Iowa quarterback Ricky Stanzi acknowledges Hawkeye fans after Iowa defeated Penn State in State College, Pa., on Sept. 26. The final score was 21-10. Stanzi, criticized for having a slow start in previous games this season, performed to the tune of 11 completions for 135 yards.

A UI volunteer program tries to connect students to the community.

By JOHN DOETKOTT

For most of the UI student population, Saturdays are for two things: sleeping and Hawkeye football. But some students are finding time to add a different activity to the list: community service.

A small group of students spent their Saturday cleaning up around Old Brick, 26 E. Market St., choosing volunteering over getting an early start tailgating for the Penn State game on Sept. 26. Students laughed and talked as they raked and bagged leaves, learning more about each other and finding joy in volunteering.

UISG put on the UI's first-ever 50-Yard Line Game Watch Party during Saturday's victory over Penn State. UISG Vice President JD Moran said approximately 70 sober students enjoyed free pizza and watched on big screens as the Hawkeyes shone.

"It was a pretty great turnout," Moran said. "We didn't expect that many people."

Family must wait for home

One family will have to wait as a city order stops construction on their home.

By JOHN DOETKOTT

A city order halted a Habitat for Humanity and UI Homecoming Council project that would give a home to a family in need.

Kevin Paulsen, the outreach director for the Homecoming Council, said the goal of the project was "to involve the university and to show that students do care and want to give back."

And luckily, that goal is still reachable.

Alpha Diallo, along with his wife and three kids, will still have a home come May 2010 thanks to the Tippie Build 2010, which has adopted the Diallo family as the benefactor of its housing project.

The Tippie Build is in its third year of partnership with Iowa Valley Habitat for Humanity, and the house was being planned when the Home-

Shelter House coming closer to being a reality

Coralville's First Christian Church raises $600 for Iowa City's Shelter House.

By SCOTT RAYNOR
scott-raynor@uiowa.edu

After years of waiting, those involved in building Iowa City's new Shelter House say they are relieved to see the project in its final planning stages.

The transition from operating a homeless shelter in a building intended for a single family to a two-story facility with room for 70 beds has been long and difficult, said Crissy Canganelli, the Shelter House's executive director.

Officials have spent much of the past few years trying to gain funding to build the Shelter House as well as figure out the logistics of Iowa's new sex-offender law some thought would conflict with the new building's location.

Now, officials can finally begin to think about the details of running the facility.

This past weekend, First Christian Church in Coralville raised $600 for Iowa City's Shelter House at its Christian music fundraiser.

The money raised by the church will not go toward the construction of Shelter House's new facility, but rather its day-to-day operation costs after it opens in October 2010.

The shelter received a $2.6 million grant in early

Regent backs new dorm

The UI's newest residence hall was built in 1968.

By NICK PEDLEY

nicholas-pedley@uiowa.edu

Forty-one years after the UI last built a residence hall, one member of the state Board of Regents suggests it's time for a new one.

Regent Robert Downer of Iowa City said at the board's last meeting that the UI should consider building a new dormitory to help alleviate its current housing problems.

The UI has long operated at full or above capacity in its housing, forcing students to be placed in temporary housing each year, Downer noted.

He said he believes a new complex would improve student academic performance and retention rates.

"I would like the new residence hall to roughly house 700 to 800 students," Downer said.

Downer said he thinks the UI should demolish Quadrangle Residence Hall, the UI's oldest dorm complex, and build a new facility in its place.

The UI last built a new dorm in 1968, when it constructed Slater Hall. At that time, the UI had half the enrollment it does now.

At present, the university has more than 5,000 students in nine residence halls. At the start of the semester, 138 students were living in temporary housing, up from last year's 112.

To further Downer's proposal, UI officials need to develop an initial plan and present it to the regents.

However, Downer said, the regents have not yet filed a resolution directing the university to take action.

UI junior Clayton Schommer, who lived in Quadrangle for two years, said he thought the university should look further into the issue.

"If the only issue is old facilities, then I think that a facelift would be sufficient," he said. "But if the issue is too many students and not enough room, then a new dorm should be looked into."

Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa are not facing similar problems to those of the UI, Downer said.

ISU predicted higher enrollment numbers when it added new facilities years ago, he said, and officials overbuilt the school's housing infrastructure. Occupancy dropped to ranges around 80-90 percent.

Because the UI operates at more than 100 percent capacity, the school earns more money from room and board than ISU and UNI annually. If a new complex is constructed, funding would come from reserves and bonds paid with revenue gained from housing income.

"Funds would be strictly from the housing department," said Downer, and separate departments can't take money from others.

The regent said he hopes the board can take up the issue by spring.

CITY COUNCIL ELECTIONS

Bazzell aims to patch up town-gown relationship

By NICOLE KARLIS

nicole-karlis@uiowa.edu

Jared Bazzell never thought his college days would involve fiercely campaigning for a political seat.

But during his first few years at the UI, he saw a disconnect between students and city officials, he said, motivating him to try to improve the relationship.

Now, the UI senior is in the race for a spot on the Iowa City City Council.

"I really think that the City Council right now doesn't respect students to the level it needs to," he said. "... I'm not afraid to stand up there and voice my opinion."

The Cedar Rapids native said he has acquired leadership experience that could help him in next week's primary election.

From traveling on the UI debate team to being the sole student employee in the UI Business Manager's Office — which handles UI property contracts — he hopes his experience and student status will give him an edge.

"Jared has always been a leader," said mother Cheryl Bazzell. "People follow Jared because he has something to say."

Jared Bazzell said he thinks a younger voice on the council is vital to better connecting Iowa City and the UI community — a relationship that too often ignores students, he said.

"Everything that affects the students happens when they are out of town," he said.

Bazzell said he is also concerned with the city's public safety.

"We're hiring recycling coordinators right now, but we can't hire police officers," he said. "We can't

SHELTER HOUSE

Canganelli said they have been very fortunate in receiving revenue, but the variations in funding and sources of funding makes operating Shelter House difficult.

"There is so much volatility in our revenue stream," she said. "Shelter House has no control over the funding we receive."

Officials bought the new facility's site in December 2004 after Shelter House received a special zoning exception. Neighbors appealed the exception, and the case eventually went to the Iowa Supreme Court, which decided in favor of the Shelter House in 2008.

And when Shelter House broke ground last

July, community members expressed concern that it may be in violation of newly passed act which strengthened the state's sex-offender law, which prevents registered sex offenders from being within 300 feet of places where children gather, such as libraries and daycares.

Despite protests from citizens, the city has said the shelter is clearly not in violation of the law.

Assistant City Attorney Eric Goers said the sex-offender law only has legal repercussions to sex offenders, not any organization that provides any services to a sex offender.

Still, some community members don't want the facility in their neighborhood.

"It is not likely [for something to happen], but it is a chance, but one chance in a million, you don't welcome that readily," said Joyce Barker, the president of the Waterfront Neighborhood Association.

The final challenge Shelter House faced was the recently resolved struggle of acquiring funding for the new building.

"It has been an incredible release to find ourselves abruptly at our [funding] goal has sort of sent a shock wave through us," she said.

Canganelli said she is elated to have the project nearing an end and to be less constrained by the small facility.

"It is just an old house, an old single-family house," she said. "We are going from working out of what was someone's home into really going into a facility."

HABITAT

The family from Guinea will have to wait until May for their new home to be ready, a drastic change from the November date that was scheduled under the original project. The groundbreaking for the new location, 2449 Whispering Prairie Ave., took place Sept. 25, but for now, the family is forced to live in temporary housing.

A cease and desist order, issued Sept. 24, barred construction on the original project after officials discovered the lot had been improperly subdivided.

Mark Patton, the executive director of Iowa Valley Habitat for Humanity, said the former owner of the property did not follow the correct procedures when he split the lot in 1992.

Patton also said Iowa City changed its property tracking system in 1994, causing the irregularity to go unnoticed. Habitat for Humanity bought the land in 2007, Patton said, and the city granted it permission to build on the site.

Habitat for Humanity had laid a foundation on the site, and above-ground construction was set to begin on Sept. 25.

"The city's not mad at us," Patton said. "[Officials] actually feel sorry for us because we put in all this time and effort."

Patton did not expect construction on the lot to take place in the near future and said Habitat for Humanity would seek compensation for funds already invested in the project. He said the organization's goal is to provide housing for families in need, and if the group is unable to do that on this lot, it would focus efforts on more promising projects.

"We wouldn't be buying it just to have a piece of grass to mow," Patton said.

a new program sponsored by University Housing that offers students a chance to give back to the community.

Ben Parks, the Hillcrest Hall coordinator and chairman of the Saturdays in Service committee, said the program is open to all students, but he encouraged first-year students in particular to get familiar with Iowa City.

"By going out into the community, you get a better sense for, and appreciation for, the greater community," Parks said.

Erin Gorman, who works with AmeriCorps VISTA and helped pick up leaves over the weekend, said these experiences help students become a part of the community.

"Students are learning different ways to connect to the community," Gorman said.

UI junior Brandon Pearson said the value of the program goes beyond any specific project.

"I really like what we're doing," he said. "I think it helps give college students a better reputation around the community."

The program partners with local agencies to create a variety of projects. On Sept. 26, students also worked at Lake Macbride on a trail-restoration project, and at the first session, on Aug. 24, students built walls for Habitat for Humanity and worked with the Preemie Project, which does knitting work for premature and critically ill patients.

Parks said program officials look to create a wide range of projects that appeal to all students.

"What we are hearing more and more from students is that they want these things," he said. "Our goal is to put people with what they are interested in and passionate about."

Students can get involved through a listserv, and Parks said that soon, students will be able to sign up on the University Housing website. He also said the program created a Facebook page in an attempt to make it as accessible as possible to students. But Parks made it clear that it's up to the students to go beyond one-day projects and get truly involved.

"While we are making that initial connection, we are asking students to take that next step and make a commitment," he said.

Later he noted, "Even one-time volunteering things I think can be powerful."

For students such as Pearson who said he would continue to attend the service events, volunteering is indeed powerful.

"It's just that feeling that you're helping out and you're doing something to make this community that we live in a better place," he said.

event would have cost around $70,000 — an amount that couldn't be justified by UISG or UI officials.

Use of the IMU Commons was provided free of charge and the only cost of the event to the organizers was pizza — under $200.

UI junior Kristin Fuhs, a therapeutic recreation major who attended the event, said, "There were a lot of students; I was impressed by the number of people."

UISG hopes to make the 50-Yard Line a tradition for away games, and the event may take place at some home games, such as this weekend's meeting with Arkansas State.

"We're definitely going to do it again," Moran said. "It was great to see that kind of scene, outside of a bar."

Though mostly UI students attended the event, as the game went on students and IMU patrons alike crowded around the screens to catch the finale of the upset victory.

"There were a couple of weddings going on," said UISG member Molly McAndrew, who helped organize the event. "One of the brides caught the end of the game in her wedding dress."

For safety and precautionary reasons, require H1N1 vaccinations

The novel H1N1 virus started flu season with infections reported throughout the country. Iowa City is not immune to this threat; UI officials recently said the virus had potentialy infected as many as 200 people on campus. The virus' novel nature allows it to hit younger people especially hard. Most H1N1 fatalities are small children and young adults — an age group with a strong concentration in Iowa City. Because Iowa City has a large population susceptible to H1N1, the UI Hospitals and Clinics should reinstate its mandatory vaccination program for staff members.

UIHC required all staff to receive the vaccine until the Service Employees International Union Local 199 — the group representing nurses and other hospital staff — filed for an injunction against the UIHC on Sept. 8. Both the UIHC and SEIU Local 199 have agreed to third-party arbitration, and the hospital has agreed to suspend mandatory vaccination, pending arbitration.

UI spokesman Tom Moore said the UIHC's Sept. 23 decision to halt the program was out of concern for union members' objections and that the hospital still supports mandatory vaccination for all staff — excluding those allergic to the vaccine or staff members with religious objections.

SEIU Local 199 President and registered nurse Cathy Glasson disagrees with UIHC's position, arguing for a voluntary vaccination program and better education for staff members. She said she's not opposed to the vaccine and thinks vaccination could significantly reduce infection and mortality rates in the hospital. Glasson, however, said vaccination alone is inadequate in preventing the spread of influenza. She argued that the hospital's stance focuses too much on vaccination and not enough on other preventative measures, such as fitting staff for N-95 masks. Mandatory vaccinations could also drive qualified staff members away if they refused, Glasson contended.

Moore stood by the UIHC's stance, citing studies and an article two UI faculty members wrote in the British Medical Journal supporting mandatory vaccination.

The UIHC's principal motivation in mandating vaccination is the current vaccination rate, which Moore said stands at 84 percent. The British Medical Journal article said health-care facilities that required staff to receive vaccines reached a rate of 98 percent. Moore said he'd like to see the UIHC reach that level as well.

The H1N1 vaccine should be mandatory for all staff — not just for their benefit, but for everyone's. H1N1 has yet to be the prolific killer seasonal influenza has been in the past, but it has been more dangerous than regular flu so far. The Centers for Disease Control attributed all 122 flu-related deaths in America this past summer to H1N1 and said on its website the new virus could be as prevalent as seasonal influenza this flu season.

Hospital workers and other health-care providers are on the frontlines in the fight against the flu. This makes them more susceptible to contract and spread the virus — the consequences of which could be fatal. The CDC reports fatalities among children aged between 1 and 10 increase dramatically if the children are already weakened with another illness. Hospital workers who aren't vaccinated pose potential hazards to children seeking treatment for other illnesses. While Glasson's concerns should be taken into account — and the union's emphasis on education is important as well — UIHC officials should require vaccination for hospital workers.

Even if the vaccine doesn't provide total immunity, it's still better than having none at all. Because of H1N1's prevalence and its exotic nature, the UIHC should reinstate the mandatory vaccine program as a precaution.

If Iran doesn't comply, apply 'crippling sanctions'

By HOWARD BERMAN

Tehran could soon have humankind's most frightening weapon if substantial diplomatic progress is not made in the coming days.

For years, Iran spurned diplomatic overtures to address the threat posed by its nuclear program. Meanwhile, its efforts have progressed to the point that it already has enough low-enriched uranium to produce fuel for at least one nuclear bomb.

Tehran's admission this week that it has secretly constructed a second enrichment plant suggests that its program may be further along than we had imagined. We do not have much time to wait.

I support President Obama's efforts to engage Iran. Thanks to these efforts, no one will be able to say that we failed to do everything possible to give Iran a diplomatic way out. But there is more than ample reason to be skeptical that the regime in Tehran intends to come clean about its nuclear program.

It is critical that we set clear timelines and benchmarks by which to judge Iranian intentions as well as unambiguous consequences if Iran fails to meet the criteria. The window for Iran to demonstrate seriousness of purpose should start with the Oct. 1 meeting and, as Obama has indicated, should close by the end of the year.

If Tehran is serious about engagement, it should agree early on to meaningful steps, such as a "freeze for freeze" in which Iran does not add to its enrichment capabilities — including halting construction on the second enrichment facility, as verified by the International Atomic Energy Agency — in exchange for an agreement that no additional international sanctions would be imposed during this period. Iran must also agree to verifiably suspend nuclear enrichment by year's end. Were that to happen, the international community could enter into detailed negotiations with Iran about all issues of concern and the incentives that could be offered in exchange for a satisfactory understanding of Iran's nuclear intentions and assurance that Iran would not be able to acquire a nuclear weapons capability.

But if, as I expect, that scenario does not come to pass, we should be ready immediately to impose what Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton has called "crippling sanctions." Iran's economy is in terrible shape, and the regime no longer can take for granted the support of its citizens. The best conduit for such sanctions would be a mandatory

U.N. Security Council resolution.

To have a sanction bill ready for the president's signature by early next year, we must start the process for passing it now. Should negotiations with Iran not succeed and should multilateral sanctions not get off the ground, we must be prepared to do what we can on our own.

Career No. 5

JUSTIN SUGG

justin-sugg@uiowa.edu

I knew then I had to make a change, or else I might have been the next streamlined victim. I applied for a job as a technical writer but failed to get it because the company was "redefining" that department as well.

There was nothing left for me in Des Moines. No one was hiring, I decided then to re-enroll at the UI as a journalism student. The application process was the hardest ordeal I endured since taking my insurance-license exam.

I was ineligible for federal aid because I had already received a degree. I consulted with someone at the UI Office of Student Financial Aid, a step I would recommend anyone take when jumping through the federal government's hoops. She told me I could receive loans — but not Pell Grants — if I applied for a B.S. on top of my B.A. To apply for a B.S., I had to apply to a department offering one and plan out every class I intended to take. I also had to enroll in at least nine semester hours in my major. The Office of Student Financial Aid frowned upon any nonmajor class I wanted to take.

The process was byzantine and convoluted. I had no idea what an underwriter did until I started work as one. I graduated from the UI in 2005 with a degree in English and had no previous formal background in finance. The economy was on the upswing then, however, and insurance jobs were the most plentiful and high-paying in my hometown at the time. The company was more than happy to train and certify me.

During my tenure, I earned an insurance broker's license and worked toward Charter Property-Casualty certification. Having no formal background, I consumed all the financial media I could. I began to understand my profession better, but I also started to see the cracks in the financial system.

I didn't need a subscription to the Wall Street Journal to see that, though. I could see it clearly in the company. Every week, we heard about another branch closing. The company was "streamlining" and then started a process to "redefine" our positions.

I'm on career No. 3 right now, writing editorials and columns for the DI. Considering print journalism's decline, I may have to move to career No. 4. The way things are working, I may hit No. 5 by my 30th birthday.

I changed careers with relative ease, but that was when times were good. Times are not as good now. Employers are looking for workers with specific backgrounds. The government would see its dollars better spent if it helped Americans through their five career changes. ■

Music to the core

Converge frontman Jacob Bannon praises the Iowa City music scene as his band prepares to return to the Picador tonight.

By ERIC ANDERSEN

eric.p-andersen@uiowa.edu

Although Jacob Bannon of Converge has played around the world, the vocalist distinctly remembers the shows he's played at the Picador in Iowa City.

"It's the perfect venue," he said. "I mean we don't have something like that in Massachusetts. It's amazing that you have a venue that is willing to do whatever kind of show that makes the most sense. If we had that, our community here would be drastically different."

Converge will perform at the Picador, 330 E. Washington St., at 6 p.m. today. Admission for the all-ages show is $12 in advance, $13 at the door. Local bands the Tanks and Aseethe will provide opening support.

Beginning in October, Converge will join Mastodon, Dethklok, and High on Fire to play dates across the U.S. — including another Iowa show, in Des Moines, on Oct. 14.

Although Converge's latest album Axe to Fall isn't available in stores yet, it has received critical acclaim, calling the recording the best thing the band has done in its nearly 20-year-career — in fact, metal-music magazine Decibel gave the album a perfect rating.

But 34-year-old Bannon used his heavily tattooed arms to shrug off the positive press as if it's nothing.

"We really don't give a shit what other people

Converge has been an innovator in the underground hard-core music scene for nearly 20 years. It will play at the Picador tonight.

think about the music," he said. "We're a band that has always been about forward movement. All we want to do is write music, play music, and share it with people. Nothing more."

While the album is still classic Converge in sound, featuring complex drumming and Bannon's signature yells, the band took a different approach to writing Axe to Fall through collaborating with a variety of fellow underground musicians.

"Usually, when a band invites guests into the recording process, they kind of show up and play what you tell them to play," Bannon said. "We actually got them working with us in the song-refining process, bringing their own ideas to the table and expanding on those ideas and vice versa."

Despite its status as a revolutionary hard-core band, he said, he makes more money taking on design projects than he does when performing on the road with his group.

"Doing design work is what subsidizes my living," he said. "Without that, I couldn't exist. I couldn't run a label — I couldn't be in a band."

Bannon, who graduated from the Art Institute of Boston, designed the cover for Axe to Fall, which features numerous images of a woman's face, one of which reveals an X-ray-esque view of the woman's jaw-line.

A x e t o Fall's liner notes contain a piece of artwork designed by him created for each of his songs.

Though the front-man said Converge's live show will appeal to anyone who is interested in aggressive music and credits I own a City's diverse music scene, the musician said he even enjoys playing for audiences that aren't so generous.

"By being involved in the hard-core/punk-rock/metal world, you're always an underdog," he said. "You're always going to be misunderstood in some way. We just want to put ourselves out there, and hopefully, we'll open up some new doors for people."

Five-minute drive, I usually have at least a three-page list of every track I had enjoyed within that short period of time. It's a finger workout for sure, but the enjoyment I gain from listening to my prodigious playlist is definitely worth every sore.

We're all a little bit geeky, right? Well, here at the DJ Arts staff, we're all kinds of geeky, and we're not the slightest bit embarrassed to share our undying devotion for the pop culture artifacts that we adore.

SIRIUS XMU

I am seriously obsessed with the SIRIUS's indie rock radio, SIRIUS XMU. I was introduced to SIRIUS XMU about two years ago, when I explored my car's radio stations and stumbled upon a song by Radiohead (one of the best bands of all time). After the track ended, I found that the station was full of a fascinating frenzy of fresh indie-rock music that revived my eardrums.

From that day on, I've only listened to SIRIUS XMU while driving, and I pull over at points so I can whip out my phone and type a list of songs I like. By the end of any given

The apocalypse yawns

The latest technological apocalypse sports a low-fi story line.

By RYAN FOSMARK

ryan.fosmark@uiowa.edu

The machines will get you.

At least, that's the message cinema has sent us with its semi-apocalyptic tales of man's industrial enslavement. Surrogates, a film from the makers of Terminator 3: Rise of the Machines, embraces influences from such technological thrillers as The Matrix and The Terminator (and perhaps even the iPhone's rise to power) — however, the story seems in need of an upgrade.

Surrogates takes place in a fictional near-future marked by its use of attractive robotic human likenesses (called "surries") that act in place of their human counterparts. For the first time in years, a surrogate human operator is murdered by a weapon capable of not only disabling a surrogate but actually melting the brain of its operator (unfortunately, no explanation is given about how a computer virus can melt a human brain, but the blood and brain matter that spatters from the operators' eyelids and noses is still fun to look at).

Eventually, FBI agent Greer (Bruce Willis) unveils a conspiracy involving the Army, the surrogates' disgruntled inventor, and the Dread Colonies (a group that finds surrogates' use inherently wrong). The Colonies' remotely received through the "surries" that act in place of their operators in everyday life. Similarly, the present-day MMORPG player's ultimate fantasy is to re-create a reality in which a person can do anything and be anyone with an enhanced level of anonymity and no fear of physical danger.

Essentially, the film serves as a well-articulated warning that points out the dangers of taking technology too far. However, the message won't be heeded until an iPhone's app is developed that allows the device to not only make calls, play music, run games, and monitor our schedules, but also transmit touch via Bluetooth and find other Apple technology physically attractive. Until that day, Surrogates is entertaining but largely uninteresting.

leader (played by Ving Rhames with heavy dreadlocks) is dubbed "The Prophet" — Surrogates' more ruthless version of The Matrix's Morpheus, and a Wachowski-inspired battle between the Colonies and the surries ensues when Greer gets involved. All plot twists are expected and reinforce a banal apocalyptic theme.

Still, the film provides reasonably exciting action sequences and an uncommonly frail, yet decidedly awesome Bruce Willis.

Despite its unoriginal plot, the real-life undertones of Surrogates are apparent. At first, it seems that this story is set in a distant future where every corporate building bears a distinct similarity to London Heathrow Airport with large TV screens and faux-friendly intercom voices at every turn. But when present-day objects such as Toyota Priuses and Gap clothing appear on screen, it becomes eerily apparent that this possible future may not be all that distant.

In Surrogates, touch, sight, and sound are all

Spotlight Iowa City

An interest in everything

By DANNY VALENTINE

daniel-valentine@uiowa.edu

There are really no simple answers when talking to UI Professor Nicholas Johnson, so one must be prepared.

It's a trip, albeit a pretty interesting one.

He's the type of guy where the conversation starts reasonably enough in Afghanistan and after a few seconds (OK, maybe a little more than a few), takes a detour at the possible sites for Hancher Auditorium, swings through a health-care meeting in Washington, D.C., makes a pit stop at a local School Board meeting, and then ends up walking down the streets of his native Iowa City.

And then the law professor goes on a guided tour along the muddy banks of the Iowa River and flood prevention, finally settling on the First Amendment, which he cherishes and has spent his life protecting.

Guarding the First Amendment during an oft-antagonistic stint as FCC commissioner between 1966 and 1973 helped land him a spot recently in a book of the most influential people in American legal history. There he is joined by the likes of Thurgood Marshall, Bill Clinton, and, of course, O.J. Simpson.

He wrote more opinions than the other six FCC commissioners combined, and his role landed him on the cover of Rolling Stone.

"I'm interested in God damned nearly every subject," he said.

Let's take his word for it. At first, this reporter didn't during a conversation on a recent evening. It was apparently a mistake.

"He wants to know every thought I've ever had," Johnson called out to wife Mary Vasey, who was tentatively stepping into their living room looking for something she had misplaced.

"Oh, Lord help us," she said and laughed.

Johnson chuckled and paused for a second, a real second this time.

"She's my editor and my conscience — the source of all my good ideas," Johnson said.

Johnson, who went to University High School in Iowa City, now the UI's North Hall, first met his wife there. She beat him out for president in the 10th grade.

They were married in 1991 after their spouses passed away; between the two, they have seven kids, five grandchildren, three great grandchildren, seven fish, and two cats.

His friends adore him to the point where they don't mind telling him he just may be sucking the air out of the room.

"We rib each other a lot," said longtime friend and law professor Sheldon Kurtz. "But it's all done with a great deal of humor and honestly a great deal of affection. I love the man; he's a great human being."

Johnson sometimes refers to himself as Little Nicky Johnson.

The thing is, at 64 and 75 years old, he's really not that little, and he's really long passed the age when most people drop the "y" from their name.

But it works — he brings a youthful energy to everything he does, waking up frighteningly close to bar closing time but sometimes sleeping in until 6 a.m.

The balding, white-haired professor began teaching at the law school in 1981, and he holds the much-coveted distinction as the longest continuously

CR man faces charges

A Cedar Rapids man faces numerous charges after allegedly threatening several people with a knife downtown on Sunday, according to Iowa City police.

Ryan Tunk, 19, was charged with armed with a dangerous weapon with intent to use, a Class D felony, public intoxication, and disorderly conduct.

He was being held Sunday at the Johnson County Jail on $10,650 cash-only bond.

Tunk allegedly challenged several people to fight while wielding a blade in an alley on the 300 block of South Linn Street.

According to police reports, he also admitted to going into the alley to "settle the score" with someone.

Tunk had a blood-alcohol concentration of 0.213, according to police.

Going armed with intent is a Class D felony, which is generally punishable by as much as five years in prison and a fine of no more than $7,500.

Mr. Netanyahu's Offer (II)*Are the objections of the Palestinians justified?

In our previous hasbarah message (#117, "Mr. Netanyahu's Offer (I)"), we told of the Netanyahu's government's willingness to allow a Palestinian state to arise alongside Israel in Judea/Samaria (the "West Bank") and in Gaza. Not surprisingly, he attached certain conditions to this offer, all of which the Palestinians totally rejected. The objections that we discussed previously referred to the "settlements," the demilitarization of the new state, and the "return of the refugees."

What are the facts?

In addition to those conditions mentioned above, Mr. Netanyahu's offer of a state for the Palestinians in the "West Bank" and in Gaza included two further requirements: One, that Jerusalem remain the undivided capital of Israel and two, that the Arabs recognize Israel to be the Jewish state.

An Undivided Jerusalem. Before the end of the 1967 Six-Day War, during which the Israel defense forces reconquered Jerusalem from the Jordanians, claims to Jerusalem being a Muslim city were rarely if ever asserted. Jerusalem had always been a city in which many religions and nationalities lived side-by-side. It was only after the old city was back in Jewish hands that the Muslim Arabs declared their desire to wage "jihad" (holy war) to bring the city into Arab possession.

The notion to call Jerusalem an Islamic holy city has only come about in modern times, especially after the Arabs lost the city to Israel in the Six-Day War. It has now gained currency by dint of constant repetition. Basis of the claim is that Jerusalem does indeed contain an Islamic holy site, the Temple Mount, sacred to both Muslims and Jews. But Jerusalem has for centuries been the capital of the Jewish people and has been the capital of Israel since its founding. It is mentioned hundreds of times in the Bible. There is not a single mention of it in the Koran.

Israel is the State of the Jews. Mr. Netanyahu insists that Israel be recognized as the Jewish state. But such recognition is obviously only a formality. Israel was established as the Jewish state by the Balfour Declaration, by the League of Nations, by the United Nations, by the consensus of the world, and by the facts on the ground. The reason that the Muslims do not wish to recognize Israel as a Jewish state is that it would supposedly prejudice the rights of the Muslims and perhaps members of other religions who live in Israel. But that is nonsense. Regardless of what it is called, everybody understands that Israel is indeed the State of the Jews, and so do the over 1 million (approximately 20% of Israel's population) Muslims that live in Israel as full citizens, with all the rights and privileges of their Jewish fellow citizens. Nobody seems to object that, for instance, Iran designates itself as an "Islamic Republic." For the Muslim world to recognize Israel as the State of the Jews would simply be recognizing reality.

It has to be clear to every student of modern history that the Palestinians, if that were their real goal, could have had their own state since at least 1937, following the Peel Report. There have been many opportunities since. The most important of those was the 1948 decision of the United Nations to partition the country west of the Jordan River into a Muslim and a Jewish state. The Jews eagerly accepted the proposal, which the Arabs utterly rejected and instead invaded the nascent state of Israel with the armies of five of their countries. There have been many other opportunities since, all of which the Muslims have rejected. One must come to the unhappy conclusion that to create a state is not the ultimate goal of the Palestinians. The ultimate goal always has been and continues to be the destruction of the state of Israel.

Mr. Netanyahu's offer of allowing a Palestinian state to be created and to exist along Israel is a most generous offer. No parallel can be found in the annals of world history. It is abundantly clear that the "conditions" accompanying Mr. Netanyahu's offer are more than reasonable. Surely, after decades of open hostilities and the recent bitter example of Gaza, it should go without saying that the newly formed state should be totally and reliably demilitarized. It should be clear that the "settlements" – about 300,000 Jews in a sea of over 3 million Arabs – cannot be an obstacle to peace, since the over 1 million Arabs living in Israel are not considered a problem. They should be clear that the "refugees," which have swelled from the original 650,000 to allegedly more than 5 million, should be settled in the newly to be formed state of Palestine.

Jerusalem has been the center of Jewish life and Jewish yearning for over 3,000 years. There is no reason why it should not remain the undivided capital of Israel. And, of course, Israel is a Jewish state. Everybody understands that, whether the Muslims do or do not wish to accept it. Here is another chance for the Palestinians to have their own country and to live in peace and in prosperity alongside Israel. But chances are overwhelming that, once again, they will reject the outstretched hand that is being offered.

Iowa jumps to No. 13, 2 Hawks honored

Not even 24 hours after Iowa shocked No. 5 Penn State in State College, Pa., plenty of news came from the football team.

First, the Hawkeyes skyrocketed all the way to No. 13 in the AP poll and No. 17 in the coaches' poll on Sunday after beating the Nittany Lions, 21-10. Iowa had been unranked in both polls since its season-opening scare against Northern Iowa.

Then, the Big Ten honored two Hawkeye defenders. Senior linebacker Pat Angerer was named the conference's Defensive Player of the Week after recording 14 tackles (four solo) and, in the fourth quarter, recording a 38-yard interception return and forcing a fumble that was recovered by junior defensive tackle Karl Klug.

Junior defensive end Adrian Clayborn was named Special Teams Player of the Week after blocking a Nittany Lion punt and returning it 53 yards for what proved to be the winning touchdown.

Clayborn is the third Hawkeye this season to obtain the special-team accolade.

Also, it was announced that the Hawkeyes' game on Saturday against Arkansas State will be aired on ESPN at 11 a.m. Iowa's Homecoming contest against No. 22 Michigan on Oct. 10 will also be televised by either ESPN or ABC.

Women's golf 12th

The Iowa women's golf team started play in the Lady Northern Invitational on Sunday in Madison, Wis., but because of inclement weather, the Hawkeyes were forced to suspend play 10 holes into the second round.

Iowa finished round one with a team score of 314 (26 over), putting it in a tie for 13th place with Penn State. Freshman Kristi Cardwell led the team with a 76 (4 over) in round one. Laura Cilek also shot in the 70s, carding a 77.

Ohio State led the tournament with a team score of 283 in the first round. Purdue and Michigan State trailed the Buckeyes with scores of 291 and 292.

The second round of play was suspended before any Hawkeye could complete more than 10 holes. Iowa improved play in the shortened round, moving up one spot to a 12th place tie with Georgetown.

Chelsea Harris and Brianna Coopman paced the team in the second round. Harris played even par through 10 holes, and Coopman played even through four.

Ohio State leads the invitational after the first day of play, carding an overall score of 7 under.

The second round will be completed today starting at 7:30 a.m. The third and final round will begin with a shotgun at 9:30 a.m.

Iowa linebacker Pat Angerer runs with the ball after intercepting a Penn State pass during the second half in State College on Sept. 26. Angerer's interception lead the Hawkeyes to a touchdown by Iowa running back Adam Robinson. Iowa won, 21-10.

The Hawkeyes' ability to play a stronger second half loomed large in their 21-10 victory over No. 5 Penn State.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Once again, Iowa got off to a slow start. Once again, the Hawkeyes made adjustments.

And once again, the Hawkeyes were able to dominate in the second half en route to victory, this time to the tune of a 21-10 win over No. 5 Penn State in State College, Pa.

The start could not have been any worse for the Hawkeyes. The offense opened the game with three and out. On the first play the defense was on the field, it was burned for a 79-yard touchdown.

When Iowa got the ball back, quarterback Ricky Stanzi threw a pass that ricocheted off the foot of wide receiver Colin Sandeman and into the hands of Nittany Lion cornerback Nick Sukay. Penn State then responded with a methodical 20-play drive that resulted in three points.

Trailing 10-0 after one quarter, the Hawkeyes looked lost amid the thousands upon thousands of Penn State fans decked in white.

But as they showed against Northern Iowa, Iowa State, and Arizona, the Hawkeyes have a knack for becoming a stronger team as a game goes along.

"I think our playing three tough teams, all week, really prepared us for a good system in the game," junior linebacker Jeremiha Hunter said. "I think that definitely came into effect [Sept. 26]."

And when Iowa came out of the locker room for the second half, things started to click.

The offense continued to struggle, but the defense did its best to keep the Hawkeyes within striking distance, and the score remained 10-5.

The game's turning point came when junior defensive end Adrian Clayborn blocked a punt by Penn State's Jeremy Boone, scooped the football up, and dashed 53 yards for a touchdown that not only gave Iowa a lead it never relinquished, it also boosted the team's morale.

"I think it just excited people," senior linebacker Pat Angerer said. "It was definitely a game-changer right there. That was just unbelievable."

"We came out, we were excited, and we had fun."

Penn State turned the ball over three times after the Hawkeyes went ahead. Two of the three ensuing Iowa drives following those turnovers resulted in points for the Hawkeyes, which enabled Iowa to pull away in the game's final minutes.

Hawks take the 4th

A dominant fourth quarter against No. 5 Penn State could be the beginning of something special.

BRENDAN STILES
brendan-stiles@uiowa.edu

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — I'm not going to even attempt sugarcoating what I'm about to say.

The fourth quarter of Iowa's 21-10 win over No. 5 Penn State on Saturday was the most significant quarter of football the Hawkeyes have ever played under head coach Kirk Ferentz.

I realize there may have been games in past years where the Hawkeyes scored more than 16 points in a quarter or simply imposed their will.

But here's what makes me say this: All three phases — offense, defense, and special teams — stepped up when needed the most in perhaps the most hostile atmosphere in college football.

Because I've watched more than my fair share of Hawkeye games, I ask you to think about this for a second.

The special teams did something no Hawkeye fan had witnessed in an Iowa game since the 2005 Capital One Bowl against LSU. When Adrian Clayborn blocked the punt and ran into the end zone for the go-ahead touchdown, the "White House" became awfully quiet.

After the Hawkeyes took that lead, the defense created three turnovers — two interceptions and a fumble that came deep in Iowa territory and while it was still a one-possession contest.

2 juniors win Las Vegas trip

Intramural golf tournament awards two students a free trip to Las Vegas.

By TRAVIS VARNER

travis.varner@uiowa.edu

Viva Las Vegas!

The intramural golf tournament finished Sunday evening at the Finkbine Golf Course with two students winning an all-expenses-paid trip to Las Vegas to compete in the National Collegiate Golf Championship.

With a score of 7 under, juniors Robin Donegan and Bob Groody emerged victorious over the 22 other pairs competing in the tourney, and they can't wait to see the "Welcome to Las Vegas" sign when their plane touches down.

Donegan said he had a dream that partially foreshadowed the results of the tournament.

"I was telling Bob that I actually had a dream last night that one of us hit a hole in one on the last hole to win this thing," Donegan said.

The defining quarter

COMMENTARY

The offense, after both senior linebackers Pat Angerer and A.J. Edds intercepted Penn State quarterback Daryll Clark, responded on both occasions with scores to further separate Iowa from the Nittany Lions. Redshirt freshman running back Adam Robinson scored from 13 yards out, and junior kicker Daniel Murray made a 31-yard field goal in the final seconds.

The Hawkeyes may have had successful quarters like this before. But also consider the opponent Iowa faced and the spotlight beating down.

Penn State may no longer be the No. 5 team in the country, but it's certainly not a slouch. The Nittany Lions are the reigning Big Ten champions, and as long as Joe Paterno is on the Penn State sidelines, the national recognition will always be around.

This quarter of football happened in front of 109,316 people in Beaver Stadium. That doesn't include the millions of people nationwide who watched on TV, or listened on radio, or just knew about the game because "College GameDay" was in town.

By winning the game, Iowa moved up 18 spots in the latest AP poll. From unranked to 13th nationally. I'm sorry, but that just doesn't happen too often for me to not view what took place in the fourth quarter as significant.

If the Hawkeyes are going to be the Big Ten title contenders some envisioned them being back in the summer, then the summit became visible after this one period.

For three quarters, it looked more likely that Iowa and Penn State were going to play to another baseball score, like the 6-4 outcome in 2004, and the lone Nittany Lion touchdown in the first quarter was going to haunt Hawkeye fans.

Yet in a matter of 15 minutes, Iowa went from a team in a state some Pennsylvanians can't find on a map to one of the most talked about in America.

I'm sure there are Hawkeye fans out there already thinking about a certain eight-letter locale beginning with the letter "P" after the evening of Sept. 26. Whether Iowa continues to inch closer toward reaching that destination this winter remains to be seen.

With that said, if the day all Hawkeye fans are longing for becomes a reality, look back at this game — and more specifically, this fourth quarter.

It set the standard for how the Hawkeyes need to keep finishing each game from here on out.

The Kennedy connection

By ROBBIE LEHMAN

robert-lehman@uiowa.edu

Recruiting elite-level athletes is never far from a college coach's mind. But sometimes, the best talent can be found right in one's backyard.

The Iowa soccer team has players from 13 states and one foreign country. However, head coach Ron Rainey didn't need to travel far to land three of the Hawkeyes' prized freshmen, who all come from the same state: Iowa.

Not only that, all three played for the same high school.

Defender Jade Grimm, midfielder Katherine Lewis, and goalkeeper Rachel Spellerberg led Cedar Rapids Kennedy High School to three-straight conference championships (2006-08) before joining the Iowa program this fall.

"It's a lot of fun just because I already know them, and I loved playing with them in the past," Grimm said. "We just made our own personal decisions, and it just ended up being here at Iowa."

The trio, which also played in the Cedar River Soccer Association together, is still adjusting to living in a new city and being college student-athletes. But the three agreed that having each other around has eased the transition.

"We're all really close and have been really good friends since we were little," Spellerberg said. "It's good to have someone always there to support you and hang out with on and off the field. They're always there no matter what because we've been together before."

While Rainey recruits nationally, the coach said he was glad to get commitments from three native Iowans.

"Getting three people from the same high-school team, it wasn't by design," Rainey said. "But they're good players. They're in the state of Iowa, and we want the best Iowa players."

Grimm, a two-time Iowa High School Player of the Year (2007 and 2009), has started all 10 matches for the Hawkeyes this season, taking five shots and contributing to the defense's five total shutouts.

Lewis, an all-state selection twice in high school, has seen action as a reserve for Iowa so far. She recorded one assist and scored her first career goal against Wisconsin-Milwaukee on Sept. 13.

Spellerberg, a three-time first team all-state goalkeeper at Kennedy, made her first appearance in the goal during the Hawkeyes' 3-0 shootout over Northern Iowa on Sept. 20.

Rainey has been impressed with each player's willingness to help the team in whatever way possible.

"They've all filled roles this fall very, very well," he said. "Jade and Kat have been playing a little bit more than Rachel, but Rachel has been pushing all of the other goalkeepers in practice to get better every day."

Lewis said there is a "certain comfortability" in playing with her high-school teammates at the collegiate level.

After individually choosing to come to Iowa, Grimm, Lewis and Spellerberg all are glad their decisions have worked out. The three said they love being a part of a Hawkeye program that is on the rise and had its best start in program history this year at 7-2.

"We want to keep improving from year to year, individually and as a team," Spellerberg said. "I think we'll become stronger, and hopefully accomplish more things that have never been accomplished."

Hawks rally again

With the offense producing 10 points in the game's final 12:21, it has shown capability of coming through when needing to.

"When Adrian got that touchdown, it took some of the pressure off of us, and we just started running the ball and doing the things that were in our game plan," senior offensive lineman Dace Richardson said.

Resiliency has seemed to be what has defined the team through one-third of the regular season. An ability to play 60 minutes is something the Hawkeyes take pride in.

And as a result, Iowa has demonstrated that no matter who the opponent is, the Hawkeyes know how to come away with victories.

"They've got a lot of determination," head coach Kirk Ferentz said. "They care about each other and believe in each other, and when that starts to happen, good things can happen, for sure."

Golfers head to VCU

DAVID SCRIVNER/THE DAILY IOWAN

Iowa head coach Mark Hankins claps as junior Brad Hopfinger sinks a putt on the 17th green of Blue Top Ridge during the Golfweek Conference Challenge in Riverside on Sept. 1. Hopfinger tied for first place with Florida State junior Drew Kittleson, who played in the 2009 Master's Tournament.

The Iowa men's golf team looks to continue its successful season by finishing in the top of the tournament field at the VCU Shootout.

By CLARK CAHILL

clark-cahill@uiowa.edu

Iowa men's golf head coach Mark Hankins has had a consistent goal heading into the team's tournaments this season — finish in the top five.

So far, so good.

The Hawkeyes placed second in the Golfweek Conference Challenge in Riverside on Sept. 1 and finished in fifth place at the Golden Gopher Invitational on Sept. 14 in Wayzata, Minn.

Hankins' goal remains the same as Iowa tees off at the 15-team Virginia Commonwealth Shootout today in Manakin-Sabot, Va.

"Finishing in the top 33 percent of the field means you have had a pretty solid performance," Hankins said. "I think a top-five finish is a logical goal."

The Hawkeyes bring the same team to Virginia that competed in the Gopher Invitational — juniors Vince India and Brad Hopfinger, and sophomores Barret Kelpin, Brad George, and Chris Brant. The group brings experience with all but Hopfinger having participated in the VCU Shootout last year.

India said he enjoys the Manakin Course at the Hermitage Country Club and being familiar with the holes will help.

"The course gives a lot of opportunities to make birdies," he said. "I think our team is one that can make a lot of birdies in bunches, so we'll see how we handle it."

Hopfinger said he has been working on staying strong mentally in preparation for the tournament. After tying for first place for the individual title at the Golfweek Challenge, the Lake Forest, Ill., native said he expected too much out of himself in Minnesota.

"I've just been trying to keep a good mindset for this week," Hopfinger said. "Last time, I had too high of expectations, so I've been trying to keep that under control."

India agreed the team tends to struggle when individual expectations get too high.

"You can't get ahead of yourself and don't get too cocky," he said. "It's good to have confidence in yourself to a degree, but if you go out there expecting to finish in first place, you are just going to end up getting down on yourself."

After playing close to home for its first tournament of the season, the Hawkeyes struggled a little during the first day of the Gopher Invitational, finishing the day in seventh place. Once they were able to settle in, they jumped up two spots to finish the tournament.

Hankins said traveling out of state may have had an effect on the team's mentality, but getting the first road trip out of the way will benefit the squad.

"We weren't quite as sharp as we would like," Hankins said. "But every tournament is different, and we are familiar with this course. I think we will handle this tournament better."

Hopfinger agreed, stating the travel may have thrown the team off.

"Most of our summer tournaments were close to home, and the Conference Challenge felt like a summer tournament to all of us," he said. "When we had to travel for our last tournament, it kind of hit us that the season has started. We've had a good couple weeks of practice and we should be ready to go this week."

PRIME PLAYS

On Penn State's first play from scrimmage, Nittany Lion quarterback Darryl Clark connected with wideout Chaz Powell on a 79-yard touchdown pass putting Penn State ahead 7-0 fewer than two minutes into the contest.

With the Hawkeyes trailing 10-5 in the fourth quarter, Iowa defensive end Adrian Clayborn blocked a Jeremy Boone punt and returned it 53 yards for a touchdown, putting the Hawkeyes ahead, 11-10.

After a Pat Angerer interception, Iowa running back Adam Robinson scored from 13 yards out to give the Hawkeyes an 18-10 lead with 8:32 remaining.

With the ball in Hawkeye territory, Angerer forced an Evan Royster fumble that was recovered by Iowa defensive tackle Karl Klug, keeping the Nittany Lions from cutting into the Hawkeye lead.

Classic Favre rally stuns 49ers

By DAVE CAMPBELL

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The end was as good as the Vikings could have imagined: Brett Favre zipped a pass to a little-used reserve wide receiver in the back of the end zone in the final seconds for a classic Favre finish.

Greg Lewis leaped for a 32-yard touchdown catch with two seconds left while a flattened Favre watched from his stomach, and the Vikings stunned the San Francisco 49ers, 27-24, on Sunday to stay unbeaten.

In his first real home game with his new team, Favre overcame a bunch of bad throws and a few more hard hits to his almost-40-year-old body and found that winning touch again.

"It's hard to even recall all of 'em. This one was pretty special," said Favre, who now has 42 comebacks from fourth-quarter deficits or ties on his career record.

An official review confirmed Lewis's feet were inbounds, sending the sell-out crowd into a frenzy.

"I've had some hard losses. This is just another one for the list," 49er cornerback Nate Clements said. "We just have to keep chopping away."

The first five series of the second half: three punts, Favre's first interception, and a turnover on downs. The Vikings (3-0), who gained only 85 yards on Adrian Peterson's 19 carries, still had three timeouts left and were able to force a punt. They got the ball back at their 20 with 89 seconds remaining.

"I didn't say a whole lot," Favre said. "I knew what I was thinking. We blew our chances."

Well, not quite all of them.

The last play began with 12 seconds left, and Favre stepped forward in the pocket and slid to the right by design to buy time for his receivers to move in position. Instead of throwing a ball up for grabs, he figured he could get close enough to the line of scrimmage to fire a line drive that would be tougher to defend.

Lewis watched the quarterback's eyes and broke the other way — Favre said he didn't even know who was running across the end zone — to find room near the right corner.

He caught his first pass from Favre, who completed six throws on that drive, and looked forward to the next one.

"The offensive line was fired up. Adrian was fired up, and the receivers were fired up. And Brett fell right in. He was fired up, too, like: 'We're going to get this done,'" Lewis said. "And that's the attitude that we took out there on the field."

That's exactly why the Vikings wanted to sign Favre so badly.

Defensive end Jared Allen was asked what he thought when the offense set up for the final possession.

"Be Brett. One time. Just be Brett," Allen said.

Favre finished 24-for-47 for 301 yards and two touchdowns, the most passes he's thrown in a game since Nov. 11, 2007, when he beat the Vikings while with Green Bay by going 33-for-46 for 351 yards and three touchdowns. The Packers, by the way, are up next.

Their defense is surely eager to put some pressure on an old teammate. Favre took plenty of blows from the 49ers (2-1) and listed aches to his right foot, left knee, both shoulders, and neck when asked for a report on his health.

He was spry enough, though, to throw a pass from his own end zone and sprint upfield past a zig-zagging Bernard Berrian to put his body into linebacker Patrick Willis for a block at the end of that 36-yard catch-and-run.

Favre was worn out from this, further raising the question about his ability to complete a full season. For now, the Vikings will take his clutch touch.

"He's been in many, many, many situations like that," coach Brad Childress said, "so it never hurts you to have a veteran like him going down the field."

Until the end, Favre was being outplayed by Shaun Hill, a former Minnesota third-stringer who threw two touchdown passes to tight end Vernon Davis. The second was a 20-yard toss over three defenders that gave the Niners a 24-20 lead midway through the fourth quarter.

They sacked Favre twice and applied plenty of pressure. The Hill-to-Davis combination led to seven completions and 96 yards. And they survived the early exit of star running back Frank Gore to an ankle injury by rallying on the road to the verge of victory.

Naturally, the players were devastated, but coach Mike Singletary wouldn't have it.

"You have nothing to be looking at the floor for!" Singletary yelled, not worried reporters were in the adjacent room. "You didn't steal anything! You didn't do anything wrong! OK? We're going to get better! We're going to get there! We will see them again in the playoffs, all right? You hold your head up!"

NOTES: Favre's last 300-yard game was on Nov. 22, 2007, a 381-yard performance at Detroit. ... Minnesota's Darius Reynaud was hurt, apparently his left hamstring, while returning a punt in the third quarter.

... Glen Coffee filled in for Gore and had 54 yards on 24 carries. ... The Vikings gave up another special teams TD: Clements picked up a blocked field goal right before the half and returned it 59 yards. Harvin answered in the third quarter with a 101-yard kickoff return for a score.

Rams stay winless, Packers roll behind Rodgers

By JIM SALTER

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Aaron Rodgers stayed on his feet. The St. Louis Rams went down again.

Rodgers threw two touchdown passes and ran for another Sunday, and the Green Bay Packers sent the Rams to their 13th-straight loss — now the longest streak in the NFL — with a 36-17 victory.

Rodgers was 13-for-23 for 269 yards and hit on three long passes in the first road game of the season for Green Bay (2-1).

After being sacked a league-high 10 times in the first two games and playing behind a patchwork offensive line, Rodgers was sacked just twice, both times in the first quarter by Leonard Little.

"They really gave me some time," Rodgers said of his linemen. "I was able to move in the pocket."

The Rams (0-3) have lost

30 of 35 since the start of the 2007 season. With Detroit's 19-14 win over Washington ending the Lions' 19-game skid, St. Louis' losing streak is now the longest.

Rodgers and Greg Jennings hooked up on passes of 50 and 53 yards that set up touchdowns for Green Bay. Rodgers had a 46-yard pass to Donald Driver that set up another score, and he scored on a 4-yard run.

"It's the big plays on defense that kill you and the turnovers — we didn't get any takeaways," Rams coach Steve Spagnuolo said after his first home game since taking over as coach.

Jennings' two catches were all he had, but they combined for a 103 yards. Driver had four catches for 95 yards and a touchdown. Ryan Grant carried 26 times for 99 yards.

"Big plays equal points in this league," Packer coach Mike McCarthy said. "We say it every week. It was evident today."

Green Bay Packer wide receiver Donald Driver (left) can't reach a pass in the end zone as St. Louis Ram cornerback Justin King watches during the first quarter Sunday in St. Louis.

"We have the ability to play that way."

Rodgers said the Packers took advantage of man-to-man coverage on Jennings and Driver.

"If they are in press coverage on Driver and Jennings, we're going to take our shots," he said. "I was able to put the ball in the spot."

Rams coach Steve Spagnuolo said the team had trouble getting into the right formations.

der, was 16-for-31 for 164 yards, two touchdowns and an interception for St. Louis. Steven Jackson carried 27 times for 117 yards and had five catches for 46 yards.

Bulger was 3-for-4 for 23 yards before suffering the bruise on a sack late in the first quarter.

Sloppy play put the Rams in an early hole, with Green Bay's Mason Crosby kicking first-quarter field goals of 48, 38, and 25 yards. The first was set up by a blocked field goal, the second by Aaron Kampman's sack of Bulger at the St. Louis 15 — apparently the play on which Bulger was hurt — and the third on Jackson's fumble at the St. Louis 11 on the first play of the next possession.

The Packers made it 16-0 in the second quarter, the key play Rodgers' long pass to Driver to the St. Louis 30. Fullback John Kuhn scored three plays later on a 1-yard run.

Boller replaced Bulger and gave life to the Rams, who had scored just seven points in the previous two games. He threw second-quarter touchdown passes of 16 and 19 yards to back-up tight end Daniel Fells.

Sandwiched between those scores was another Green Bay touchdown on a 21-yard pass from Rodgers to Driver, set up by a 50-yard pass to Jennings.

The Rams got within six on Josh Brown's 53-yard third quarter field goal, but Rodgers and Jennings combined for a 53-yard pass play early in the fourth quarter, and Rodgers ran untouched from the 4 four plays later to make it 29-17.

"That is what good teams do when they are challenged, they respond, and we were able to do that today," Kampman said.

After an interception, Green Bay scored on Rodgers' 10-yard pass to Kuhn late in the fourth quarter.

NOTES: The sellout crowd appeared to be made up largely of Rams fans, unlike the last time the teams met here in 2007, when the mix was closer to 50-50. ... Spagnuolo said further evaluation will be needed before he knows if Bulger, WR Laurent Robinson (ankle) and S James Butler (knee) will miss any time. ... The Rams retired the No. 75 of Los Angeles Rams great Deacon Jones in a ceremony prior to the game.

Regals' defense shines in win

While Regina Regals coach Marv Cook thinks his offense could use some cleaning up, the team still managed to overpower the Wilton Beavers Sept. 25, dominating in a 35-0 victory.

The defense won the game for the Regals, allowing only 77 total yards and 30 yards on 27 rushes.

Junior Zach Pechous played especially well, returning two punts and an interception for touchdowns. He also returned a third punt 78 yards for an apparent touchdown, but the play was called back because of a penalty.

Even though the Regal offense didn't meet all Cook's expectations, the players still managed to gain 347 total yards, 214 rushing on 40 carries. Daniel Larew caught a 6-yard pass from Jack Verducci to open the scoring. Pechous was accountable for the following 21 points. Verducci then ended the evening with a 9-yard run. Also a contributor to the Regals' offense, Anthony Halsch ran particularly well, rushing for 108 yards on 11 carries.

Running 100 yards is "something we try to do each game," Cook said.

"I felt like we stepped up in many different areas," he said. John Stack, Alex Williams, Kevin Arnold, Braden Lehman and Jordan Corpman have shown as individual standouts.

This week, the Regals will prepare to play the Tipton Tigers at Tipton on Friday. Cook said he plans to spend the week working to polish up the Regal offense.

"We have a lot of talent offensively," Cook said. "We just need to find the right personnel package."

The Regina Regals are now 5-0 on the season.

Mount Pleasant downs Clear Creek Amana

Clear Creek Amana fell, 28-14, to Mount Pleasant on Sept. 25.

During the first half, the lead shifted between the two teams. The Mount Pleasant Panthers scored a touchdown during the first quarter but missed the extra point.

The Clear Creek Amana Clippers took only 17 seconds to respond. On the first play from scrimmage, backup quarterback Kevin Delzell threw a perfect pass to Ted Hergert for a touchdown. After nailing the extra point, the Clippers led, 7-6.

Later in the first quarter, another pass to Ted Hergert resulted in another touchdown, making the score 14-6 with 3:29 minutes remaining in the period.

Mount Pleasant stomped back in the second quarter, notching a touchdown after intercepting a pass on the Clippers' 18-yard line. The Panthers hit a 2-point conversion and tied the game at 14.

The Clippers turned the ball over again late in the second quarter, giving the Panthers a short field. The 'Cats took advantage and the lead at halftime, 21-14.

To start off the third quarter, Delzell hit Josh Rohret with a 92-yard touchdown, but the play was nullified by a holding penalty.

Turnovers and penalties kept the Clippers' defense on the field for much of the second half. Jesse White and Rohret made more than nine tackles.

"We had a lot of people step up," said quarterback Blaze Smith.

In the fourth quarter, the Panthers intercepted another pass at the Clear Creek 14-yard line, and Mount Pleasant cashed in for another touchdown to make the score 28-14. Clear Creek had a chance to score late, driving down to the 4, but the Clippers failed to get into the end zone.

Beelen, Klockenga to lead tennis

Teammates and coaches chose the pair of women to represent their team as captains.

By PATRICK RAFFERTY

patrick-rafferty@uiowa.edu

One thing the Iowa women's tennis team will not have to worry about this season is leadership.

Seniors Merel Beelen and Kelcie Klockenga have been chosen to represent the Hawkeyes as team captains for the 2009-10 season. The duo was selected by their teammates and coaches.

While head coach Daryl Greenan was happy about the team's decision, he praised the rest of team for its capability and maturity.

"I think there were more than two good choices," he said. "I think there are several players with a lot of ownership and leadership abilities. [Beelen and Klockenga] have both been here the longest, and I think that's a big factor."

While the team features no freshmen, it also only has three seniors, including former Baylor Bear Zuzana Chmelarova.

Chmelarova might be the fresh face on the team, but that didn't stop her from leaving her mark on the Iowa tennis team.

Junior Jessica Young noted that Chmelarova quickly became an integral part of her new team.

"She's just as much of a leader as well," Young said. "I think everyone looks up to her for inspiration, and as a captain."

A team vote crowned Beelen and Klockenga as captains. Each player and coach received two votes apiece, and the top two vote-getters were named captains.

Beelen, a team captain last year, began playing tennis at Iowa five years ago. Klockenga will enter her fourth and final year.

When it came time to vote for the captains, seniority wasn't the only consideration.

"Well, Kelcie is my best friend. I adore her," Young said. "I have a tendency to get riled up, and she has the ability to calm me down."

"Merel has more of an outgoing personality. She has the ability to take charge, she cheers for you."

Young recalls one of her matches last year against Marquette in which she wasn't playing well and was down by a hefty margin, until someone stepped in.

"Merel coached me back to win the match," Young said. "They've both been here before and bring a ton of experience. They were really good choices."

Greenan also lauded the selections for captains. He feels as though the women wanted Beelen and Klockenga to lead them through the season, he said.

The duo has good leadership qualities, he said, and he also believes that they will help the rest of the team have a great year.

"The girls respect them as being people they can go to and as people who can be the voice of the team," he said.

Along with the Beelen, Klockenga, and Chmelarova — the team's senior trio — there is another member of the team setting the tone in a different way.

"Sonja [Molnar] has fit in pretty quickly," Greenan said. "Sometimes just being the No. 1 player and being a high-level player, you kind of have some leadership built in there, and you kind of lead by competitive example.

"She's made our team better, and she pushes the other girls. They see a little gap there, and they want to close it."

Bears hold off battered Seattle

By GREGG BELL

Associated Press

SEATTLE — Jay Cutler pumped his fists. He hugged his linemen. And he raised both arms triumphantly — all in the final 2 minutes.

Exactly the scenes the Bears envisioned when they traded a king's ransom to Denver to get him.

Cutler's miserable Chicago début two weeks ago became further forgotten when he completed all three of his passes on Sunday's decisive drive. The third was for 36 yards to Devin Hester with 1:52 remaining, rallying the Bears to a 25-19 victory over the depleted Seattle Seahawks.

Seattle (1-2), playing without seven injured starters, drove to the Bears 29 with 30 seconds left. But Seneca Wallace, starting because quarterback Matt Hasselbeck was out with a broken rib, threw high and incomplete to Julius Jones on fourth and 2 to seal the win for the Bears (2-1).

Cutler finished 21-of-27 for 247 yards and three touchdowns, with one interception.

"Any time you can get Devin Hester one-on-one, it works," a confident Cutler said on the field seconds after the game ended.

Cutler completed more than 70 percent of his throws last week against the Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers — a strong response to the career-high four interceptions he threw in a loss on opening night at Green Bay.

Chicago was up 17-16 with eight minutes left when Seahawk rookie linebacker Aaron Curry sped into Cutler's passing arm and knocked the ball loose. Cory Redding recovered the fumble at the Bears 39.

Olindo Mare, who was just 4-of-6 on field goals, converted the turnover into a 46-yard field goal. The Seahawks led 19-17 with 5:17 remaining.

The Bears answered by driving to the Seattle 36 by the two-minute warning. Matt Forte was bent back awkwardly at the end of an 11-yard run. Adrian Peterson replaced him and ran twice for 12 yards.

Then Hester ran a slant route inside Travis Fisher, who was playing because Seattle was without starting cornerbacks Marcus Trufant and Josh Wilson.

Safety Deon Grant tried to level Hester but nailed Fisher instead. With both Seahawks on the turf, Hester trotted in for the go-ahead score.

Seattle's T.J. Houshamzadeh lost a fumble after a catch on the second play of the third quarter. Danieal Manning knocked the ball out from behind, and Adewale Ogunleye recovered at the Seahawks 42. Cutler then found Johnny Knox on third down over the middle. The rookie juked Curry and dived in for a 7-yard touchdown, and Chicago had its first lead, 14-13.

Seattle would have answered by taking the lead if oft-injured Deion Branch, making his season début, hadn't allowed a third-down pass to go through his hands at the Bears 11 or if Mare hadn't missed his second field goal of the day on the next play.

On Seattle's next offensive play, Wallace — who set career highs with 26 completions in 44 attempts and 261 yards — threw a slingshot-like toss across his body while pressured in his end zone. Lance Briggs made a diving interception at the Seahawks 14.

Robbie Gould turned that into a 37-yard field goal, and the Bears led, 17-13.

The Seahawks débuted blinding, nuclear green jerseys. They should have been wearing ones with a red cross on them.

Hasselbeck, nine-time Pro Bowl left tackle Walter Jones and three-time Pro Bowl linebacker Lofa Tatupu were among the starters missing for Seattle. Six others played while banged up, leaving Seahawk coach Jim Mora saying he just hoped to have 45 healthy bodies dress for the game.

Yet Seattle jumped out to a 13-0 lead after 18 minutes.

Cutler threw his fifth interception of the season in the first quarter, after Chicago had reached the Seahawks 17. David Hawthorne, who also had 16 tackles in his first career start while replacing Tatupu, got the tipped pass. Seattle converted that into the first of two field goals by Mare in the half.

The Bears scored just before halftime thanks to a replay review. Forte caught a short pass and ran until hit at the 2. As he reached the ball forward for the goal line, Jordan Babineaux knocked it free and recovered the fumble.

Forte slammed his helmet into the turf as Mora did a dance on the opposite sideline. But after a review, referee Don Carey ruled Forte was "down by contact." Two plays later, on fourth-and-goal, Cutler threw a 1-yard touchdown pass to Greg Olsen to get Chicago within 13-7 at the break.

Field hockey downs Michigan

Michigan

The Iowa field-hockey team opened Big Ten play with a 3-2 road victory over Michigan (2-7) on Sept. 25 in Ann Arbor, Mich.

The win is the Hawkeyes' second straight and improves their record to 3-5.

The Hawkeyes faced a 2-0 deficit entering halftime after the Wolverines' Meredith Way and Bryn Bain both recorded goals. After tallying only two shots and earning two corners in the first half, Iowa's offense broke through for three second-half goals.

Senior Meghan Beamesderfer started the Hawkeyes' scoring charge when she found the back of the net at the 39:13 mark on a corner. Senior Tricia Dean and junior Sarah Pergine were credited with assists.

Dean recorded another assist fewer than two minutes later, when senior Jess Werley scored her team-leading seventh goal of the season and knotted the game, 2-2.

Beamesderfer fired her second goal of the day at the 64:56 mark, giving Iowa a 3-2 advantage. The Wolverines were unable to answer the Hawkeyes' three-straight scores.

Freshman Kathleen McGraw tallied six saves for Iowa.

Iowa will continue Big Ten play on Friday, when they take on Indiana in Iowa City. Game time is scheduled for 5 p.m.

Volleyball falls to Gophers

After starting the Big Ten season with a Sept. 23 win at Wisconsin, 3-1, the Iowa volleyball team (9-5, 1-1) fell, 3-0, to the ninth-ranked Minnesota Golden Gophers (10-3, 2-0) in the Minnesota Sports Pavilion on Sept. 26.

Junior Katie Kennedy and senior Megan Schipper each had seven kills apiece, junior Mara Hilgenberg dished 26 assists, and senior Christina Meister recorded 22 digs.

The Hawkeyes jumped out an early lead in the first set, but the Gophers went on a nine-point run to capture the set, 25-14. Minnesota had an attack percentage of .349 en route to taking a 1-0 match advantage.

During the second set, Iowa was again unable to pull in front of the Gophers, dropping the set, 25-14. Junior Becky Walters recorded three kills, and senior Megan Schipper added six digs.

In the decisive third set, the Hawkeyes only hit .075 for their attack percentage. This sealed the win for the Gophers, 25-18.

Iowa will return to the road to face NCAA and Big Ten champion Penn State on Oct. 2 at State College, Pa.

Women's tennis does well in Minneapolis

The Iowa women's tennis team traded serves with some of its own members over the weekend during the Golden Gopher Invitational.

Junior Jessica Young and senior Kelcie Klockenga defeated teammates Lynne Poggensee-Wei and Zuzana Chmelarova, 8-6, to win the Swarm doubles flight at the tournament.

The Hawkeyes reached their goal of bringing home some hardware — sophomore Sonja Molnar and senior Merel Beelen also took third in the Timberwolves doubles flight by defeating Erin Karonis and Marie-Christine Chartier of Iowa State, 8-1.

Junior Alexis Dorr fell in the final of the Twins singles flight to Alexa Palen of Minnesota (1-6, 6-2, 6-4).

Molnar also competed in singles, defeating Jennifer Holmberg of Nebraska (6-0, 6-1) to win her consolation round in the Vikings singles flight.

Klockenga won the consolation title in the Twins singles flight, winning (6-4, 6-4) over Laia Gonzalez-Garrido of Northern Iowa.

Also winning their singles matches on Sunday were Young, who defeated Adi Petrova of Buffalo (6-3, 6-1) and Beelen, who won (6-1, 6-3) against Alix Bex of UNI.

ANDREW R. JUHL

What my neighbor might have been thinking as I watched the Iowa vs. PSU game:

- Q1, PSU scores touchdown on its very first play: "Did someone just stab Andrew in the balls?"
  - Q1, Iowa throws interception: "A man named 'Stanzi' is apparently sleeping with Andrew's mother."
  - Q1, PSU field goal: "He must have hurt himself. I can hear him crying."
  - Q2, Iowa forces safety: "That boy sure seems fired up for basketball season."
  - Q2, Iowa field goal: "How do you cover a spread? A spread is a covering. I'm so confused."
  - Q3, PSU missed field goal: "He seems to really dislike large cats. Panthers, then wildcats, now lions..."
  - Q4, Iowa blocks, returns punt: "Does he have a girl over there? I think a girl just screamed, 'Oh my god!'"
  - Q4, PSU throws interception: "He does! He's totally having sex right now!"
  - Q4, Iowa rushing touchdown: "Those sounds aren't natural. Maybe it's porn."
  - Q4, Iowa recovers PSU fumble: "Wow. Definitely not porn. But whoever she is, she sounds like she's enjoying herself."
  - Q4, PSU throws interception: "Give it a rest, Juhl. Who you trying to impress?"
  - Q4, Iowa scores field goal: "He just made $50!"
- Goodness, I'm living next to a gigolo!"

- Andrew R. Juhl watched the game with friends who let him know that he, when happy, apparently shrieks like a woman.

- by Eugenia Last

ARIES March 21-April 19 The help you offer others will be repaid in a very special and unexpected way. You will have some great ideas, but you may have to hone them to fit your budget. Ask approval before you make your final decision. Maintain your integrity.

TAURUS April 20-May 20 Don't trust anyone with information that might affect your career or professional or financial goals. You have to be on your toes to outsmart and outmaneuver. Your intentions regarding someone you think is special should be revealed.

GEMINI May 21-June 20 You will learn something very valuable if you listen to the voice of reason and experience. Perhaps taking baby steps will be more advantageous. Don't count on getting any help from your friends or lover this time.

CANCER June 21-July 22 Your main concern has to be your status at home and in the workforce. A necessary change may make you nervous, but in the end, you will prosper. Be the silent observer and the thoughtful contributor.

LEO July 23-Aug. 22 Don't let what others do or say affect your productivity. Concentrate on moving things along using interesting suggestions and a mellow persona. Don't trust hearsay or promises that sound too good to be true.

VIRGO Aug. 23-Sept. 22 Give your all to the cause, project, or person you are trying to move along. You can form an alliance with someone who will add to your skills and ideas. A change in the way you think will surprise some - but not those who are already on the same page.

LIBRA Sept. 23-Oct. 22 Nurture and pay extra attention to the things you do and the people you love. Make changes at home to accommodate everyone, and you can reach your highest potential. Sharing what you have will open up opportunities you didn't know were available.

SCORPIO Oct. 23-Nov. 21 You won't see things too clearly. Your intuition is off target, and that will cause you to make an error that could affect you or your home negatively. Look for advice from an outsider who can view your situation objectively.

SAGITTARIUS Nov. 22-Dec. 21 Uncertainty at home and in personal relationships will take you by surprise, and it must be handled with diplomacy if you don't want to suffer setbacks. You may want to divvy up what you share with someone before things get messy.

CAPRICORN Dec. 22-Jan. 19 Get involved in a new interest. Expand your awareness, philosophy, or knowledge. Making personal changes to your home or workspace will enable you to be more productive. Invest in your future.

AQUARIUS Jan. 20-Feb. 18 You'll have trouble keeping things to yourself as well as within your limits. You will be prone to exaggeration, overindulgence, and unrealistic expectations. Before you spend, rethink your strategy, and plan something that is within your budget.

PISCES Feb. 19-March 20 You have too much to risk by sharing time-sensitive information. You can change your mind or redirect your efforts, but don't lose sight of what everyone around you is doing. A problem with poor information or someone renegeing is likely to set you back.
