UI prepared for H1N1 virus

UI officials say they’re taking all necessary measures to protect the campus against H1N1 cases.

More than 150 UI students and, perhaps as many as 200, might have exhibited symptoms similar to those of the H1N1 flu virus in the past week. That estimate — based on UI’s analysis of patients at Student Health Service — is unofficial.

because the university has suspended testing for the virus, said Ann Larson, the Student Health interim medical director. Because flu seasons have yet to begin, officials are assuming all people who have been sick have the H1N1 virus.

If the campus holds up to a pandemic, UI’s student health service will have the ability to treat many of the cases. However, leftover pandemic flu virus patients will be sent to local hospitals.

Curbef hearings near Curief

Curbef CONTINUED FROM A1

The proposed "curbief" ordinance would restrict citizens for being out past designated hours, which are divided based on age group. The law does not label ordinances as "curbief," but could be not be compliant with the city's group of people who are obstructing traffic at a curfew, and is being out on public property at night.

After long discussions, all four city councilors were in favor of moving on with the ordinance, as the councilors have not heard a "unique enforcement" of the ordinance.

Councilors said they knew it's important to address the entire issue of whether to support the curfew.

"I want to make sure it's properly covered by the curfew," said Councilor Mike Wright.

But councilors agreed that they would not be able to send the wrong message to Iowa City businesses to prevent anyone from going to the bars.

If we go through with this I want to make sure we don't send a message to our youth that we think we have a problem child," said Iowa City Police Chief Bill Feminini.

"They need to see some person that will be able to remind them that they are part of a family," said Feminini.

If passed, the ordinance would allow the city to issue tickets to people who violate it.

Some community members and they have already made up their minds about the ordinance.

Youngsters who are up past midnight will not be out for a "curbief," said Iowa City native Greg Brown.

"We need to do it," said Brown.

But for now, they're focusing on their best behavior.

"There are all pretty enthusiastic at the end of Ramadan," Alaa El-Hajj said. "We get to see all of our friends and relatives. It's great feeling, and a huge accomplishment."

Remembering that day

JUSTIN SUGG

Today is a day for remembrance. Some people may have woken up with nostalgia as a day when something horrible happened. Some may be spending time with family to remember some of the names of our fallen. Some may be reflecting, but many will not.

The attacks occurred my freshman year in October. I was a young man with a psychological discussion that morning—because I had a psychological discussion that morning. I was going to rush the first week of school and join a bunch on campus, it is enough to meet the requirement. But I also mark that first year you were required to attend the UF’s welcoming event.

Another example of a mandatory university activity through the Pick One website. It offers a wide variety of activities students involved on campus to promote their overall university experience. By Oct. 1, students involved on campus to promote their overall university experience.

The metal ceiling

An increasing number of female artists are breaking gender 'norms' to journey into the realm of extreme metal.

By Sarah Larson

The return of Napalm Death to The Englert Theatre in Iowa City on Sept. 22 marks the end of a long labor of love for fans of the band. Napalm Death was one of the first bands to emerge from the extreme metal genre in the 1980s, and their influence can be heard in the work of many bands that followed.

Napalm Death's abrasive, razor-sharp sound was a combination of extreme metal and noise, and they paved the way for the emergence of other extreme metal genres.

The Englert Theatre is proud to present the stunning, critically acclaimed anime film Akira by Katsuhiro Otomo. Aki ra is a powerful and thought-provoking film that explores themes of rebellion, freedom, and the dangers of totalitarianism.

The film follows a young man named Kaneda and his friends as they fight against the oppressive regime of the future. With its striking visuals and thought-provoking story, Aki ra is a must-see for anime fans and film lovers alike.

The Playboy founder classic films to be shown at Englert

Now here's the thing. I'm not sure if you know this, but the Playboy founder classic films to be shown at the Englert Theatre this fall are not a bad idea. Judging by the reaction, it seems that people are enjoying the event.

Some of the films include "Classic films you won't believe are classics," sponsored by M.C. Ginsburg, and "The best of the classic films to the Englert Theatre," sponsored by Mark Ginsburg, the founder of the classic films event. The event is expected to be well-attended, with tickets sold out in advance.

UI junior Russell Martinez is this year’s Student Hawkeye Fan of the Year, and he has all the hawk-spirit and dedication to prove it.

By DEE FABBRICATORE

Though the UI’s overall enrollment has dropped for the second consecutive year, officials say they are working to increase a larger student population in order to maintain a diverse, minority, international, and graduate education.

Enrollment dropped by fewer than 1 percent, from 30,561 in fall 2008 to 30,328 this fall, according to the University’s Wednesday UDI officials. Undergraduate enrollment is not worried about the drop because the number is not statistically significant.

“We will have to be careful for alarm at the drop,” said UI Registrar Tom Moore. “The university is focused on the number of incoming freshmen — from 4,246 last year to 4,083 this fall — because of budget cuts and economic reasons.”

While numbers are down in both the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences and the College of Nursing, the Graduate College’s numbers have increased. This fall, 5,719 students were enrolled in the Graduate College, a 2.4 percent increase. Moore said the falling enrollment is possibly the cause for the increase.

And officials from other universities agreed.

Our enrollment remains strong despite the economy, and we have enrolled a record number of honors, international and diverse students. We remain confident that students will continue to find the UI a great education at a great price.

Overall enrollment numbers are down at the UI, while Iowa State University’s are up.

While the UI was one of the more consistent schools, some programs and colleges are still growing, similar to Iowa State University.

UI sophomore Zach Lockhart, who chose the University of Iowa over Iowa State and the University of Nebraska for its commitment to quality, received a plaque for his school spirit.

The very thought of Martinez associating a Cyclone fan is, well, not a pleasing matter.

If for some sick reason Russell started a Cyclone fan, I don’t know who would kill him first, me or hop,” Nolman said.

McShay's Best Available defeats Off Daily, 25-21, on a last-second touchdown Thursday night.

By MATT SMITH

McShay's Best Available defeated Off Daily for most of the first half — one to Blake Yuhas. But Buck McShay's Best Available was able to move it up on Mel Kiper's board.

The team's defense powered through the Off Daily offense and made several key tackles that helped set up the comeback. Kadolph, who had a seven-yard touchdown in the first half — one to Blake Langdon — was left in the teams' first flag-football game of the intramural flag football season.

With only five seconds left in the game, Kadolph, who played with a broken finger, threw the ball to a teammate and made a touchdown.

"I think we're better suited for women in high school when we played with a broken finger," Yuhas said. "And we're better suited for women in high school when we played with a broken finger."

"Iowa State is going to be that litmus test for us on how we’re going to do in the Big Ten because (the Cyclones) are much more like a Big Ten team than the teams that we’ve played up to this point," Iowa head coach Sharon Grossbaum said. "Being a Hawkeye, you always want to beat Iowa State. It’s just that rivalry thing. But one of the things that’s bugs this year is they’re ranked pretty high."

One key to Iowa’s early success has been its team defense. Iowa currently leads the Big Ten in digs, blocks and Former Cyclone-turned-Hawkeye Joe Conklin is making a name in Iowa City.

By JAMIE KEIN

The measure of a great coach is not always indicated by the numbers that reside in the win-loss column. Sometimes, it’s the radiant desire to recognize an end of an era and call for a fresh perspective to re-energize our programs, which best depicts the “serve above all” mantra.

By those standards, former Iowa State head coach Dan McCarney is a great coach. After serving as the Cyclones’ head guy for 12 seasons, he decided to end his tenure.

When McCarney announced his resignation, redshirt freshman Joe Conklin had two options: fly or fight. The Davenport native had turned down an offer to walk on at Iowa and invitations from Division-II schools to play for McCarney at Iowa State.

After rethinking his first year, the defensive back was amidst the following year — McCarney’s final season — with an injury.

“I think Dan McCarney is really well-liked throughout the state that he was a great coach, great individual, a great person,” Conklin said. “Leaving — being one the biggest reasons that I went up there — when he left dealing with another personality and having to prove ourselves over another program — it is real difficult on the players to go through a coaching change.

Conklin initially made the decision to stay to play for a starting spot under new coach Gene Chizik, but later, in 2007, Conklin decided to leave the school that had once enthusiastically recruited and transferred in Iowa.

“I had always maintained a good relationship with the Cyclones [at Iowa],” he said. “It was real nice to get the opportunity to come back and be a part of this program.”

The talented Hawkeyes fan said his final was where he belongs, donning the Black and Gold and running out of the Kinnick Stadium tunnel with AUD’s guitar riff penetrating the confines of the stadium. The end zone is where the Hawkeyes are.

Conklin demonstrated by jayhawkers football almost surpassed Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz. He won’t on any special teams. Ferentz said, he was there from Day One.

The relentless disposition Conklin has demonstrated since his time at Assumption High School has positioned him as Iowa’s No. 2 safe- ty behind junior Scott Greenwood.

“Joe’s a pretty lazy guy,” said center Ryan Broekhoff, who roomed with Conklin during his high-school days in Bettendorf. “He’s a good guy to have on your side. He’s a guy you can trust. He played at Assumption in high school, and we were kind of friends, but we knew that when we played them, he was going to come out and lead.”

Ferentz described Conklin as a “gym cat” who constantly occurs alone — the needed preparation for the matchup against Iowa State.

“I’ve definitively seen what Jack Trice (Stadium) can be like,” Conklin said. “You know it is going to be one of the most hostile places in America. Bettendorf. And it is something we are going to have to face to face for and a challenge they are going to have to overcome.

“Being there kind of gives me an inside perspective, and I think we know we are going to be in for a tough Saturday.”

The guys up front are finally healthy and ready to go — the position changes could finally be over.

Welcome to musical chairs, featuring the Iowa offensive line. It’s springtime at Iowa City, and “Kuster Sandwich” is blaring in the background. As spring ball begins without all-world tackle Brandon Geiss, Iowa’s offensive line is thought to be one of the team’s main strengths. But everyone in the group is just hoping to find a spot at one of the five open chairs before the season is over and the music stops.

Everyone watching the Hawkeyes spring action agrees. Offensive line coach Rick Kuster admits it seems a little nuts with so many offensive linemen in camp. But senior Bruggeman and senior Geiss on the field. Both have finished off their time at Iowa, and they await the NFL draft.

Bruggeman, who started all 13 games at center for the Hawkeyes last season, bloomed late in his career after coming to Iowa as a walk-on. He was an essential cog in the offensive line that produced big running lanes for Greene as he galloped for 1,850 yards and 20 touchdowns.

Similarly, Geiss’s performance at right guard earned him first-team All-American honors from Rivals.com in 2008, leaving a gaping hole in the right side of Iowa’s line. Senior Rafael Amaya would seem to be Bruggeman’s replacement at center, but Geiss’s spot remains open.
