Dancing, Indian style at UI

By MAX FREUND

Twenty UI students tried out for the new Andhi dance troupe, 13 made the cut.

Andrei Williams grew up in West Des Moines—more than 8,100 miles away from Mumbai, India. But that didn’t stop the blond Midwestern woman from cultivating a passion for the traditional dance styles of her homeland.

“I am really excited,” the University of Iowa sophomore said upon hearing she had made the dance team. “I am just excited to be a part of a team and part of something cultural as well … meld two interests into something cultural as well.”

Iowa Andhi—which means “Iowa Storm” in Hindi—was formed in 2009 by three UI students, Ankit Patel, Tanvi Inani, and Aseen Amin, who hoped to create a fun opportunity to promote their cultural background.

But this year, organizers are working to change the all-male, more competitive team to be a close-knit group of friends. “I am very excited this team will be one to be a close knit group of friends.”

The newly proposed entertainment-venue exemption would apply to businesses that provide regular entertainment such as movie screenings and pre-recorded music, councilors agreed.

The ordinance would permit patrons of all ages at entertainment venues to consume alcohol. Customers under 21 would not be required to have a Hav-I.D. from the Office of Student Life.

The councilors were pleased with the proposed ordinance as they hope to balance safety and freedom of entertainment.

City closer on manager candidate

The public will have the chance to meet city-manager candidates before the final decision.

By LILY HENDERSON

Their self-imposed deadline is approaching, and Iowa City officials still seem to be on track when it comes to finding a permanent city manager.

Iowa City Councilors are expecting a public meeting next week to bring the candidates one step closer to becoming the city’s permanent manager.

The Iowa City City Council is considering another ordinance that would exempt bars from the 21-year-old ordinance for patrons under 21.

Though public input can vary, the councilors will be the last to consider the ordinance. “I hope they’re a true entertainment venue that seems like a good stand-alone operation.”

Ten years ago, Dave Conrads started to attend church services at Coralville’s Big White House, a house turned church-office-fellowship area in Coralville, they explained that the church is a house, which is open to the community for various undertakings and renovations.

The property, sitting on five acres of land, was vacant for 30 years before the church purchased it. The store house has been turned into a non-denominational church, where the congregation is formed of friends and colleagues of Conrads.

The church members have been formed from a variety of backgrounds, including former pastors and church leaders, and have a wide range of ages and experiences. The church is open to all people who want to come and explore their faith and their community.

The current pastor of the church is Dave Conrads, who is an ordained minister in the United Church of Christ. He is a native of Iowa and has been a pastor in various churches around the state.

He has been invited to speak at various conferences and events, and has been recognized for his leadership and teaching abilities. He is also involved in various charitable organizations and community groups.

He has a passion for helping people find their path in life and helping them to live their lives to the fullest. He is committed to leading his congregation to a deeper understanding of their faith and to making a positive impact on the community.

The fact that the Universi-
Strenghts of undererged sexual-harassment program should be extended to grad program

"[We] totally banded her, and it was frightfully awesome," the college-age student exults, to flat bursts all around. "'Josh" he heard from friends. "Was she an interesting woman?" he mused. In the next few weeks, the friends launch a discussion of the complexities between violent language, sex, and rape. Everyone leaves the conversation more edu- cated and the overwrought dialogue fades out.

The same applies in one of the University of Iowa's Sexual Assault Prevention videos. At the Iowa City resident, and channel resources to the program for our future is our responsibility, and it is important to focus on the message over the presentation. Even if not all students need to hear the mes- sage, it ought to provide a model of good com- munication about sexual assault. But again, it would help us. Better for everyone.

That would be the "Wrinkle in Time" line. We don't have the resources to make what was "such a lousy situation into lemonade," as re- ported by New York Times.

In my decade at the UI, they seem to be living in a bizarro world. Obviously the "tough love" thing is not something they have to deal with a lot.

Short lineup = blowout

The Grenade Slayers used a one-man advantage to blow out the Blumpkins, 48-0.

By RYAN MURPHY

The Blumpkins knew coming into Monday night’s Men’s Open League Section J contest against the Grenade Slayers that they would have only six men, as opposed to the usual seven. The squad hoped to overcome this disadvantage and win its first game of the season.

But the Grenade Slayers had other plans and used it to their advantage to annihilate the Blumpkins, 48-0, at the Hawkeye Recreation Fields. The extra-man advantage proved to be a key factor, players from both teams said.

“It was hard, there was always that one extra man,” Blumpkins quarterback A.J. Will said.

His statements were echoed by the Slayers’ Casey Schmitz. “It was definitely easier on defense, and on offense, there was one more guy to throw to.

Do everything quarterback Schmitz led the Slayers, shuffling the depleted Blumpkins defense for four touchdown passes. He also intercepted three passes on the short passing game of the night. Will said Schmitz recorded his second interception of the game, setting up a third-down touchdown pass to Michael Cooney to give the Slayers a 24-0 lead.

However, freshman Ross Williams of the Blumpkins intercepted two passes before halftime to keep the score at 24-0. The Blumpkins’ first two struggles continued in the second half and the team was unable to generate any offense. After forcing the Slayers to punt, the Blumpkins threw their fourth interception of the game, which was returned by Wallace to the 3-yard line. Schmitz then found sophomore Michael Hartberg to score.

Interceptions didn’t stop there, with Cooney soon returning a pick 24 yards for yet another touchdown. Still, the Slayers didn’t stop there – Schmitz delivered a strike to Krueze for a 20-yard touchdown and a 42-0 lead. The scoring was completed with a free-yard interception return by sophomore Tom O’Grady.

The mercy rule kicked in, ending the contest with two minutes left.

At 2-0, the Grenade Slayers will face a test next week against Teach You How to Touchdown 4-0 in a critical Section J contest. The Raw Doggers defeated Gragbin TDs 14-0 to move to 1-0 in Section J Monday.

The man advantage not withstanding, Schmitz and his team were excited about the victory.

“We all get pretty excited for Monday nights,” he said. “We anticipate this the whole day, so it was nice to get the win.”

The hype is gone — or, what the Hawkeye faithful are saying, the hype is mostly gone. After a 34-27 loss against No. 14 Arizona in the desert, it's as if the hype has evaporated, too.

"The game is mildly caught," sporting director Dave Corrigan said on ESPN's 'SportsNation.' "It's way better the second stop on the campus in Madison on September 26th, broadcasting the show's Big Ten road trip.

ESPN's Michelle Beadle expects Iowa fans to be loud and passionate during today's 'SportsNation' broadcast from Iowa City.

"I think it's going to be awesome," Beadle said. "I think there's going to be a lot of support from the fans and a lot of noise.

"I expect them to be passionate and loud. I hope they come out to the show and tear out the opposition's hearts with their bare hands and heckle and boo and all that good stuff."

"I wouldn't be against that."
