Department of Veterans Affairs acknowledges shortcoming.

Vets may finally get $...

By GRACE SAVAGE

Veterans, awaiting financial aid for the past several months, may finally receive the benefits they deserve.

The Department of Veteran Affairs has acknowledged problems with the GI Bill and has yet to resolve them.

GI Bill lobbies have long campaigned for a fix to the problems, but the Department of Veterans Affairs has yet to produce one.

Student veterans have been struggling to pay rent, tuition, and other expenses since the beginning of the school year.

“I don’t lose veterans for financial reasons,” said Rollie Opalacz, a veterans’ ofﬁcial acknowledged that some students understand “ﬁnancial hardships” as a result.

The GI Bill has been difﬁcult for many students to complete, but the Department of Veterans Affairs has yet to provide a solution.

The Department of Veterans Affairs has been under pressure to address these issues, but has yet to produce a comprehensive plan.

The Department of Veterans Affairs has admitted some students faced “difﬁculties” as a result.

UI graduate Matt Lyons shows a medal he received for his service in Iraq in his Coralville apartment on Thursday. Officials in the Department of Veterans Affairs recently acknowledged a that there were flaws in the Post-9/11 GI Bill, and they plan to ﬁx them.

The Department of Veterans Affairs has processed 72,000 of the over 100,000 applications for the Post-9/11 GI Bill this spring semester.

The event, which had an attendance of more than $10,000, included 15 different vendors, 15 local schools, and 15 different organizations.

The UIHC Foundation was the lead sponsor of the event, and they donated a portion of the proceeds to the UIHC Foundation.

The event also featured a raffle, where attendees could win prizes, and a silent auction, where they could bid on items.

The UIHC Foundation’s goal was to raise $10,000 for the UIHC Foundation, and they exceeded that goal by raising $15,000.

The UIHC Foundation is grateful for the support of the community and the people who attended the event.

The UIHC Foundation would like to thank all of the vendors, organizations, and individuals who contributed to the event.

...costing around $18 million, said Peter Brown and David Benc- dian, a UI clinical assistant professor of computer engineering.

As the number of procedures conducted increases, the costs are coming down.

In 2009, the robotic procedures were performed at a cost of $240,000 per procedure. In 2010, the cost was reduced to $180,000 per procedure.

The decrease in cost is due to the increased experience of the surgeons and the increased efficiency of the robotic assistants.

The robotic procedure has been performed on more than 100 patients, and the results have been promising.

The robotic procedure has been shown to be more effective than traditional surgery in the treatment of prostate cancer.

The robotic procedure has been shown to reduce the time of recovery, to reduce the complications of surgery, and to improve the quality of life for patients.

The robotic procedure is now being performed at the UIHC, and the results are being shared with other institutions.

The robotic procedure is expected to continue to be used in the treatment of prostate cancer.

Aiding Haiti is a must for UI community and Americans alike

The devastation is widespread, the plea for aid is urgent, and the whole world is watching. As events in Haiti unfold, Americans and the rest of the world unite in a spirit of giving. The American Red Cross, Save the Children, The United Nations, the Salvation Army, and countless other organizations answer the call for assistance, and a multitude of people rally around to help. Contributions pour in from all over the world, and the list of contributors is seemingly endless. The international community recognizes that the needs of Haiti are great and that the United States has a responsibility to help. But what do we do when disaster strikes? Do we respond with charity or with indifference? Do we turn a blind eye or do we act in response to published accounts of the crisis? Do we ask ourselves, “What can we do?”

The current response to the crisis in Haiti is a testament to the power of individual action. People around the world are raising funds, donating supplies, and volunteering their time. In a world where the news cycles are fast and media coverage is fleeting, the story of Haiti has not been forgotten. Instead, it has been amplified and shared across social media platforms, inspiring a wave of generosity and activism. People are being reminded of the importance of coming together in times of crisis, and the response to Haiti is a shining example of what we can achieve when we work together.

The lesson from Haiti is clear: we cannot turn a blind eye to the needs of others. We must take action, no matter how small, to make a difference. And we must continue to speak out for those who cannot speak for themselves. It is only through collective action that we can create real change and make a lasting impact. So let us remember the lessons of Haiti and work together to ensure that we are ready when the next disaster strikes.
Maia to perform Haydn, Ravel

A UI quartet will bring its classical act to a local church.

By HANNA ROSMAN

For violist Elizabeth Osuka, music and religion have always been connected.

The Maia Quartet will perform at the Congregational United Church of Christ at 4 p.m. Jan. 31.

The group is composed of Zoran Jakovcic (violin) and Hannah Holman (cello) from the University of Iowa and Maia Jakovcic (violin) and Kate Jakovcic (viola) from the University of Chicago.

“We had to have a big sound,” Holman said.

Working in an ensemble, “you get to know musicians a lot better as well as get a closer look at what kinds of music composers are creating. It’s different, a like a work together a lot,” she said.

Holman said the Maia ensemble is like a smaller scale orchestra.

As a result of the flood, the quartet has the opportunity to play in many different venues ranging in size and type. Holman said playing in religious venues, such as the Congregational Church, can provide spiritual connections and acoustic perfection.

“It is not much about the religious part but spiritual,” Holman said.

“Playing in a venue like this will be great,”

The Maia Quartet is a UI resident quartet, which allows the musicians to lend to the rich tradition of music of the arts in Iowa City.

“It is very necessary for an ensemble to have a home,” Osuka said. “I feel like I can contribute to the community.”

The war on pizza

In Defence thrives on audience interaction and a war on pizza.

By REBECCA ROUNDS

It’s not every day that a band creates its own movement inspired by a popular food.

Hard-core punk/thrash band In Defence plays Wednesday at 9 p.m. at the Picador, 330 E. Washington St. The band is known for its war on pizza.

Defence has also released 10 albums and written by Crew in the late 1980s. Since its inception, In Defence has gained attention on an international level. Since its inception, In Defence has gained attention on an international level. In Defence has toured the world twice, performed at 35 countries in Europe. In Defence’s last studio album is a two-full-length LPs and a live LP document in that time.

The band has performed for several years, and what started as the band’s songwriting. Crew, 23, said, “We want everyone to get a good time, this and the fun the band has with its music to set it apart from a local Taco John’s.”

For the In Defence band members, it is the core of what they do and making the crowd a part of what’s going on more than anything. "I want you to be part of the In Defence family and have the experience as enjoyable as possible for longtime fans and newcomers alike." said Crew.

Defence released an album, "Dudes Part 3," in 2004. According to Crew, the album was written by Crew in the late 1980s. Since its inception, In Defence has gained attention on an international level. Injured GymHawks eye return

Three gymnasts hope to return to competition for Iowa against Illinois.

By BOBBI LEMMAN

Good news hit the Iowa women’s gymnastics team this week.

Three previously injured athletes seem to be ready to make a return to competition on Saturday, when the Hawkeyes take on No. 8 Illinois at 2 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

But the injuries have left the team without any depth, especially for the three.

Juniors Arielle Sucich and Libby said the absence of injured all-arounders will compensate for them with less-experienced sophomores.

“Really, we’re trying to replace them with less-experienced people,” Szatkowski said.

“Just trying to get the kids that we have right now are the best that we have,” Libby said.

“Really, we’re trying to repeat what we’ve already done,” Szatkowski said.

“Everyone’s aware of what’s going on—who’s who, who’s what,” she said.

“At the same time, people are stepping up and getting the job done. It’s all about improving each week as we go, and that’s what we’re doing,” Libby said.

“I’m trying to do that,”

“Just trying to focus on the things that we have and not the things we don’t have.”

“I think that we have right now are doing a good job, so we’re just going to try to keep on swimming and keep the focus on the right area.”

“At the same time, people are stepping up and getting the job done. It’s all about improving each week as we go, and that’s what we’re doing,” Libby said.

“I think that we have right now are doing a good job, so we’re just going to try to keep on swimming and keep the focus on the right area.”

Libby is forced to participate in all four events since Iowa has no other options.

“Everyone’s aware of what’s going on—who’s who, who’s what,” she said.

Five teams in any college sport are fast to a faceoff of conference counterparts like the Iowa men’s gymnastics team.

Iowa’s second-place performance at the Windy City Invitational on Jan. 16 and a tough loss to No. 3 Oklahoma on Jan. 27, the Hawkeyes found themselves competing Saturday night against Michigan State as the No. 9 team in the country.

The low scores for Iowa’s Big Ten team, including the Wolverines, are merely beginning. The Hawkeyes’ competition begins against the Nittany Lions in State College, Pennsylvania.

However, there was a large discardage in the best and the rest in the meet for the Hawkeyes. The title Friday fell to No. 2 Michigan State, including the Wolverines, who are now 25-0 in the Big Ten.

The Hawkeyes are already up against the Wolverines at the Windy City Invitational with Michigan finishing second.

“When we won, in addition to a high bar that we were good at, the Libertyville, Ill., is No. 8 in the conference, Iowa’s second-place ef-centric competition like the Iowa
Hawkeyes’ first-straight Big Ten championship.

“I’ve never been to the conference where I need to be in the match.”

Brands said Dennis’ match was a huge win for the team, adding to the confidence in his veteran wrestler.

“Everyone has been working on the in practice, and it’s always great to win a team score competition,” Brands said. “The team is coming together, and that showed us we have amplitude in his veteran wrestler.

“Dennis has got to get himself ready and be a little bit more focused. He’s been a

The Hawks (10-10, 3-5) will be facing a familiar foe in the No. 2 Michigan Wolverines on Tuesday night at Crisler Arena.

"The opportunity for Iowa is to capture another victory away from its home court," Sanderson said. "But Michigan has knocked the Hawks out of the last two Big Ten-Tournaments."

For the Hawkeyes, it's all about improving their record on the road. Sanderson believes his team has the depth and talent to compete in Big Ten play.

"We know they’re a good team and we have to bring our A game," Sanderson said. "We need to execute on both ends of the floor and play with energy and intensity."
