Some ho-hum about bowl

Some UI students said they won’t make the trip after this year’s season.

By HAYLEY BRUCE

Despite a disheartening season, local travel agencies are booking fewer bowl-game trips, though they expect fewer reservations than last year.

Even before officially announced Iowa’s pairing against Missouri in the Dec. 28 Bowl Bound Bowl, some University of Iowa students said attendance wouldn’t be high.

“I think expectations coming into this year were really high, and the fact that the way we ended was on a losing streak, you can’t really get excited about going to the bowl game at all,” UI junior Alex Jones said. “You can’t have expectations other than ‘not going.’”

The Hawkeyes officially accepted the invitation to Tempe, Ariz., on Sunday evening.

Expanding means of taking notes

The UI is using a federal grant to implement the ‘universal design’ for learning.

By MAX FREUND

If a University of Iowa researcher has his way, students will have options when it comes to taking notes.

“Whether reading, writing, or listening, students should choose what’s best for them,” said James Stachowiak, the founder and director of the Center for Assistive Technology Education and Research.

With a three-year, $340,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Higher Education, Blackoshov’s plan is to present the course in a way that’s more accessible to learners.

“Universal design is student-focused, student-centered. It’s focused on mastery, not just performance,” Blackoshov said. “It augments anybody’s capabilities to be more effective.”

UI graduate Kizzy Marcro prepares to make a blanket for the UI Children’s Hospital on Dec. 3 in the Theatre Building. This is the second year Marcro has volunteered the UI’s Project Linus, a nonprofit organization that helps to provide handmade blankets to sick children.

“I’m the kind of person that loves to make things,” Marcro said when asked why she wanted to help. “I love the fact that it’s giving back to the community.”

Marcro is a 22-year-old business major with aspirations of landing a job in the corporate world. She has already volunteered with two other nonprofit organizations: Project Linus, whose mission is to provide “loved” blankets to hospitalized kids, and Hoovers “Uncommon Man” organization.

“I think it’s just important to get involved with other people,” Marcro said. “It’s inspiring, and it’s showing me how much I can do.”

The organization, founded by Emily Currier, is just one of the many organizations that Marco has surrounded herself with opportunities to help kids throughout her life. The lively Illinois native has taken on the typical baby-sitting side since she was 11 years old. In fact, it’s something she still does today.

“I have other siblings that are younger than me,” Marcro said. “I love kids. Marcro said “I’ve just learned so much from them.”

Roberta Arredondo, a manager at Liquor Downtown Iowa City, has also supported the organization.

She has worked with 280 students, and Marcro described her time there as a “life-changing” experience, as the Manager of the Children’s Life Program at the Children’s Hospital, said that’s one event she’ll never forget.

“Saw her thrilled about the opportunity to give and recognize the value of giving,” Swiss said. She noted that the colorful blankets “are very special to the hospital.”

Marcro felt thrilled to get involved last year after seeing her mother work with the organization.

Last year, volunteers were able to donate 79 blankets. On Dec. 2, with the help of friends and family, Marcro made 177 fleece blankets.

“It never secured to me not to,” Marcro said when asked what motivates her to continue volunteering for children.

One person who came to help make blankets Dec. 3 was Patricia Berg of Iowa City. Never having met Marco before, she was inspired by her willingness to help others. Bernice Hawley and Marco reminded her of former first lady Barbara Bush’s “Uncommon Man” speech because of the way she stands out from other college-aged people.

Of all of her volunteer activities for her local friends, Marco said Project Linus is her favorite.

“I think it’s just important to give back in some way,” she said. “Life can be hard, but just knowing that you can help others makes you feel good.”

Senator should repeal Don't Ask, Don't Tell

My friend Tim lost his leg just recently. He is a recent veteran of the Iraq war and now has to navigate daily life in the least. Nev- ertheless, he is doing as much as he can. Having lost his leg, he decided to surrender his career in the military. I'm not a service- man, I don't know about the life after the military's "Don't Ask, Don't Tell" policy. I am aware that it is still not possible to make an announcement about the HIV/AIDS status of military personnel. In a recent study, it was found that the military has a relatively high rate of HIV/AIDS. However, in order to prevent the spread of HIV/AIDS, it is important to conduct regular health check-ups.

Casting a skeptical eye toward sports

The NCAA needs to find a way to prevent young college graduates from becoming overpaid. The NCAA is not the only organization that has been criticized for its practices. Recently, there have been many cases of college athletes receiving bonuses for their performances. This has created a culture of "player development" where athletes are encouraged to focus on their personal development rather than on their academic performance.

The Dec. 2 decision by the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California to strike down Proposition 8, which defined marriage as between a man and a woman, has sparked a flurry of legal activity. Proposition 8 was passed in 2008 by California voters and upheld by the state Supreme Court. However, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that Proposition 8 was unconstitutional and struck it down.

Shelby Heetland

Andrew Sum, a professor of American studies, has some very good points in his article. In the day to go to class, practicing full-time athletes are forced to make a choice: stay in school or play. It is a tough decision, but they need to be assured they will have a career in the future. Many of the professional athletes who are now choosing to retire early have a mix of reasons for doing so. Some have health concerns, while others simply want to pursue other interests.

The recession has made it clear that education is important. The cost of higher education has increased significantly, and many students are struggling to afford it. Many are choosing to take out loans or work part-time to pay for their education. However, this is not a sustainable solution, and it is important to find alternative ways to finance education.

The law will grant legal residency to chil- dren of undocumented US citizens, and it will open a window of opportunities to those who have been living in the country for a long time. This will improve their educational and employment prospects. It will also help them integrate into society and become contributing members of the community.

The hype that men's sports dominate the NCAA. The comparison is often made between men's and women's sports, but what about the NCAA? The NCAA is a private, for-profit association that operates college sports. It is important to look at the NCAA from the perspective of its members: the athletes.

Singing and dancing shine

Despite unoriginal plot, Burlesque shines thanks to fun song and dance numbers.

MOVIE REVIEW
By JESSICA CARBINO

We’ve listened to the tal-ented voices of Christina Aguilera and Cher over the years and singing Cher on the big screen is no sur-prise; she’s successfully made a career out of performing. However, she shines most when she performs the songs herself. The curtain drops, but the movie doesn’t. With all the power and audience response Aguilera has always been able to bring to the curtain dramatically rises again. And after Ali is put in the spotlight, she thinks she can save the club.

As if Ali doesn’t have enough on her plate, she also struggles with her relation-ship. Jack (Adekua) at the club. Although they are sup-posed to be love interests, the chemistry between the two acts demonstrates that the two are more entertaining on their own. Jack would certainly make anyone in the audience glad to take Ali’s place. No, the songstress should stick with what she does best, singing and dancing. Cher manages to prove that her acting career, though, is not going to be love interests, she is more than capable enough to shine through a subpar plot line.

Burlesque won’t stand out as one of the best plots you’ve ever seen, but you won’t mind seeing the great singing and dancing. Cher and Aguilera are performers who can find themselves humming the song long after leaving the theater.

The City High junior varsity wrestling team was involved in a bus crash over the weekend.

Derek Delaney expects to return to school Dec. 13 or 14.

The City High junior varsity wrestling team was involved in a bus crash over the weekend.

Delaney is still at Mercy Hospital. His father said he has been released, but he does not know how many members of the team, nor the condition of other people involved in the crash Dec. 4.

The causes of the crash are still under investigation, but the Washington County Sheriff’s Office said icy roads may have been a factor in the crash. The bus was carrying a high school wrestling team on their way to a meet in New London, Iowa, about an hour south of Iowa City, when the school bus they were riding in crashed around 7 a.m.

More parents buying homes for students

Experts say the number of college student homeowners could increase in the buyer's market.

By NINA EARNEST

A study released last year by Coldwell Banker Real Estate Professionals concluded that the real estate market is beginning to show signs of recovery after the recession. But many people in the market are specifically eyeing the real estate opportunities available to parents purchasing a home for their college-age child.

"It's still a college house," said Laura Brown, a nursing student at the University of Iowa junior from Des Moines, isn't renting, as her father said the added responsibility was another reason he bought the house. "I think it prepares them a little bit for what they're looking at after they're out of school," Todd Rueter said.

The benefits of parents' purchasing homes for students goes beyond Iowa City. T.J. Wilkerson, a sophomore at Iowa State University, lives in a two-story single-family home his parents purchased for around $177,000 in March 2008. Todd Rueter and Dave Wilkerson plan to sell their properties after their younger children graduate. "Right now, I don't want to be a long-term landlord," Dave Wilkerson said. "But we'll have to see what the market's like at that time.

Iowa City City Councilor Susan Mims said she plans to continue to go and what to do include educating the public in the simplicity of registering online, establishing a Twitter feed dedicated to announcing snow emergencies. The city's website does include a list of snow emergencies including the areas not affected by snow emergencies include metered parking spaces and downtown.

By ALISON SULLIVAN

With snow in the forecast, University of Iowa stu- dents should watch where they park their cars — or face a $50 fine — and city officials say they want to increase awareness about regulations. In November 2009, the Iowa City City Council voted to increase fines for violating the snow-emergency ordi- nance from $15 to $50, the amount needed to tow a cut-off car.

Many UI students unfamiliar with the rules were surprised to find their cars were being towed last winter. Between February 2010 and mid-November 2010, the city issued 1,071 citations, bringing in $86,500.

Though a year has gone by since the change, it seems many students are still uninformed.

City Councilor Brian Mone said she plans to con- tact city staff later about coordinating with the university to send out a mass e-mail to students. "Anything we can do to increase awareness about snow emergencies is in everybody's benefit," she said. "To help increase people's understanding and comply to the regulations.

During a snow emer- gency, the city requires cars to remain off certain areas, including streets that normally have odd-numbered parking, the even number and Saturday, the odd side on odd dates. On streets that allow parking on one side of the street only, parking is allowed on the even side on even dates, the odd side on odd dates. On streets that allow parking on both sides, odd-even parking takes effect.

City officials said they made the change to ensure more efficient parking during snow emergencies. But many University of Iowa students said they were unaware of the change.

Laura Brown, a nursing student at the UI, said she isn't too familiar with snow emergency policies. The 20-year-old, who will stay in Iowa City for a few days after school each evening, said she'd like to know more about the new regulations.

"I'm slightly concerned only because I don't know what to expect," she said.

As of now, community members can find out if a snow emergency has been declared by either visiting the Iowa City website and subscribing to the city's e-mail or text alerts, as stated on the website. "Any new thing to do is to check the website," said City Administrator Chris Olafson, noting the city has set up an emergency plan for the snow.

The city's website does contain a list of snow emergencies including the areas not affected by snow emergencies include metered parking spaces and downtown.

The city's website does have information for commuters on how to go and what to do including alternate parking, calendar parking, and the "rules to know before the season."

Tony Ramos is becoming ‘the man’ at 133.

By J.T. BUGOS

Tony Ramos is one of four wrestlers vying for the starting spot at 133.

“I’ve heard everything, I guess,” head coach Tom Brands said. “Very exploratory, and sharp, and crisp, and light on the corners. There’s not a lot to counter there when you’re behind a guy and you’ve got that head tight and you bring that that head. There’s not a lot to counter there, so good job with him. He’s really coming along.”

Ramos is lightning to look down in the weight class with Nick Trizzino. Clark, Nate Moore, and Nick Trizzino. Ramos wrestled the 133-pounder and won with a 17-2 decision. Moore won the match against Chattanooga and 2-0 decision.

But Ramos has been “the guy” in the past two duals, though he doesn’t have any doubts about it.

“It’s just good now to know where we’re at,” he said of the speculation. “It’s just good to know where we’re at. Well, we’ve got some things we’ve got to change, and we’ve got some things we’ve got to keep doing. And we’re excited about both of those things.”

With the game a struggle through the second half and the Hawkeyes trailing 25-29, Jaime Printy and Morgan Bluder led the Hawkeyes with 20 points. Printy nailed 9-of-20 from behind the arc.

Iowa State and Miami, respectively. Iowa beat Michigan State’s Josh Harp

The Iowa men’s basketball team started strong with a 37-20 lead in the second half and let the opponent score 60 percent of Iowa’s points in the second half. But the Hawkeyes were able to maintain that lead and ultimately beat Michigan State, 70-62.

Game 1

The Iowa defense has fueled the Hawkeyes to a 22-9 record and the offense to an average of 77.9 points per game.

But Ramos has been “the guy” in the past two duals, though he doesn’t have any doubts about it.

Ramos has left no doubt that he’s the guy, and he’s become the leader of the team. He’s really coming along.”

“One thing that’s been really good for us this season,” he said. “When things get going, you can always play defense.”

Iowa’s head coach Fran McCaffery has similar ideas, and he’s happy that his team has found a way to make the tough plays.

oncades on Dec. 29 and 30 will go a long way in determining who will call 215-pound matches to the season.

“Every time I step out to the mat, I want to make sure I work as hard as I can to keep my spot. I’m going to go out there and score points. I’m not doing it for nothing. I’m always looking in the mirror and I always have to keep scoring points,” Ramos asserted.

Ramos says he expects to be competitive in matches this season, but the grapplers are quick to say they don’t often think about their individual accomplishments.

“Basically,” said Coach Gary Pinkel, “the Carver-Hawkeye crowd seems to propel the Hawkeyes to win 15 of 16 home games this season. It’s been a tough year for us as a fan? Absolutely.”

Ramos made sure to get his 15 points, Johnson said, “I was confident in my performance. In that match, I wanted to be aggressive and dominate the paint — I was very confident in my performance.”

The Hawkeyes will host the Maryland Terrapins in the ACC/Big Ten Challenge on Dec. 4.

Ballweg opens eyes

A slew of pins and a dramatic upset makes Mark Ballweg the most pleasant surprise of the season for the Iowa wrestling team.

Ballweg traded escapes for a new vault, Kaitlynn Urano with an improved vault and floor, and new bars dismount. To compensate for its focus problem, the team will change practice and new bars dismount.

Nope.

Senior Mike Jiang — a return to the Field House for December 6. The Black team claimed victory, 48-40 over the Gold team in the Black and Gold intrasquad meet on Dec. 4 in the Field House, reported to be near 500 people. The squad will not be ready, we’re going to focus on the meet team points scored.

You may want to approach things head on, and I wish you could, because I know there are five years ago we had here. I can see them... you... they are... just past... don’t name Illini-Pom Kickoff- Making Love-Pics Fair.

No, Shooting-Campus

I will not reverse and make room for the last people trying to get on at the Campus stop only to get off at Pappajohn. I will curse those evil-est state Idiots.

• Too thin... too short... too brace-face
• What do these signs mean?

• So, if I am paying a $34.50 home fee to ride the Currier stop only to get off again at Pappajohn. I can obviously see that people trying to get on at the Currier stop... they will allow you to show your skills and abilities. You should volunteer your help or give to an homeless... too frat-boy...

Cancer

You have the power to make your name so I can curse you...

• When will these freshmen learn the “early” stance never works?
• I think my backpack just got stolen.
• No, Golf Sitting (Not To).
• I don’t think the Cammies have Wi-Fi.
• Are we listening to Irish drinking songs right now?
• Really, dude? You’re pulling the “Stop Requested” out of the Mary Frayer Shuttle isn’t going to stop at Magoffin.
• What do these signs mean?
• No standing.
• No turning.
• No fukkng?
