary skills to teach the course.

Roughly 350 UI undergraduates major in Spanish and Portuguese, and around half have a second major in a different area, Lewis said.

He said that unlike several years ago, when many undergraduates in a language department went on to teach, the vast majority of current students plan to go into careers outside of education.

But not everyone is uninterested in teaching.

UI junior Vince Vanderlaan, a Japanese major, said he plans to earn a Ph.D. and eventually teach at the college level.

"Most people in the Asian department stay in that department, but most end up taking a second language," Vanderlaan said.

Students striving to become bilingual are the building blocks for globalization, Niño-Murcia said.

"Internationalization begins with learning languages other than English," she said. "By learning the language of other groups on Earth and then first-hand experiencing their cultures, students get exposed to different literature and different ways of being in the world."

Attitudes toward foreign-language education are changing, she said, because countries are no longer isolated and multilingualism is a global necessity.

Lewis agreed, saying students also find value in the development of their communication skills in writing, speaking, and constructing logical arguments.

"I can see a definite development, which I consider to be a good development and progress away from a traditional curriculum of Spanish," he said. "It takes students a little further than they would have been able to years ago."

N. Liberty man charged with OWI, endangerment

Authorities arrested a North Liberty man for allegedly driving drunk April 24 with young children in the car.

Darrell Golden, 25, was charged with OWI and endangerment without injury.

According to North Liberty police, officers stopped Golden for an equipment violation. Golden smelled strongly of alcohol and had bloodshot, watery eyes. He admitted to drinking and failed field sobriety tests, with a Datamaster breath test score of .127, police said.

Golden's 1-year-old daughter was in a car seat in the back seat of the car and his 5-year-old son and another 10-year-old child were unbuckled in the back seat, police reports show.

OWI is a serious misdemeanor, punishable by up to one year in jail or a maximum fine of $1,250. Endangerment without injury is an aggravated misdemeanor, punishable by up to two years in prison and a fine of up to $6,250.

Davenport man charged with pimping

Authorities arrested a Davenport man April 1 as part of a prostitution investigation.

Samuel Scott, 47, was charged with pimping.

According to the Johnson County Sheriff's Office, an undercover officer contacted a subject who had placed an advertisement on the Internet.

Scott allegedly brought a woman to an agreed upon location where she planned on engaging in a sexual act in exchange for money, deputies said.

The woman told police Scott was her driver and he worked for the same person as she did. She said would give Scott all the money and he would decide how much was returned to her, police reports show.

Authorities said Scott admitted he was hired to drive the woman to the hotel and provide protection for her if needed in exchange for money.

Pimping is a Class D felony, punishable by up to five years in prison and a maximum fine of $6,250.

Pharmacy, Public Health receive grants

The Colleges of Pharmacy and Public Health received $8.5 million in grants to research the effectiveness of patient blood-pressure control through physician-pharmacist collaborations.

According to a UI news release, the National Heart, Lung and Blood

Institute of the National Institutes of Health awarded $3.7 million to the College of Public Health and $4.8 million to the College of Pharmacy.

The study will concentrate on finding out why patients - particularly minorities - cannot control their blood pressure, in hopes of finding a more effective synergic model.

The study will be conducted by Barry Carter - a UI professor of pharmacy practice and science - and William Clarke - a UI professor of biostatistics - who will solicit 1,200 participants from 27 physician offices nationwide.

According to the Mayo Foundation for Medical Education and Research, sufferers of high-blood pressure can be more susceptible to brain, nerve, and eye damage, and heart and kidney damage, disease, or failure.

Bolkcom lauds passing 'difficult budget'

EDUCATION

early Sunday morning, will offset the vast majority of the roughly 12 percent cut the regents would have been forced to absorb sans the cash influx.

The regents must now go through their own budget process, culminating in the release of their final budget set to come out in June. While not yet complete, the state funding allocated to the board provides a good indicator of the eventual shape of the regents' budget.

Sen. Joe Bolkcom, D-Iowa

City, lauded the final version of the education budget.

"I think on balance, people feel we did a very strong job funding education in the midst of a very difficult budget," he said. "Of all the areas, I think education probably did the best."

All area legislators voted for the education budget, which passed down party lines in both chambers.

Sen. Randy Feenstra, R-Hull, voted against the bill, taking issue with cuts to private schools, among other things — though he said he was largely content with the allocations to the regents.

"I think there were some good decisions there," he said.

He maintained the multi-million dollar state bonding proposal that passed over the weekend — which is intended to create jobs and repair the state post-flood — will siphon off money that could be used for education funding in the future.

"Where does it come from?" Feenstra asked, referring to the money needed to pay of the future debt on the bonds. "It comes from education."

Lawmakers also passed a bill over the weekend giving regents the power to issue $100 million in bonds. Regents will use the essentially borrowed money to help clean up the UI's campus from flood damage.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency is supplying the majority of funding needed to rebuild damaged buildings on campus, and the university has raised more than $100 million of its own mitigation funding through private fundraising, among other sources. In addition, the UI's insurance has covered about $80 million of the price.

The bonding money will be used as the final piece, matching the funding FEMA is providing.

Some legislators expressed reservations about the act — the bill including the measure passed the House by 10 votes and the Senate by 12 votes.

In contrast Rep. Dave Jacoby, D-Coralville, a paladin of the bonding plan, called it a "no-brainer."

Finally, the UI received a little more than $1 million for a flood center in a separate bill.

The center, Bolkcom said, will "provide us the scientific expertise to be able to tell us, when we have significant rainfall, the impact of the rainfall on people downstream and communities downstream."

Bolkcom hopes the center will help avert last year's pre-flood problems, in which knowledge-based prescience was absent.

"What we lacked in 2008 was the ability to predict, based on the conditions in early June on what additional rainfall amounts would mean to cities such as Iowa City and Cedar Rapids," he said.

Gov. Chet Culver is expected to sign the bills in the coming days.

I've had experience working side-by-side on initiatives with Mike and JD this year, and I know Bridget and I are leaving the Student Government in good hands. The students made a good choice sending these two back into office.

business is to sort out positions within the government, including the speaker of the Senate, who will be elected by the rest of the senators on Tuesday. Once that is accomplished, they plan to attack their platform issues.

"We have so many wonderful platform points that we are anxiously awaiting to accomplish," Moran said. "I truly believe that with Mike and my cooperation, all of our plans for the university will transpire."

The platform is based on 11 issues, including increasing recycling in the dorms, extending NiteRide availability, installing better lighting on campus, locking in tuition, and holding monthly forums for students.

Patrick Cornally, an elected freshman senator, said he is excited to be on Student Government and to start accomplishing goals.

"I'm really excited to have Currie and JD and the rest of our executives in office," Cornally said. "I think they will keep true to their campaign promises, and I think that we can get a lot of our platform issues accomplished."

Also speaking on Sunday, former UISG President Maison Bleam thanked his administration for a successful year working with himself and former Vice President Bridget Szeluga. He added he is confident in Currie's abilities to lead the next generation of UISG.

"I've had experience working side-by-side on initiatives with Mike and JD this year, and I know Bridget and I are leaving the Student Government in good hands," Bleam said. "The students made a good choice sending these two back into office."

Currie said he thinks this year will be both productive and exciting.

"It is the duty of every one of us to take what we have been given and make a real change," he said.

The first meeting for the 2009-10 UISG administration is Tuesday at 7 p.m.

may wish to use its services to recruit a new manager. A clause in the city's contract with the PAR Group guaranteed Lombardo's employment for at least 12 months — if he did not to complete that term, the company would be required to conduct a new search nearly free of charge.

The council terminated Lombardo's contract fewer than two weeks before he would have been employed for a year.

Councilors said they're unsure if or when they will use the PAR Group's services. But Mayor Regenia Bailey said if the city asks the firm to conduct a new search, the contract states it would cost the city almost nothing.

"We would pay for typical expenses to meet with consultants, such as mileage, travel and lodging," Bailey said.

While Lombardo's discharge came just before the year-long guarantee expired, Councilor Connie Champion said the clause didn't influence the timing of the council's decision.

"It didn't even cross my mind," she said.

City officials have kept quiet on why Lombardo was terminated, saying the motivation behind the firing is confidential because it's a personnel matter. Lombardo declined to comment on the decision on two separate occasions last week at his home.

Lombardo's evaluation was originally scheduled for May 4 and 5, but the council moved the review to April 17 and fired him the same day. Champion said the reason the council moved the date ahead was "pretty obvious."

"We wanted to evaluate him," she said.

Bailey said she didn't consider changing the date of Lombardo's evaluation to be "moving forward."

"We were within his annual review period," she said. "The meeting was deemed appropriate for the time period."

Helling is acting as the interim city manager until the position is filled permanently.

Bailey said councilors will consider Helling as an option when they move forward.

"The council has not discussed [the timeline of the hiring process] yet," Councilor Mike Wright said. "There are seven council members and probably seven timelines."

RiverFEAST goes hungry

Rain dampened the downtown scene at a weekend culinary event.

By MARY HARRINGTON
mary-harrington@uiowa.edu

Downtown restaurant workers were disappointed by the lack of lines and uneaten food April 25 at the RiverFEAST food event.

The event, sponsored by RiverFest and the Downtown Association, offered sample-sized servings of appetizers, entrées, and desserts from 20 restaurants and several volunteer booths.

With warm servings of macaroni and cheese, chicken tacos, and grilled cheeseburgers available on the chilly overcast day, many attendees said the ice cream and gelato stands left them with lingering icy cravings.

For those who showed up, they said the food was worth it.

But with rain falling all afternoon, the turnout at the tables was smaller than many had hoped for.

UI students were especially a rare sight downtown on the afternoon of April 25. Young children and adults braved the weather with raincoats and umbrellas, while most students were there to work as volunteers, not to participate.

"If I wasn't volunteering, I absolutely would not be out here today," said UI freshman Fawwaz Ahmed as he waited in line for ice cream at the Cold Stone Creamery stand.

RiverFEAST participants watch cotton candy being made by the group on April 25.

Dubuque St., offered pizza slices in the rain, the sidewalk around him empty.

"If the weather wasn't like this, I'm positive the turnout would have been totally different," he said.

In September 2008, the Johnson County Local Food Alliance held a culinary walk, operating the same as last week's RiverFEAST. Past participants said the turnout was much greater than this spring, with most booths serving crowds of hungry pedestrians and food quickly disappearing from tabletops.

This time around, after two hours of operation, such restaurants as Milio's, 20 S. Clinton St., served fewer than 20 ticket holders.

"At previous events, people were lined up down the street for this stuff," said Allison French, serving pizza and wings from the Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St.. "The rain is definitely hampering our business today," said Brian Kelley, general manager at Milio's.

Local parents and their bundled-up kids still took advantage of the weekend food crawl.

With eyes set on a balloon of pink cotton candy, 10-year-old Phillip Gillette said the constant drizzle never dampened his appetite for some sweet samples.

"I think it's pretty cool to get cotton candy and ice cream and that gelato stuff," he said standing on slick Pedestrian Mall bricks, his food favorites all within walking distance and none of them more than $3.

"That makes stuff still fun."

Being good sports

By CLARK CAHILL

Iowa City community members are used to supporting Hawkeye student-athletes during their sporting events. But Sunday morning, the support was reversed.

Nearly 300 UI athletes participated in the 10th-annual Hawkeye Day of Caring — with groups of up to 50 athletes traveling to more than 10 different sites in the Iowa City area to give back to the public.

The annual event is organized by the Iowa Student Athlete Advisory Committee to increase the level of community service among its teams and individuals, said Lissa Munley, the service head of the committee.

"We are trying to get as many students out in the community to volunteer their time and help out," said the UI senior and field-hockey player. "We want to make the area look better and thank the community for their support of our athletes."

Activities ranged from cleaning parks and creeks, to helping with the RiverRun and assisting with a carnival event at a nursing home.

Members of the Hawkeye football, wrestling, and men's track teams worked at the Iowa City roller dam — cleaning dead brush and trees causing erosion problems. They also helped build a portage so canoers can safely bypass the roller dam and continue along the river.

"The dam is not very accessible right now," said Noah Poppelreiter, an Iowa City public-works intern. "We're just trying to clean up the area because this is not what a river area should look like."

Manual labor was not the only activity athletes took part in during the event. Members of the field-hockey team helped out at Windmill Manor in Coralville, assisting with a carnival event for residents and their families. Activities included karaoke, face-painting, bowling, and playing Wii.

"I think it's great for these [athletes] to have the willingness to volunteer," said Steve Drobot, an administrator at Windmill Manor. "I think it gives the residents a little bit of an oomph in their spirits to have them out here."

Many athletes felt giving back to the community could also help fill the stands at future sporting events.

"Hopefully, by helping the community, we can get the fan base up at Carver for the wrestling team," said Montell Marion, a sophomore wrestler. "It might be hard to get through [the work], but it feels good to help out."

Jessica Werley, a junior field-hockey player, agreed with the mutual aspect of volunteering her time.

"I do it a lot on my own a lot of times; it's great to be involved in the community," she said. "They get to know the university athletics, and it gets more people to come out to our [games]."

Though the Day of Caring was only a few hours for teams to give back, it isn't the only time UI athletics supports local agencies.

"There are other things we do, it just depends on the time of year," said Tori Garifo, a freshman field-hockey player. "As a team we have a lot of fun doing it, so it's not that bad."

U.S. News ranks several UI programs

Several UI graduate programs and colleges were given prominent national ratings by U.S. News & World Report's "America's Best Graduate Schools 2010," according to a UI news release.

The analysis, which is available via paid online subscription, ranked 21 UI programs among the 10 best in the nation for public universities.

According to the report, five of the programs, the speech-language pathology master's program, audiology master's and doctoral programs, physician's assistant program through the Carver College of Medicine, and two specialty programs through the College of Nursing are top-tier — all of which were ranked No. 1 in previous years.

Some newly ranked 10 best UI graduate studies include rehabilitation counseling through the College of Education, fourth, clinical psychology, ninth, and printmaking, second.

Man charged with 3rd OWI

Coralville police arrested a Cedar Rapids man April 23 for allegedly driving drunk.

James Norfleet, 63, was charged with third-offense OWI.

According to police reports, officers stopped Norfleet for speeding. Norfleet didn't have a driver's license and stated he had been drinking. He did poorly on field sobriety tests, police said.

Norfleet had allegedly blood alcohol level of .137 on preliminary breath tests and refused a Datamaster breath test at the police station.

Third-offense OWI is a Class D felony, punishable by up to five years in prison and a maximum fine of $9,375.

5 charged after fight

Iowa City police responded to a fight involving 15-20 people in the early hours of April 24 and arrested five people after finding three victims of an unprovoked assault, authorities said.

Corey Gardner, 19, Cedar Rapids, was charged with public intoxication and two counts of assault causing bodily injury.

Wesley Johnson, 20, Cedar Rapids, and Jacky Mabikulu, 19, 2151 Davis St., were both charged with disorderly conduct.

Joseph Farmer, 20, Cedar Rapids, was charged with disorderly conduct and public intoxication.

Kati Calkins, 18, Cedar Rapids, and Amanda Calkins, 23, Roscoe, Ill., were both charged with public intoxication.

According to police reports, several people were gathered in the front yard of an apartment building near 200 S. Linn St. when the suspects walked past the group and started a confrontation, leading to the assaults.

The victims did not require immediate medical treatment but sustained bruises, abrasions, and chipped teeth, police reports show.

In an unrelated incident on April 25, an Illinois man was arrested after he allegedly attacked two people downtown.

Christopher Piane, 18, West Chicago, Ill., was charged with public intoxication and assault causing bodily injury.

Assault causing bodily injury is a serious misdemeanor, punishable by up to one year in jail and a maximum fine of $1,875. Disorderly conduct and public intoxication are simple misdemeanors, generally punishable by up to 30 days in jail or a maximum fine of $500.

District puts off changing schedules

Iowa City School District officials will wait till at least 2010-11.

By CLARK CAHILL
clark-cahill@uiowa.edu

Students and staff in the Iowa City School District won't have to worry about changing their daily routine for at least another year.

Superintendent Lane Plugge announced April 24 he has recommended to postpone any potential schedule change to the district's 24 schools until at least the 2010-11 school year. He previously wanted the Iowa City School Board to make a decision — in an effort to save money — for the 2009-10 school year by this Tuesday's meeting.

"We need to make sure the change is successful," Plugge said. "There are many factors that go into making the decision, and we need more time."

District officials had discussed five options for changing elementary and secondary schedules — all involving beginning one significantly earlier than the other to reduce the number of buses used by doubling routes.

The proposed options would have elementary schools starting as early as 7:50 a.m. and ending as late as 3:50 p.m., while secondary schools could start as early as 7:40 a.m. and end as late as 4 p.m.

The options would save the district anywhere from $275,000 to $825,000 in transportation costs at a time when officials are trying to reduce expenses by $6 million over the next two years.

"I would like to have the savings now, but I want to make sure we make the right choice," Plugge said.

School districts usually take a few years before implementing schedule changes once dialogue begins, he said. Iowa City district officials began weighing options only a few months ago.

"It's not something we can implement one year and then change it the next," said Toni Cilek, Iowa City School Board president. "We will have to make cuts over the next few years, but we are hoping we will be OK putting this aside for now."

Officials hope they can make a decision on schedule changes by next fall, Plugge said.

"I think given the savings projections there will be an adjustment made," Cilek said. "We don't know for sure what that is going to be, but we will need to do something to save that money."

President's Residence serves as home, event center

Thirteen university presidents and their families have lived in the UI President's Residence.

By JENNIFER DELGADO
jennifer-delgado@uiowa.edu

The UI President's Residence, home to current president Sally Mason and husband Ken, is as symbolic to the UI community as the White House is to the nation.

For many, the residence is one of the most striking and memorable buildings on the university campus. Sitting at 102 E. Church St., it was first built in 1908 and originally cost $25,067.

Former UI President George MacLean moved into the house in 1909. At the time, the living room also functioned as the President's Office.

Built on a bluff overlooking the Iowa River, the views from the home may be some of the most scenic in Iowa City.

The spacious three-story brick house, which has housed 13 UI leaders and their families, contains five bedrooms and four bathrooms. The President's Residence also boasts two screened porches, a library, and a large room that serves as lecture hall and ballroom.

But don't be fooled. Although the home is more than 12,000 square feet, only 25 percent of it is used for residential purposes — the other 75 percent is for hosting dinners with guest speakers, entertaining, and other institutional events. More than 100 functions take place there every year.

During Welcome Week, a seven-day extravaganza celebrating the start of a new school year, the president hosts a block party on the front lawn, filled with students, live music, and free barbecued food.

In 2003, the university spent almost $3 million renovating the mansion. Most of the money went to expanding the kitchen, upgrading the heating and cooling systems, and remodeling the single-car garage to fit two vehicles.

2 Iowa towns, 2 views on immigration raids

By NIGEL DUARA
Associated Press

POSTVILLE, Iowa — For immigrant advocates, the raid on a meatpacking plant in Postville last May was evidence of all that is wrong with large-scale arrests of illegal workers.

Families were hurt, and empty shops and lines at the food bank show that the town was, too. One rental agency says nearly 70 percent of its properties are vacant. The City Council even sought a federal disaster designation because of the lingering effects of the raid on the Agriprocessors kosher slaughterhouse.

"At what point do we acknowledge that the system is so broken that we're no longer willing to participate?" wondered Maryn Olson, a coordinator with Postville Response Coalition, a group established after the raid.

But as the Obama administration considers a new policy on immigration raids, another Iowa town less than 100 miles away has emerged from a raid on its largest employer with a different perspective.

People in Marshalltown acknowledged that scars remain from the December 2006 raid at the Swift & Co. meatpacking plant there, but the city of 25,000 has moved on.

Marshalltown Mayor Gene Beach said the raid hurt efforts to integrate Latinos into the larger community but that most residents have little sympathy for the 92 illegal immigrants arrested in Marshalltown during a sweep at Swift plants in six states.

U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement "has the right to come in, give adequate due process and treat them in a humane way," Beach said. "The current law is that people are to be legal, and the agency has the responsibility to enforce the law."

Celebrate gay rights, but recognize it as a nonissue

An interesting case of news that isn't news: Today's the day that gay and lesbian marriages make their way into documented history for the state of Iowa. What makes this news isn't the bright glare of utter precedent, or the roiling excitement of the gay community's sudden break into what could be called legitimacy, or even the fact that it's happening today. What makes it news is that the issue is still unaccountably an issue.

Today, marriage licenses will be put to the books, and after the standard Iowa three-day waiting period, the homo-knots can be tied just as tightly as the hetero. But a different line of attack has been angling in since the unanimous ruling weeks ago confirmed the unconstitutionality of banning same-sex marriage — instead of howling to the rafters about the meaning of marriage, the "rights" of those who "can" marry, or generally taking the civilized, adult steps within legal arenas to correct what some see as a gross perversion of morality, some groups, including the Iowa Family Policy Center, have begun building petitions to send to county recorders. The gist of these worthless lists of ignorance? "When gay people apply for a marriage license, just say no."

Now, there's got to be some credence to the idea that when the law undermines what is seen to be right, then movement outside the law is the only way to correct the wrong. Opinion ("conviction" might as well be synonymous, given the moral trend of most of these dissenting anti-same-sex voices) will always be the major crux of any legal or political alteration (synonym: "evolution"), and yes, considering, debating and wrenching the opinions of everyone into a framework that will benefit everyone is tough. But this is absurd, on top of just petty. With his petition, Chuck Hurley, the president of the Iowa Family Policy Center, is making an appeal to the moral, virtuous hearts of those few levels of bureaucracy that wield any power in the matter of same-sex marriage to veer into personal bias instead of this everyone framework. He's straight-up asking people, on a personal level, to disregard legality and exercise a nonexistent individual prerogative to discriminate.

And yet, those with any amount of perspective know how fruitless it is. We've won, Chuck, and while it's definitely your right to grumble about it, your ad hominem campaign is just plain tacky. Sioux County Recorder Anita Van Bruggen said, "My personal belief is that a marriage should be between a man and a woman, but I did take an oath of office as county recorder which states that I support the Constitution of the state of Iowa, so I will be treating all applications for marriage licenses the same — it's simple as that." Ah, the light of civilization breaks forth. See? A personal belief that doesn't hinder the rights of others.

That's why this isn't news. Iowa Senate Majority Leader Mike Gronstal's already said, "I see a bunch of people who merely want to profess their love for each other and want state law to recognize that." It doesn't matter. It's a nonissue. Today is a proud day, an important day, and it's vital that everyone recognize it, hell, even if you aren't gay, celebrate it. But then move on. It isn't, shouldn't, be news.

Tales from music road

nick-fetty@uiowa.edu

Second only to Hawkeye football, music festivals are the biggest passion in my life.

Your pounding hangover and unbearable heat inside the tent force you to wake up. As you step outside, the smell of marijuana smoke fills your nostrils and you gaze across the community of colorful tents. This is the atmosphere of a hippie music festival, and it is one of my favorite parts of summer.

The Woodstock Festival in 1969 is often regarded as the original festival. Today, there are hundreds of music festivals all across the country, even a few in the great state of Iowa. These events are always held outside and usually provide primitive camping for attendees. Groups known as jam bands are staples at these festivals. Jam bands are often characterized by their colorful instrumentation, danceable grooves, and jams that can last as long as a half hour.

The summer after I graduated from high school was when I lost my music-festival virginity. I went to the 10,000 Lakes Festival in Detroit Lakes, Minn. Every single aspect of the trip was a blast, and ever since, I have been hooked on music festivals.

My friend Ross and I departed for the festival in the middle of July. I had been looking forward to it since we purchased our tickets in May. We left for our 471 mile trip about 8 a.m. after loading the car with enough gear for our four-day debauchery-laced excursion.

After about four hours on the road, we stopped in Minneapolis to eat at a White Castle, a pleasure which neither of us had experienced. This ended up being one of the biggest mistakes of the trip. Let's just say there is a reason they call their burgers "sliders."

Then, with awful stomach aches, we continued truckin' northward. Ross got tired of driving after awhile and let me get behind the wheel of his $40,000 Monte Carlo SS. But after I nearly hit a cone in a construction zone, Ross took the wheel again.

Finally, around 10 hours after departing from West Des Moines, we arrived at the festival grounds. We saw people wearing tie dye, white people with dreads, and women with body paint instead of clothes. I immediately knew this was my kind of thing.

Because this was one month before I went to college, it was one of the first times I got to experience freedom. I loved it.

That night after going to the concerts, we went back to the tent and got a bonfire going. It gets surprisingly chilly being so far north, even during the middle of the summer.

People from all around the campsite slowly started congregating around our bonfire. We met the guy who set up camp next door to us, and he ended up being quite a character. This guy was more concerned about finding acid as soon as he arrived, and he neglected setting up his tent. Consequently, he was left to sleep in his car.

The next day, we went into the town of Detroit Lakes to play a rousing game of disc golf. I'm sure that the residents of Detroit Lakes hate it every year when their quaint little town is flooded with hippies.

On one of the days we went to the Hunab show and that turned me onto the Iowa City music scene. We saw Hunab a few weeks later at Briar Batch, a festival held several times throughout the year at a farm outside my native Des Moines.

The last night of the festival was much like the last day of summer. I had met all these interesting people — all of whom I would never see again — and I knew that I would miss every aspect of the festival. I knew I would have to make it to a music festival every year.

Last year, I went Camp Euforia in Lone Tree, and I think I would say I liked it even more than 10,000 Lakes Fest. It was a smaller festival — only two days long with far fewer people. Despite these differences, though, it had the same feel.

Possibly the best thing about Camp Euforia that 10,000 Lakes Festival didn't have was that you could hear the bands from the campsite. Also, the Camp Euforia bill consists mainly of local groups. Another cool thing about my experience with Camp Euforia was that the group camping next to us got a drum circle going late that night after all of the bands were done playing. Before long there were dozens of people surrounding our camp site so they could dance to the beats.

This summer, I am going to the Summer Camp Festival in Chillicothe, Ill. I am bringing a friend who is a music-festival virgin, and I'm very excited to introduce him to this counterculture. Unlike many of my friends back home who insists on going to 10,000 Lakes Festival every year, I prefer to try new things.

Also, I plan to go to Camp Euforia again. In fact, I hope to attend Camp Euforia for the rest of my time in Iowa City.

I advise all people to make it to at least one music festival in their lifetimes — they are guaranteed to see a lifestyle that they never knew existed.

Nothing fishy about city manager firing

GARY SANDERS
garysanders@yahoo.com

"I certainly wouldn't hire him again."

Is that Iowa City Mayor Regina Bailey talking about recently fired City Manager Michael Lombardo? No, it's Allegan County, Mich., County Commissioner Steve McNeal. But McNeal is talking about Lombardo — referring to Lombardo's four-year stint as Allegan County administrator. Smith couldn't say more to because "personnel matters get sticky." Sound familiar?

By firing Lombardo on April 17, after less than one year, with a unanimous 7-0 vote, the Iowa City City Council members are admitting they had made a mistake in hiring him, and they were rectifying their mistake. They won't go into details, simply saying it's a "personnel matter."

I know it's frustrating, but we really don't get to hear the details of why he was fired, just like we don't get to know about the firings of hundreds of public officials across the country — including other city managers. And it doesn't matter that Lombardo was a highly paid public employee and he got $80,000 in severance, or that he may or may not have had previous negative evaluations, or even warnings.

Focusing on what we have a "right" to know about the firing — such as the April 21 DI editorial suggesting that something "fishy" went on behind closed doors — is a distraction from the real issues; that Lombardo should have been fired, and people would have been prepared for it if the media had done their job.

I have absolutely no "inside information," but it was obvious to me after watching the April 13 City Council/city manager budget-priorities session that Lombardo was in deep trouble. The council was perplexed, upset, and angry that he had not come to this meeting with what they had asked him to do — suggest recommendations on cutting the budget. Repeatedly, the councilors said they had wanted him to collect information from department heads on the possible results of cutting their departmental budgets and also present the council with choices and recommendations, as former 21-year City Manager Steve Atkins had done. Repeatedly, Lombardo said that before he could do that he needed some kind of broad framework. He looked like a deer in the headlights. He simply couldn't or wouldn't comply with their request. This wasn't some grand clash of budget philosophies. He brought them data, when they had requested information. He did not follow a direct work order.

The media totally missed the drama of this meeting. There was so much tension in the room that it was very painful to watch. If I had been on the council, I would have pounded my fist on the table after five minutes and said "Look, Mike, if you can't do what we asked you to do, then let's get the hell out of here now." But the councilors were very, very civil and patient. They were exasperated and angry, but calm. It wasn't until the very end that an obviously frustrated Connie Champion said to Lombardo "until we have something to react to, this is a waste of our time and yours." That should have been the headline the next day. It not only wasn't the headline, the meeting was barely reported on — so people were shocked that Lombardo was fired four days later.

The media also missed the significance of what happened at the March 24 City Council meeting where the council shut Lombardo down, 7-0, on his idea to move the Iowa City Farmers' Market. In 30 years in Iowa City, I have not seen a City Council vote down a city manager's idea 7-0. (Steve Atkins would never do anything unless he had at least four votes from the council.) The press did not understand that this speedy, unanimous, and probably unprecedented vote was a big public slap-down.

At that meeting, the press also missed the significance of Lombardo publicly blaming a recreation department employee for an "untimely" press release, even though he himself had circumvented city staff in deciding to move the market. But the point is not whether moving the Farmers' Market was a good idea or a bad idea — in the world of city managers, academic deans, or corporate executives, you simply do not publicly blame a subordinate when your idea is rejected.

The press also didn't cover Lombardo's April 9 meeting with the Farmers' Market vendors, in which he was defensive and rude. (In contrast, I remember Atkins presenting his budget in 1987 to a contentious group of 50 members of the Democratic Socialists of America, and he was very courteous and forthcoming in his answers). Again, the problem wasn't Lombardo's stance on the market, it was his treatment of citizens.

As I wrote at the beginning, I have no inside knowledge of anything beyond what I've observed in public meetings. The press should have been writing about it, but it didn't. As a subscriber to three newspapers, I want print media to last until I'm 90 years old, but unless the press starts doing as good a job covering and analyzing city councils, county boards of supervisors, and school boards as they do for Hawkeye football games, the public will always be startled when something dramatic happens, as it did when Lombardo was fired.

Top-of-the-line show

By REBECCA KOONS

Dierks Bentley rolled into Iowa City on Thursday, ready to bring his own goodtime sensibilities to a city that is seen for many as a party mecca.

Bentley shattered any stereotype of country being only the music of rural folk, with his rousing and exciting stage performance in the IMU Main Lounge. Especially during the past few years, country music has made noise and crossed genres, inviting music fans from across the spectrum to join in the fun.

The crowd was hyped up before the IMU's doors even opened, the energy buzzing with great anticipation. A few hours later, the blond-haired, blue-eyed country crooner got the place hopping — and the girls screaming — right away, kicking off his set with "Life on the Run," an ode to the whirlwind lifestyle of a band always on the road. In fact, several of Bentley's songs run along the same lyrical tangent, spicing up his set with hit singles such as "Lot of Leavin' Left to Do" and "Free and Easy Down the Road I Go." Apart from his more free-wheeling numbers, he certainly has a softer side that he isn't afraid to show in soulful ballads such as "Settle For a Slowdown" and "Come a Little Closer."

His musical repertoire is just the kind that fills his concerts with variety, leaving the audience wondering what's going to come next (true, I actually heard people trying to guess which songs he'd play). He's at the point in his career where he has a bevy of hits to play that everyone has memorized but is still able to throw in a few that not everyone necessarily knows. This kind of accessibility is crucial for someone of his status, as there are still many familiarizing themselves with his music.

It was evident from the minute he walked out that Bentley knows how to command a stage, a show, as well as his audience of adoring fans (heavily concentrated with the female species). One thing that makes a concert go from good to great is how a performer interacts with the crowd. Not a moment went by in which Bentley wasn't running from one end of the stage to the other, making sure everyone was alive and having a good time. Getting the audience involved in screaming/"woo"-ing contests, one side versus the other, or just getting everyone to sing along, is an easy way to make everyone feel connected. Bentley is an expert in that respect.

Another thing that made this show greater is that he and his bandmates have incredible chemistry on stage. They pal and joke around as though they were just hanging out. You can't blame them — performing for legions of fans has got to provide a pretty good high. The last thing people want to see is a band that looks bored. The interaction between Bentley and the others turned the occasion into one big party, with which no one seemed to have a problem.

The show ended strongly, with Bentley performing his own renditions of "All My Exes Live in Texas" and "Folsom Prison Blues." He left the masses begging for more, which is ultimately what every good performer should do. His irresistible charm, talent, and genuine appreciation for his fans are the things quality musicians are made of.

'The audience was simply groping for a good time and, judging by the concertgoers' ebullient, sweat-streaked faces as they walked out of the IMU, they got it.'

It's the motion in the ocean

Sweat, harmonies, and all kinds of awkward dancing flowed freely at Motion City Soundtrack's RiverFest performance.

katherine-hanson@uiowa.edu

Not every band has to stop mid-song during a concert because a large number of audience members have fallen down.

But at the IMU's April 24 Motion City Soundtrack concert, the group halted its fourth song, "Broken Heart," and lead singer Justin Pierre had to instruct the audience to "move back, move back, move back" and "be sure to help each other up" before all the people were on their feet again.

That brief snafu didn't stop students from bouncing back into their frantic hand bobs and torso gyrations, and by the end of Motion City Soundtrack's one-hour set, both the band members and most of the audience were soaked in sweat.

Putting on this kind of show says a lot about a band and its performance style — it is the rare act that can do so and compel bulky guys in backwards baseball caps to sing along with their eyes closed.

In essence, the concert was not so much a performance but an endurance contest between the audience and the band. Though a clear winner was never decided, Motion City Soundtrack delivered a thoroughly entertaining show.

Unlike other bands, which may not decide to come on until 15 to 20 minutes after a show's scheduled start time, the quintet broke out "I am wrecked / I am overblown / I am also fed up with the common cold" — the opening lines of "Attractive Today" — immediately at 8 p.m. With the exception of the dancing crisis, the group hardly paused throughout its roughly 20-song set. In fact, the band seemed to gain strength with each successive tune.

Pierre's voice danced until the show's finish, and the only indication he gave that his vocals were failing was his request for the audience to sing chunks of Motion City Soundtrack's last song, "The Future Freaks Me Out." Guitarist Joshua Cain and bassist Matthew Taylor never faltered in their harmonious backup vocals, and Cain even kicked up his feet like an amateur karate student during "You'll Always be my Favorite One." But those moves were no match for keyboardist and Moog synthesizer artist Jesse Johnson, who jammed in a world of his own throughout the night.

Admittedly, an hour of Motion City Soundtrack is a lot of Motion City Soundtrack. Its songs about love and heart-break are sweet, almost saccharine, and it got to be so much that had I watched a Michael Cera movie afterwards, I might have thrown up. But as the show wore on, the band blew away my misgivings with its almost overwhelming energy and perfect pitches.

Pierre prefaced songs with such introductions as, "This is a song about shit that happened," and, "This is a brand-new song ... just kidding, we actually haven't written any songs to our new record," before the group launched into tunes

Rundown

Here's a partial list of songs Motion City Soundtrack performed on April 24 in the IMU Main Lounge:

- Attractive Today
- Point of Extinction
- Broken Heart
- Make Out Kids
- Time Turned Fragile
- Last Night
- Don't Call It A Comeback
- Better Open The Door
- This Is For Real
- When You're Around
- Fell In Love Without You
- Let's Get Fucked Up And Die
- My Favorite Accident
- Everything Is All Right
- The Future Freaks Me Out(Cash)

that sounded just as good as the album versions — only much louder.

After the band concluded its set with "Everything is All Right," the audience called the group back for "one more song," and wound up with two. The finale was predictable, yes, but nobody was looking for an earth-shattering event. The audience was simply groping for a good time and, judging by the concertgoers' ebullient, sweat-streaked faces as they walked out of the IMU, they got it.

BITCH PLEASE

THE RED HOT CHILI PEPPERS

Never more tepid

Whenever I'm walking around Iowa City and hear a Red Hot Chili Peppers' song blaring in someone's car stereo I want to chuck a rock through her or his windshield. So much better music exists — in Iowa City alone — that I cannot comprehend how some individuals are still hooked on the poppy rock sound that resounded throughout high-school parking lots during the 1990s and early 2000s.

The Chili Peppers are at best a "start-off" band. Many individuals first listen to the group when they are just beginning to take music seriously, but then their musical tastes evolve in other — often less mainstream — directions.

Since 1991's Blood Sugar Sex Magik, the band's breakthrough album, the Chili Peppers haven't produced anything as funky or original. Released in 1999, Californication is the pinnacle of the band's signature whiny sound.

What happened to the groove and Flea's skittish bass lines?

When the Chili Peppers should have tried to expand its sound, the band instead opted to stay with long-time producer Rick Rubin. Together the quartet and Rubin completely neglected experimentation and, as a result, the tracks sound overly compressed and distorted.

While the band regained an ounce of funkiness with 2006's Stadium Arcadium, the Chili Peppers' spice has long been extinguished, never to reignite.

— by Dan Watson

Hotter than ever

I first listened to the Red Hot Chili Peppers when I was 12, close to By the Way's release, and I felt very strongly about the band's music. And though the 12-year-old me also had passionate feelings for *NSYNC, she was not wrong about all things. The Red Hot Chili Peppers makes good music, even though it is easy to dismiss the quartet on the basis of its radio appeal, causing its singles to become all but inescapable surrounding an album's drop date. This is not a full representation of the band's talent.

Take Stadium Arcadium. Most casual music fans can recognize "Tell Me Baby" and "Dani California," but to me, those don't compare with "Wet Sand," "She Looks To Me," and "Animal Bar," songs with meaningful lyrics that can't be classified as pop.

The Red Hot Chili Peppers' full CDs have much more to offer than the singles which are so often to blame for the band's bad rap.

Jarrita Juarez (center) wears a mask after entering the United States from Mexico at the San Ysidro Port of Entry in San Diego on Sunday. Mexico is the epicenter of a swine-flu outbreak, with up to 86 suspected deaths.

Nations brace for swine flu

By LAURAN NEERGAARD
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The world's governments raced to avoid both a pandemic and global hysteria Sunday as more possible swine-flu cases surfaced from Canada to New Zealand and the United States declared a public-health emergency. "It's not a time to panic," the White House said.

Mexico, the outbreak's epicenter with up to 86 suspected deaths, canceled some church services and closed markets, restaurants, and movie theaters. A televised variety show filled its seats with cardboard cutouts. Few people ventured onto the streets, and some wore face masks.

Canada confirmed cases in six people, including some students who — like some New York City spring-breakers — got mildly ill in Mexico. Countries across Asia promised to quarantine feverish travelers returning from flu-affected areas.

The United States declared the health emergency so it could ship roughly 12 million doses of flu-fighting medications from a federal stockpile to states in case they eventually need them — although, with 20 confirmed cases of people recovering easily, they don't appear to for now.

Make no mistake: There is not a global pandemic — at least not yet. It's not clear how many people truly have this particular strain or why all countries but Mexico are seeing mild disease. Nor is it clear if the new virus spreads easily, one milestone that distinguishes a bad flu from a global crisis. But waiting to take protective steps until after a pandemic is declared would be too late.

"We do think this will continue to spread but we are taking aggressive actions to minimize the impact on people's health," said Dr. Richard Besser, the acting chief of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

President Obama's administration sought to look both calm and in command, striking a balance between informing Americans without panicking them. Obama himself was playing golf while U.S. officials used a White House news conference to compare the emergency declaration with preparing for an approaching hurricane.

"Really, that's what we're doing right now. We're preparing in an environment where we really don't know ultimately what the size or seriousness of this outbreak is going to be," Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano told reporters.

Earlier, White House press secretary Robert Gibbs said the outbreak was serious but the public should know "it's not a time to panic." He told NBC's "Meet the Press" that Obama was getting updates "every few hours" on the situation.

In Mexico, soldiers handed out 6 million surgical-style masks to deal with a deadly flu strain that officials say may have sickened 1,400 people since April 13. Special laboratory tests to confirm how many died from it — 22 have been confirmed so far out of 86 suspected deaths — are taking time.

The World Bank said it would send Mexico $25 million in loans for immediate aid and $180 million in long-term assistance to address the outbreak, along with advice on how other nations have dealt with similar crises.

The World Health Organization and the United States were following a playbook of precautions developed over the past five years to prepare for the next super-flu. The WHO on April 25 asked all countries to step up detection of this strain of A/H1N1 swine flu and will reconsider on Tuesday whether to raise the pandemic threat level, in turn triggering additional actions.

A potential pandemic virus is defined, among other things, as a novel strain that's not easily treated. This new strain can be treated with Tamiflu and Relenza but not two older flu drugs. Also, the WHO wants to know if it's easily spread from one person to a second who then spreads it again — something U.S. officials suspect and are investigating.

"Right now, we have cases occurring in a couple of different countries and in numerous locations, but we also know that in the modern world that cases can simply move around from single locations and not really become established," cautioned WHO flu chief Dr. Keiji Fukuda.

Lawmakers end with flourish

Finishing its 2009 session over the weekend, Iowa legislators passed numerous bills.

By SHAWN GUDE
shawn-gude@uiowa.edu

It was a busy weekend for Iowa legislators.

Looking to wrap up the session early, sleep-deprived legislators pushed through myriad appropriations and policy bills in the final days.

"It was a very intense, but a very good weekend in terms of outcomes," Rep. Dave Jacoby, D-Coralville, said of the session, which ended just before 6 a.m. Sunday morning. "We worked some long hours."

Sen. Bob Dvorsky, D-Coralville, offered his own synopsis of the weekend.

"There's a lot of hurry up and wait situations. I guess I'm one of the luckier people," said Dvorsky, who is the head of the Senate Appropriations Committee. "A lot of people, unfortunately, have to wait and stand around."

In the end, Democrats — who control both chambers and the governorship — passed some of their coveted legislation, yet failed to approve other more controversial bills. One such measure would have ended federal deductibility and given the majority of Iowans a tax increase. College students would have received an extra $100 as well.

Pro-labor legislation also failed, as did a bill that would have raised the legal blood-alcohol concentration for boaters from .08 to .10. Still, legislators passed numerous noteworthy bills over weekend.

Lawmakers in both parties signed off on a proposal

"I think, on balance, it's strong proposal that we can afford and will provide jobs stimulus [and] important disaster recovery initiatives. I think we can manage it."

— Sen. Joe Bolkcom, D-Iowa

altering the state's so-called 2,000-foot law, in which registered sex offenders are barred from living within 2,000 feet of schools and other facilities frequented by minors.

The new law retains that ban for the most serious sex offenders. Others wouldn't be subject to the 2,000-foot residency rule, but all registered sex offenders would be prohibited from going to schools, childcare facilities, libraries, and other places without written permission.

Dvorsky, who worked extensively on the issue, said he was "extremely happy" with the approved legislation, calling the existing law "totally ineffective."

Jacoby also praised the bill, counting it as one of the session's major accomplishments.

The Senate unanimously approved the bill, and the House passed the measure 93-3.

Legislators passed another widely supported measure that seeks to expand health-care coverage for children by making it easier to qualify for the state's Hawk-i program, the state-administered children's health plan. The bill originally included a commission intended to help the uninsured find coverage, but critics complained it would have added an unnecessary layer of government bureaucracy.

While Dvorsky said he would have liked to see the commission included in the bill, he counted the move as a success. It showed legislators are serious about expanding health-care coverage for children, even during economic malaise, he said.

Finally, Democrats pushed through a massive, $830 million bonding plan intended to stimulate Iowa's economy, improve the state's infrastructure, and help the rebuild parts of Iowa still reeling from the flood. Republicans collectively decried the plan, arguing it would unnecessarily saddle future generations with debt.

"You can do the math and see this going to hurt our kids," Randy Feensta, R-Hull, said of the proposal which will end up costing the state over $1 billion after interest.

But area legislators — all Democrats — backed the plan.

"I think, on balance, it's strong proposal that we can afford and will provide jobs stimulus [and] important disaster recovery initiatives," said Sen. Joe Bolkcom, D-Iowa City. "I think we can manage it."

Dems, GOP grade session quite differently

Iowa Legislature Republican and Democratic leaders' assessments of the session's efficacy diverged greatly.

Democrats, who control both chambers and the governorship, predictably painted the session as a success.

"Despite these difficult times, we chose to be bold," House Majority Leader Kevin McCarthy, D-Des Moines, said in a statement. "I'm proud of our effort this year to help put Iowans back to work. We took bold action to modernize our economy, create good-paying jobs, and help unemployed Iowans get the skills they need to succeed in today's global economy."

In contrast, Republicans painted Democrats as out-of-touch, tax-and-spend politicians.

"Iowa families and employers are making tough decisions every day, and yet they witness state government continue to tax and spend and borrow and spend while all this spending is not the solution needed to grow Iowa and bring about prosperity and opportunity," Senate Minority Leader Paul McKinley, R-Chariton, said in his closing remarks before the Senate.

Locally, legislators gave the session favorable marks. Rep. Dave Jacoby, D-Coralville, positively assessed the session with a "B" grade, contending legislators effectively funded education in the state, made meaningful changes to the current sex offender law, and helped flood-stricken Iowans.

Sen. Joe Bolkcom, D-Iowa City, agreed.

"I think we had a good session," Bolkcom said, highlighting the education budget, disaster recovery allocations, and an expansion of health-care coverage for children as successes. "We did that all while balancing the budget in a time of very tight revenue."

Greene, 3 other Hawks picked

LINDSEY WALTERS/THE DAILY IOWAN

Shonn Greene scores his first of two touchdowns against Minnesota during the first quarter at the Metrodome on Nov. 22, 2008. Greene was the first Hawkeye to be selected in the 2009 NFL draft, going to the New York Jets as the 65th overall pick.

Shonn Greene heads the list of Hawkeyes drafted; four sign as undrafted free agents.

By BRENDAN STILES
brendan-stiles@uiowa.edu

There may not have been any Hawkeyes taken in the first two rounds of the 2009 NFL draft, but the second day saw a couple come right off the board.

The New York Jets traded up to the first pick of the third round (65th overall) on Sunday and used it on Iowa running back Shonn Greene. Greene was the second pick the Jets made after taking USC quarterback Mark Sanchez with the fifth overall selection of the draft on April 25.

Greene won't have to travel far, either. The Jets' practice facility in Florham Park, N.J., is just fewer than two hours from the Doak Walker Award winner's hometown of Sicklerville, N.J., which is outside of Philadelphia.

"It's a good feeling," Greene said about the Jets trading up to draft him during a press conference with the New York media. "That really told me how they thought about me and my abilities on and off the football field."

The Jets' selection of Greene was followed immediately by the St. Louis Rams selecting cornerback Bradley Fletcher with the 66th overall pick.

"I heard Shonn's name, and I was really happy for him, and then right afterwards, I heard my name," Fletcher said. "It was a very exciting time. It feels great. I was happy to hear from them, and I'm looking forward to playing."

"My dream came true this weekend."

The Rams were a team he had met with during the NFL scouting combine in February, he said, and the third round was about where he expected to be picked.

Seventy selections later, the Oakland Raiders decided to use a sixth-round pick on tight end Brandon Myers at pick No. 202. Myers was selected despite not being invited to the NFL Scouting Combine last February.

But the biggest surprise of the day may have been what didn't happen. Neither defensive lineman Mitch King nor center Rob Bruggeman were selected in this

Softball rolls in Indiana

Senior Colleen McGlaughlin hit two home runs to lead the No. 24 Iowa softball team to a 12-1 win at Indiana on Sunday. McGlaughlin's five RBIs were a career high and moved her ahead of Northwestern's Arienne Monka to regain the top spot for RBIs (48) in the Big Ten.

The Hawkeyes (38-11, 8-5) swept the Hoosiers (9-34, 3-11) over the weekend, also winning 12-0 on April 25. Both games ended after just five innings because of the mercy rule.

Iowa hit six doubles on April 25, tying a school record. McGlaughlin and sophomore Chelsey Carmody hit two doubles each to pace the Hawkeyes. Senior Quinn Morelock added a triple for Iowa during a fifth inning in which the Hawkeyes scored 11 runs while bringing 15 batters to the plate. Freshman Liz Watkins went 2-for-3 in the inning with three RBIs.

On Sunday, Iowa jumped to an early lead on a sacrifice fly by junior Katie Brown in the first inning and Iowa scored three runs in the second and third before a four run fifth inning put the mercy rule into effect.

Women's golf 5th

The Iowa women's golf team capped off its regular season on Sunday, finishing fifth at the Big Ten championships in West Lafayette, Ind.

Iowa carded a season-low 305 in the fourth round to solidify its finish. The team's fifth-place finish is the highest it has placed at the Big Ten meet since a fourth-place finish in 1995.

The Hawkeyes struggled in the first round, shooting a 327, but they got stronger as the tournament went on, shooting 317 in the second round and 315 in the third before their season-best fourth round.

Senior Tyrette Metzendorf finished third for the second year in a row after carding a 303 (15 over). Metzendorf shot rounds of 78, 75, 76, and 74.

Fellow senior Becky Quinby also finished in the top 20, tying for 15th after shooting a 318. Quinby carded rounds of 84, 76, 83, and 75.

Freshman Chelsea Harris finished 44th with a 326, and sophomore Laura Cilek tied for 49th, carding a 331 to round out Iowa's scorecard.

Sophomore Lauren Forbes (tied for 51st) and junior Alison Cavanaugh (64th) also competed with four-round scores of 332 and 344, respectively.

Injuries riddle baseball lineup

Iowa baseball is plagued with injuries.

By JEFF PAWOLA
jeffrey-pawola@uiowa.edu

To add insult to injury, literally, the Iowa baseball team was swept by Michigan State over the weekend at Banks Field without two key starters.

The Hawkeyes lost senior shortstop Justin Toole and senior catcher Kody McManis on April 25 after being struck by the ball.

Toole's injury occurred in the first inning, when the Iowa lead-off man got hit by a pitch on the lower part of his left arm, resulting in a fracture.

"I basically just got hit by a pitch, fracturing a bone in my arm," Toole said. "I'm probably done for the year ... we're going to do everything we can with the training staff to get back in there as soon as possible."

The captain was batting .346 on the year, third highest on the team, and he also collected the most hits with 54 before going down. He is also unquestionably the team's leader and his presence will be missed.

"We need [Toole] in the lineup. He is one of our leaders. He is one of the leaders on and off the field for us. He's our shortstop, solid defensively and offensively," freshman catcher Dallas Burke said. "He's going to be greatly missed if he can't get back here by the end of the year."

Burke replaced McManis in the starting lineup after the senior was hit by a pitch just beneath his left eye. Although he has not yet seen a doctor, he was held out from Sunday's game because of swelling and side effects of a potential concussion.

"He threw a high inside fastball, and it ran in, and I just couldn't get out of the way quick enough, and it caught me right in the face," McManis said. "I haven't been to the hospital yet, so we'll see. I broke some stuff and maybe got a concussion, but we don't really know right now."

Despite the injury, McManis was hoping he would have been able to finish off the series against the Spartans.

"I wanted to play today. I was fighting the trainer to get in there and play," he said. "But the training staff is smart, and

Spartans sweep Hawks

The Iowa baseball team sank deeper into the Big Ten cellar over the weekend following the conclusion of a three-game sweep to Michigan State on Sunday.

By RYAN YOUNG

The postseason aspirations that once seemed feasible for the Iowa baseball team at the beginning of the season are now becoming dim.

The Hawkeyes dropped their third-straight game to fellow conference cellar dweller Michigan State, 14-5, at Banks Field on Sunday.

Having not yet won a Big Ten series this season, the loss puts Iowa at 14-25 overall, 3-11 in conference. The only time the Hawkeyes were swept this season was against Indiana earlier in April.

Yet even with Iowa appearing to be a dark horse in the race for the Big Ten Tournament, head coach Jack Dahm is resisting the urge to panic.

"We can't even worry about the Big Ten Tournament or anything else," the sixth-year Iowa coach said. "That's one of the problems. We always start looking at 'Oh, what do we have to do to make the Big Ten Tournament?' Heck, just go out and play good baseball.

"We're not winning enough right now, well, that's because we're not playing the right way."

In the top of the first, Michigan State took advantage of a walk and a wild pitch by Iowa starting pitcher Zach Robertson to seize the lead early at 1-0 following a sacrifice fly.

Hawk relay wins at Drake

The Iowa men's 4x100-meter relay team brings home the Hawkeyes' first event champion at the Drake Relays in nine years.

By ZACH SMITH
 zachary-smith@uiowa.edu

Iowa assistant coach Joey Woody called it before the Hawkeye men's track and field team made the short trip to Des Moines for the 100th running of the Drake Relays. "We're really excited about our relay [teams]," the Drake Relays Hall of Famer said on April 22.

Richardson freshman

Little did the former world champion know how true his words would come to be.

The Hawkeyes' 4x100-meter relay team of freshmen D'Juan Richardson and Patrick Richards, sophomore Zeke Sayon, and junior Paul Chaney

Jr. was in the mix for the championship heat after finishing fourth in the preliminary heat on April 24 (40.58).

However, April 25's rainy and windy forecast played to the Hawkeyes' advantage, and they pulled a rope-a-dope on the rest of the 400-meter relay field, finishing first with a time of 40.71, barely edging second-place Georgia (41.11).

The victory marked the first time Hawkeye men's competitors have won a title in a Drake track event since former Iowa distance runner Stetson Steele won the 5,000 meters in 2000, and the win was the "highlight of the weekend," said head coach Larry Wiecezorek.

Senior John Hickey even went as far as saying it was "one of the greatest steps [he] has seen the team make since [he] has been [at Iowa]."

"The freshmen whom we've brought in have made the biggest contribution that I have ever seen," the 2009 indoor shot put All-American said. "They have all been pushing themselves to perform at the highest level. The fact that [the 4x100-meter relay team] can go out in the rain and run a 40.71 and just dominate the field — it was amazing."

The Hawkeye senior shot putter added a second Drake Relays medal to his hardware collection after finishing third with a throw of 59-0¼. Despite the strong showing, Hickey said he was disappointed with the way his weekend of competition played out after finishing behind Kentucky's Chase Madison (59-11¼) and Minnesota's Aaron Studt (61-5½) in his final Drake Relays appearance as a Hawkeye.

"I was a bit disappointed because I got second [at the Drake Relays] last year," he said. "[The competition] was the same guys I have been competing against for the past four years. It was pretty much open for anyone to win. I just didn't perform to where I should've been, and that's why it was a little disappointing [for me]."

Fellow senior A.J. Curtis placed fifth in the shot put (58-0 1/4) and seventh in the discus (170-2). Freshman Ryan Lamparek threw 53-5¾, which was good for 18th place, and he also finished 14th in the discus (159-6) in his first Drake Relays appearance as a Hawkeye.

Hawkeye junior Zach Schimp turned in a third place finish in the javelin competition with a throw of 204-8. Fellow junior Ray Varner finished second in the 400-meter hurdles (51.80) and ran the anchor-leg of the Hawkeyes' 4x400-meter relay team, which finished fourth. The Hawkeyes' sprint medley team of Richards, Chaney Jr., Chris Barton, and Adam Hairston finished second to Northern Iowa (3:19.55) by only half of a second.

"It was a terrific weekend for us," Wiecezorek said. "I always look at the Drake Relays as our most important meet — a national-level meet, really. [On April 24], we got out to a good start with the 4x100-meter relay making the final heat and the NCAA qualifying standard. Everything pretty much went from there."

The 12,298 people in attendance at the 100th-annual Drake Relays over the weekend created an electric atmosphere for the athletes competing.

Iowa outdoor redshirt freshman sensation Karessa Farley once again was able to block out the pressure of a high-profile meet and perform at a very high level. After taking fifth in the prelims of the 100-meter hurdles, the Barbados native blazed past the competition for second place among some of the best collegiate competition in the country, even after being tripped up by a hurdle at the end.

"I have never felt myself going that fast," Farley said. "The hurdle came a bit too soon because of that."

Not that it's something to worry about.

"It's a good problem to have," she said.

The youthful distance team was also on display, with freshmen Betsy Flood, McKenzie Melander, and Brooke Eilers teaming up with sophomore Amanda Hardesty to take third in the 4x1,600-meter relay with a time of 19:36.43.

The Hawkeye 4x1,600 team finished behind Minnesota, which won the event for the third time in four years, and Baylor.

Flood also competed in the 4x800 meter relay on April 24, taking sixth place with fellow freshman Brittany Dlh, sophomore Lauren Hardesty, and senior Jennie Docherty.

While the 4x100 team failed to make the finals after taking 12th in prelims, the 4x200 team of freshman Nicole Erickson, sophomores Tiffany Hendricks, and Kara-Aretha Graham and junior Rhonda-Kaye Trusty took ninth place in the relay.

Head coach Layne Anderson saw some room for improvement after the weekend's festivities.

"We need to be more efficient with the baton," he said. "It was good to see some of the younger girls run well, though."

continued to compete well in the outdoor season, taking fifth in the steeplechase in front of a hometown crowd after taking a nasty spill over one of the barriers early in the race.

Former Hawkeye Peaches Roach competed in the women's heptathlon and finished second to 2008 U.S. Olympian Jacquelyn Johnson, who set a 2009 world-best in the event with 6,020 points.

Other notable local finishers were the Iowa City West High girls, who won the 4x100 relay in the high-school portion of the meet, setting a Drake Relays record with a time of 48.69, beating the previous record held by Des Moines Roosevelt.

Next week, the Hawkeyes will head to the Illini Invitational in Champaign, Ill., for their last meet before the Big Ten championships in Columbus, Ohio.

Bulls knot series in 2 OT win

By ANDREW SELIGMAN
 Associated Press

CHICAGO — Another playoff thriller between Chicago and Boston, and this one went to the Bulls.

If the Celtics want to advance, they're going to have to earn it. Ben Gordon scored 22 points, hitting the tying 3-pointer in the first overtime, and the Bulls beat the defending champions, 121-118, in double overtime Sunday to tie their first-round series at two games apiece.

The teams split two tight games in Boston, before the Celtics blew out the Bulls in Game 3. This time, they stretched the drama into a second overtime.

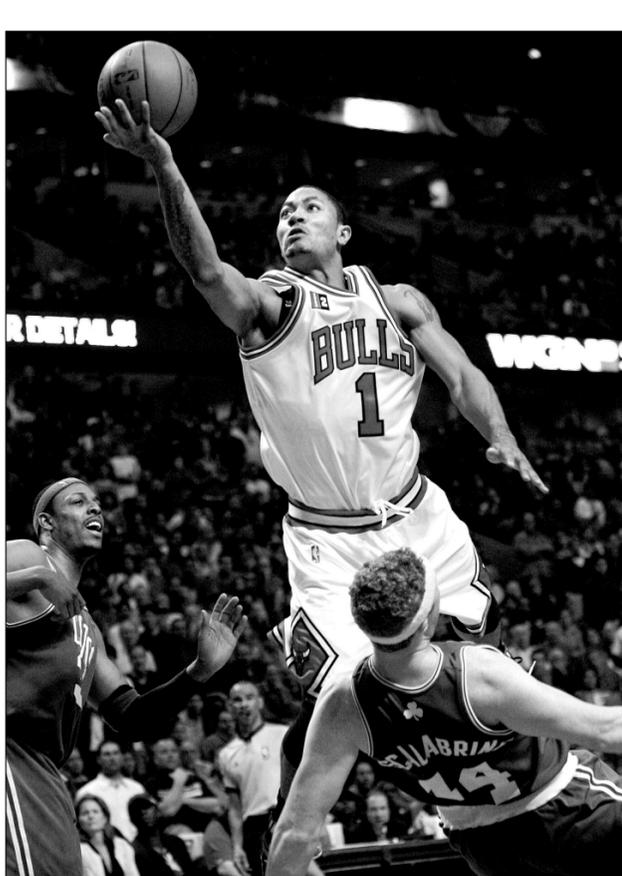

"Everybody I'm talking to is saying this is the most exciting series that they're watching right now," Gordon said.

It's tough to argue.

Derrick Rose added 23 points, 11 rebounds, and nine assists. John Salmons scored 20 points after a slow start, hitting four free throws in the final 26 seconds of the game and blocking Paul Pierce's tying 3-pointer.

Boston's Ray Allen buried a 3-pointer with 9.8 seconds left in regulation to tie it at 96 before Rose missed a potential winning fadeaway in the closing seconds. Gordon came through with 4.5 seconds left in the first overtime, hitting a 3-pointer over Pierce to tie it at 110, and the Bulls never trailed in the second OT.

Salmons hit two free throws with 26 seconds left and, after a 3-pointer by Pierce, he hit two more at the line. After a timeout, Pierce got the ball on the left side but couldn't shake Salmons, who deflected his 3-pointer.

Chicago Bull Derrick Rose (1) shoots over Boston's Brian Scalabrine (lower right) as Celtic Paul Pierce watches during the second half of Game 4 of a first-round NBA Eastern Conference playoff basketball series in Chicago on Sunday. Rose was high scorer with 23 points in the Bulls' 121-118 win in double overtime.

It was a dramatic end to another dramatic game. On Tuesday, the series will go back to Boston, where the Bulls took Game 1 in overtime and the Celtics won Game 2 by three. "It's 2-2, and we're in a fight," Boston's Rajon Rondo said. "Give them a lot of credit. They stuck with it. They fought back.

They executed down the stretch very well, and we didn't."

Pierce led Boston with 29 points, although he was just 9-for-24. Allen added 28, and Rajon Rondo again hounded the Bulls, finishing with 25 points, 11 rebounds, and 11 assists — his second triple-double of the series.

"We've been here before," Allen said. "That's [what] bothered me so much about this one, because we had opportunities."

Rose, who was outplayed by Rondo in the previous two games, again had trouble hanging onto the ball. He committed seven turnovers for the second-straight time but made up for it with 13 points in the fourth quarter.

Gordon also came through late even though he strained his left hamstring in the second quarter and is scheduled for an MRI on Monday.

Kirk Hinrich added 18 points while containing Pierce. Tyrus Thomas had 14 points and 10 rebounds, and Joakim Noah scored 12 while grabbing 10 boards. The Bulls prevailed despite missing some key free throws down the stretch and were 26 of 35 overall.

"We've got a lot of fight in us, and I'm really happy for the young guys," Gordon said.

The Celtics led by five in the first OT and were still up 110-107 after Allen hit two free throws with 9 seconds left. They were then supposed to foul, but instead, Gordon buried another dramatic 3.

He got the ball near the top of the key and dribbled to his right, hitting the tying shot over Pierce. Rondo then missed a jumper, sending it into a second OT.

Hurricanes force Game 7

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Eric Staal scored two goals less than 3 minutes apart, Cam Ward made 28 saves in his third career playoff shutout and the Carolina Hurricanes routed the New Jersey Devils 4-0 on Sunday night to force a decisive Game 7.

Ray Whitney had a goal and three assists, Jussi Jokinen scored Carolina's first power-play goal since Game 2, Chad LaRose had two assists and Staal added an assist for the Hurricanes.

They outshot New Jersey 37-28 while their reconfigured top line produced the first three goals, and that helped lead to the most lopsided final score of the NHL's tightest first-round pairing.

The best-of-seven series is even at three games apiece, with the winner-take-all Game 7 set for Tuesday night in New Jersey.

Cap-sized: Washington forces Game 7

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Poti had a goal and two assists, and the Washington Capitals won, 5-3, Sunday in Game 6 against the New York Rangers, who were playing without suspended coach John Tortorella.

Rangers goalie Henrik Lundqvist didn't make it to the third period for the second straight game, and Poti torched his former team as the Capitals tied the first-round playoff series and set up a decisive Game 7 on Tuesday night in Washington.

The Capitals had trailed the series 3-1 before a pair of routs.

Tortorella served a one-game suspension following a confrontation with a fan Friday during New York's 4-0 loss in Game 5 that sent the series back to Madison Square Garden. Tortorella squirted water into the crowd and threw a water bottle over the glass and into the stands.

LeBron lifts Cavs past Pistons

James had 36 points, 13 rebounds and eight assists to lead the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 99-78 victory over the Detroit Pistons on Sunday, sweeping the Eastern Conference first-round series.

The top-seeded Cavs might be off for more than a week, waiting for Atlanta or Miami to advance.

Detroit, meanwhile, will have its longest offseason since 2001 and about $20 million in salary-cap space to rebuild a once-proud team.

James made his first four shots — including a windmill dunk. He helped put the Pistons away for good with a 16-6 run midway through the third quarter.

Mo Williams scored a career playoff-high 24 for the Cavs.

Detroit's Antonio McDyess had 26 points, tying a career playoff high.

Rolen gets late hit to help Jays win

CHICAGO (AP) — Scott Rolen hit a go-ahead RBI single in the eighth inning, helping the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Chicago White Sox, 4-3, Sunday to secure their sixth-straight series win this season.

Rod Barajas had three hits for the Blue Jays, who have won eight of 11 games.

Vernon Wells led off the eighth with a double off White Sox reliever Scott Linebrink (0-1). Adam Lind walked then Rolen drove in Wells.

After a shaky start, Toronto ace Roy Halladay (4-1) settled down and retired 12 of the last 14 batters he faced.

He allowed three runs and scattered eight in seven innings. Halladay had six strikeouts and walked his first batter in two starts.

Iowa cornerback Bradley Fletcher rushes as Michigan State's Brett Swenson knocks through a field goal in the third quarter of the Hawkeyes' game against the Spartans at Spartan Stadium on Oct. 4, 2008. Fletcher was taken in the third round of the 2009 NFL draft on Sunday by the St. Louis Rams.

last week, while Bruggeman was projected to be a late-round pick. As a result of not being drafted, both players found themselves signing deals as undrafted free agents. King agreed to terms Sunday evening with the Tennessee Titans, and Bruggeman reached a deal with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. Also not finding themselves drafted this weekend were defensive tackle Matt Kroul and wide receiver Andy Brodell, who, as did King and Bruggeman, struck deals as undrafted free agents after the draft. Brodell agreed to terms with the Green Bay Packers shortly after the draft, and Kroul will join Greene in New York after agreeing to a deal with the Jets.

The Hawkeyes countered quickly with a run of their own in the bottom of the frame. Freshman catcher Dallas Burke scored on fielder's choice by junior Ryan Durant.

Iowa tacked on two more runs in the second inning on a two-out home run by freshman outfielder Sean Flanagan.

But for the next four innings, the Michigan State offense effectively put the game out of reach as the Hawkeyes failed to capitalize at the plate with runners in scoring position.

"We have to take advantage of our opportunities," Burke said. "In all phases, we just weren't really locked in at all times."

The Spartans reclaimed the lead in the top of the third, though, going up 5-3. Designated hitter Johnny Lee plated three runs on double to right-center field and was later brought in on a sacrifice fly.

In the top of the fourth, Robertson walked the bases loaded and surrendered a grand slam to Michigan State catcher Eric Roof. The Spartans then added their 10th run in the fifth and record three more in the seventh for a 13-3 lead.

Iowa pitcher Wes Freie throws a pitch against Michigan State at Banks Field on Sunday. The Hawkeyes lost to the Spartans, 14-5.

'It's hard. But we come to the park the same day. It's not like we're coming here depressed. We're just not getting the job done.'

- Mike McQuillan, freshman second baseman

Iowa tallied back-to-back runs in the seventh and eighth but went quietly in the ninth to close out the loss before hosting a kids clinic after the game. "It's hard," freshman second baseman Mike McQuillan said of the sweep following a three-game winning streak. "But we come to the park the same day. It's not like we're coming here depressed. We're just not getting the job done." The Hawks will meet Northern Iowa in the Corridor Classic in Cedar Rapids on Tuesday.

they wouldn't let me get in there today."

The most recent injuries add to the continually growing list of players that have been injured on the year — Kurtis Muller, the sophomore center fielder, was out earlier in the year with a hamstring problem, junior catcher Tyson Blaser is out with a torn ligament in thumb, and senior first baseman Kevin Hoef has also been out with some injuries.

"It's a tough situation with the injuries all year long," head coach Jack Dahm said. "Justin's probably done for the year ... Kody, he'll be back. I don't know if it will be this week or next week."

Iowa will play on Tuesday in the final Corridor Classic without the help of its two seniors.

"It's going to be a huge blow for us because they're two great guys to have on the field and they're confident in what they do," freshman Mike McQuillan said.

NFL

With Brown uncertain, Eagles make deal for Hobbs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles, dealing with a veteran cornerback who wants to be traded, packaged some extra draft picks to trade for a veteran cornerback.

The Eagles began the second day of the NFL draft Sunday with three trades, the third of which netted them the Patriots' Ellis Hobbs, a four-year veteran cornerback who was New England's third-round pick in 2005.

The acquisition of Hobbs pleased the Eagles' disgruntled Sheldon Brown, but only because he hoped it could lead to his departure from Philadelphia.

"I think it's great," Brown told the Associated Press. "I look at it as great news in terms of me being traded."

Eagle head coach Andy Reid wasn't ready to accommodate Brown's wishes.

"This doesn't have anything to do with Sheldon," Reid said. "Sheldon is on this team. [Hobbs] gives us depth at cornerback. You can never have enough quality cornerbacks."

Hobbs was acquired after a series of swapped draft picks.

The Eagles first traded their third-round pick, 85th overall, to the New York Giants for another third-round pick, 91st overall, and a fifth-round pick.

Minutes later they traded that 91st pick to the Seattle Seahawks for a fifth-round pick and a seventh-round pick, plus a third-round pick in the 2010.

That left Philadelphia with a half-dozen fifth-round picks, so they shipped two of them to the Patriots for Hobbs.

"It's a shock at first, because you play your whole career in an organization," said Hobbs, who has one year remaining on his rookie contract. "But it's a business."

That's how the Eagles are treating it with Brown, their second-round pick in 2002 and a starter the past five seasons.

Brown, who has four years left on an eight-year contract that will pay him $2 million this season, went public with his demand for a new deal or a trade two weeks before the draft.

The Eagles responded with a terse statement that made it clear a new contract was out of the question.

"I knew the repercussions of what I was doing," said Brown, who has not committed to attending next week's mandatory minicamp. "I wanted a new deal, but that wasn't happening. So I want a trade. If it can happen now, because they're in a better situation, that's fine. But I realize it could take time."

Hobbs seemed aware of the Eagles' situation.

"Obviously so ... to make a move like this," Hobbs said. "I heard rumors anyway that they were interested and things like that. I didn't have any expectations as far as something would shake this early."

"They're bringing me in here for a reason. But everything has to be earned out there. Nothing is going to be given."

Cubs pound Cards, end skid

TOM GANNAM/ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chicago Cub Kosuke Fukudome circles the bases after hitting a three-run home run in the eighth inning against the St. Louis Cardinals on Sunday in St. Louis. The Cubs beat the Cardinals, 10-3, to avoid the series sweep.

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Kosuke Fukudome didn't want a birthday celebration from his teammates. He had no trouble giving them a present, though.

Fukudome hit a three-run homer and drove in a career-high five runs on his 32nd birthday, helping the Cubs end a four-game skid with a 10-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals on Sunday.

Fukudome went 3-for-4 to hike his average to .371 after hitting .257 last season. He hit his fourth homer in the eighth off lefty reliever Trevor Miller to finish the scoring.

"More than hitting, winning is the most important thing," Fukudome said through a translator. "I'm too old for a cake, and I don't want to get fat."

However, hitting the homer off a southpaw was something to relish, Fukudome said.

"I think it is important to let manager Lou [Piniella] to know that I'm comfortable to hit a left-handed pitcher," Fukudome said.

Rich Harden (2-1) struck out nine in six innings for Chicago, which ended a four-game skid.

"It was definitely an important game because we had lost four in a row," Harden said. "You want to treat every start the same but you want to go out there and stop a slide like that."

Harden allowed four hits, including two solo homers. "He was very good," St. Louis second baseman Skip Schumaker said about Harden. "He had that split working for him and it was really difficult to hit."

home winning streak ended. The Cardinals have won 10 of their 13 home games this season and are 13-6 overall, good for first in the NL Central. St. Louis finished its six-game home stand with a 5-1 record.

"We got really good results," Cardinal manager Tony La Russa said. "The way we look at it is what we put into it. Now we've got Atlanta and Washington and just keep doing what we're doing as far as the effort and keep getting better."

Chicago had 14 hits after scoring just five runs in its previous four games. Aaron Miles went 3-for-5 and scored twice.

"It was a good game for us," Piniella said. "Let's see if we can build on it."

Derrek Lee hit an RBI double in Chicago's three-run first but left the game before the Cubs took the field in the bottom half because of neck spasms. Micah Hoffpauir replaced him at first base. Piniella said Lee likely would not go on the disabled list.

"Yeah, it was nice to put some runs on the board in the first inning," Piniella said. "We've had trouble with men in scoring position. Today, we did a heck of a lot better. We gave our pitcher some runs to work it."

Hoffpauir led off the seventh with a home run to give the Cubs a 7-2 lead. The homer snapped a four-game team homerless drought.

Todd Wellemeyer (1-2) was tagged for six runs, five earned, and eight hits in five innings. He walked Hoffpauir with the bases loaded in the second to make it 4-0.

"It didn't go too well," Wellemeyer said. "They got some guys on base in the first and they capitalized on it and got them in and that's all there is too it."

La Russa said he believes Wellemeyer will improve.

"He's not as sharp as he can be. That's one of the beauties of playing 6 months and getting 30 starts," La Russa said. "He's not going to give in."

Yadier Molina and Rick Ankiel hit solo drives for St. Louis. Molina extended his hitting streak to 10 games with his second homer of the season.

Cardinals slugger Albert Pujols reached base four times before hitting into a game-ending double play. He walked three times and was hit on the hip by Harden in the fifth.

Notes: St. Louis SS Khalil Greene committed his fifth error in 18 games in the fourth inning. It also was Cardinals' 20th in 19 games. ... Alfonso Soriano got hit in the helmet by Wellemeyer in the second inning. He stayed in the game. ... The 10 runs allowed were the most this season by the Cardinals.

Having Sex, Playing Video Games, Both, or Neither?

- Fun alone: Both.
  - More fun with another person: Both.
  - Most fun with two to three good friends: Video Games.
  - Often a fertile topic for discussion between you and your friends: Both.
  - Often a fertile topic for discussion between you and your parents: Neither.
  - Poor performances can be immediately reattempted: Video Games.
  - Can be a ridiculously expensive habit to maintain: Both.
  - A successful session usually requires a combination of severe focus and mental alacrity: Video Games.
  - A good soundtrack helps: Both.
  - Alcohol might actually improve one's performance: Sex.
  - Too much, and you'll start putting on weight: Video Games.
  - Even when it's not that fun, it's still more enjoyable than going to work: Both.
  - Still fun over the Internet: Video Games
  - Hard to turn it into a source of income: Video Games.
  - Hard to turn it into a legitimate source of income: Both.
  - Your hygiene not an issue: Video Games.
  - There exists furniture designed specifically for the activity: Both.
  - ... But any old couch will also do: Both.
  - Yelling and screaming is understandable: Video Games.
  - Yelling and screaming is desirable: Sex.
  - Is mostly uncontroversial when children are allowed to participate: Video Games.
  - Clueless button-mashing usually works in one's favor: Neither.
  - Strategy guides are helpful: Video Games.
