Some land work outdoors

State and federal departments want more young people to take on outdoor jobs.

By KATIE HEINE

True lopping wasn't something Kelsey Boyce did growing up in close around New York. But the UI sophomore volunteered four hours of her weekend chopping dead wood off trees at Hickory Hill Park on March 26.

Though the project was required for her Environmental Issues course, Boyce said, she purposely chose the course because of her interest in the outdoors.

"I think it's extremely important that we get involved and that we educate our community in these types of events," the 19-year-old said. "A lot of us in our generation don't really think of (the environment) and the outcomes it might have later on and for future generations."

On a local and national level, officials are attempting to get more young people interested in working outdoor jobs.

UIHC fuels local economy

Legislators said the hospital's contribution to the state won't result in more funding.

The University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics contributed nearly $800 million to Johnson County's economy over the last year, according to a statewide report.

The Iowa Hospital Association's annual study suggested the UIHC also generated 14,743 jobs.

The UIHC spent a little more than $44 million to retail sales and $4.6 million in sales tax.

Political uprisings in numerous Middle Eastern countries and a disaster in Japan have kept study-abroad offices on their toes and in touch with students abroad this semester.

"This semester has had the most challenges in terms of study abroad and security of students," said Julia Perkus, the director of the University of Iowa Office of Study Abroad.

And officials at many universities nationwide echo Perkins.

UI officials monitor the safety and security of the 500 students studying abroad in 30 countries. Decisions to cancel programs and advise students to return home is weighed heavily, Perkins said.

"We've been doing this professionally for 26 years, and I can count on one hand the number of students we've had to bring home," she added.

The UI has yet to warn its students to come home from other Egypt, Japan this semester, although one left Egypt voluntarily.

At Michigan State University, Julie Friend serves as the international analyst for travel health, safety, and security. She said she's only one of nine in a similar position throughout the country, including the New York University and the University of California system.

Friend said officials added her position as studying abroad became a bigger part of the undergraduate experience. In addition to examining the daily news bulletins from agencies such as the Overseas Security Advisory Council, Friend said, her usual day includes reading at least six publications focusing on countries of higher concern.

And while many events have occurred nearly simultaneously this year, the turmoil isn't unique. Friend said having to deal with numerous issues at once is the new norm, citing last year's Chilean earthquake and travel warnings for Mexico.

President Obama delivered an address on Libya at the National Defense University in Washington on Monday night. Vigorously defending American attacks in Libya, Obama declared that the United States intervened to prevent a slaughter of civilians that would have stained the world's conscience and "been a betrayal of who we are." As Americans, Obama announced that NATO would take command over the entire Libya operation on Wednesday, hoping his pledge to get the United States out of the last fight.

For your further edification, Mr. Wehrli, it is interesting to note that the U.S. military is not dealing with a dictator with a spin on positivity and control as much as a dictator with a spin on reality and manipulation. If the military is truly interested in reforming the military, then they should be more concerned with the reality of their situation and the control they are exerting over the situation rather than trying to control the reality of the situation. If the military is truly interested in reforming the military, then they should be more concerned with the reality of their situation and the control they are exerting over the situation rather than trying to control the reality of the situation.

More wheelchair victims

Thank you for featuring Mr. Wehrli’s article. It is horrifying to see how many individuals with disabilities are facing discrimination and exclusion in this society. It is time for society to recognize these individuals as full members of our community and work towards creating a more inclusive and equitable society for all.

studying in Egypt and Japan try to pack their bags and come home. University officials made the call based on U.S. travel- security warnings as well as some students' proximity to Tokyo, near where the earthquake hit.

"It does cause extra work and assistance on behalf of the students coming home," Louis said. The University of Wisconsin-Madison isn't alone. Temple University, which has a large branch campus in Tokyo, offered to fly 300 students back home. Numerous other schools have evacuated students from sense of concern, such as Egypt, and some have closed their study-abroad programs there, according to the New York Times.

Amanda Marlin, one of eight UI students studying in Japan, said she's seen many fellow students pulled back to the United States by their universities.

Marlin, who resides in southern Japan, said it's been her dream to go to the Asian country, and she wouldn't think of leaving.

"There's nothing to worry about where I am, so I have no reason to end my study-abroad experience early," she wrote in an e-mail. "Besides that, who would I do upon my return - start classes at Iowa two months late into the semester? It makes no sense."

The UI did make the decision to end classes early last spring for students in Mexico when the earthquake shook Puebla. She said the offices is watching Mexico again and anticipates suspending its summer program because of the heightened situation.

"If someone really thinks the situation is dangerous, in the program, there are a number of children who would have had in (spe- cial education) if they had not been in Reading Resources," she said. "It has been a very out-of- context learning environment.

The program is normally open to any student struggling with reading. With declining dropout prevention funds, it will likely change its eligibil- ity standards in the upcoming year so that students must meet one of several requirements to receive aid.

Schafer did say that UI officials did talk to other reading teachers and that there would be a 50 percent drop in student participation.

"I wish that the district would see the value in other ways such as general funds from the American Recovery & Reinvestment Act, and district Director of Instruction Pam Ehly, President Obama signed the large bill in February, which gave affected schools the option to receive the funding over one or two years. The Iowa City School District chose the two-year option, and it will have spent all of the $1,009,680 by June 30.

"With our state Legislature and its attitude toward teachers and edu- cation at the moment, this seems like something that's going to continue in the next couple years," said Julie Bridge, the Iowa City Education Association representative. "When they give us zero allowable growth and zero money for any stu- dent coming in, cuts have to be made somewhere."

Oneerry Braunstad has prepared zero percent allowable growth for fiscal 2012. Bridge said she understands the need for these cuts, though she is disappointed they fall on the teachers.

"In my utopian world, teachers would be the last place cut, because they have a direct impact on students and their educa- tion," she said. "My real-world brain also says that the teachers are the group that the majority of budget comes in human resources."

Andersen said she had always been interested in the environment but never really thought about it until she started to contribute.

"Though the Council never officially volunteered to meet the demands of the American Recovery & Reinvestment Act, she said she's just trying to do her best to remain full-time after graduation, she's "in love" with what she's doing and plans to move to Northern Cali- fornia to intern on another opportunity.

"I never would have thought that this was what I was going to do after college," Andersen said. "But I'm really excited, and I'm going to stay in California, which is important to me."

ROADSHOW IS IN CEDAR RAPIDS AND IOWA CITY THIS WEEK!

By Jason Delong

ROLL up your sleeves and get ready to start your spring cleaning early this year. The Treasure Hunters Roadshow runs this week in Cedar Rapids and Iowa City and is looking for anything old. Remember those matchbox cars you played with as a kid? You know, the ones that have been stashed away in the attic for the past 30 years. Well it’s time to dig ‘em out, along with any other forgotten treasures. You might be sitting on a small fortune and not even know it.

Roadshow representative, Archie Davis, explains what the event is all about. “It’s a chance to sell just about anything that’s old, and get a fair price. We host over 1,000 shows every year throughout the U.S. and Canada. Toys, dolls, train, pocket watches, old advertising signs, gold jewelry, coins and more.”

Since 2001, Treasure Hunters Roadshow has been in over 600 cities.

Just about anything can be sold at the Roadshow. This event is popular because it puts money in people’s pockets. At a typical Roadshow, we will see hundreds of people during the five day event. We will see a few unusual items, but mostly we will see a lot of old coins, gold jewelry, and a wide variety of collectibles. And collectibles. Last week at a show in Missouri, a retired dentist walked in with over 5 lbs. of dental gold fillings. “I would say that is a pretty unusual, wouldn’t you say?” commented Davis. The gentleman received over $31,243 for his gold fillings. He told Davis that over the years he would keep the extracted teeth when the owners didn’t want them. He would throw them in a jar and over the years it added up to over 5 lbs. of gold. Now, not everyone has a jar of gold teeth lying around, but according to Davis, more than you might think have some sort of gold they can cash in. Davis says, “The Roadshow receives a fair amount of gold each day of the 5 day event.”

Broken jewelry, gold coins and dental gold are all valuable items with today’s high gold prices. Archie Davis commented, “Other top categories at the Roadshow would have to be silver dollars and other coins, pocket watches and my personal favorite, old toys.” Davis told me a story about a visitor at a recent Roadshow in Iowa. This elderly gentleman walked into the show and asked if we were interested in old toys. The fellow must have had a few. In his late seventies or early eighties. He explained that he had kept all of the toys from his childhood and that they were out of his attic, garage, basement, etc. He walked outside, and to my surprise his pickup was full of the coolest old toys I had ever seen: big old metal trucks, pedal cars, train sets, cast iron toys, he had it all. We spent the next 3 hours going through his childhood. It was fun to listen to the stories he told about growing up. He said one time he decided to play farmer in the garden and ended up digging up and raising a fair number of vegetable plants. His folks were really mad and he said it was the longest summer of his life—working all the damage he had done. Then, the garden was a staple to every family. His mom would can, jar and pickle all of the vegetables, while the garden was replaced and all ended well. I even think I saw him wipe a tear toward the end of that story. At the end of that day, he ended up walking away with over $7,000 for his old toys. His last comment to me was “Well I guess it’s time to let ‘em go.”

Whether you have 5 lbs. of gold or a single gold tooth, a pickup full of old toys or a single Barbie doll, you should visit the show this week. It’s free, it’s fun and you could put some money in your pocket, maybe a lot of money!

Above—The Treasure Hunters Roadshow event runs this week in Cedar Rapids and Iowa City.

Thowers set to take off

The LSU Invite will provide an official start to the outdoor track and field careers for five freshmen throwers.

Matt McGrath is in the midst of a breakout sophomore season. He has been arguably the top performer for the Hawkeye men’s gymnastics team this year.

The Wh item, Ill., native is the only team member to be ranked in the national top 20 in floor exercise and vault.

First-year Hawkeye head coach JD Reive has been a huge part of McGrath’s development.

No. 10 Iowa’s team score. ‘He’s been fantastic on both events,’ Reive said.

‘He’s our big last guy up, and he’s been scoring points above everybody else. He’s also been filling in on (parallel) bars and rings and counting his score on those events.’

The layer of frost on the Cretzmeyer Track on Monday morning was not exactly ideal for the throwers waiting for their turn, a reality that McGrath can relate to.

‘I think we’ve had maybe one practice inside since we started going outside,’ said assistant coach Scott Capes, who works with the team’s throwers. ‘So they’re pretty tough.’

The javelin, discus, and hammer throwers also compete in the shot put, which is both an indoor and outdoor event.

Instead of having to be stationary in one closed area of the Recreation Building, where the flight of the implement falls off, they trickled their way around the infield.

Saturday will mark their first competition of the outdoor season.

McGrath leads gymnasts with solid scores

Sophomore gymnast Matt McGrath has become a Hawkeye leader with his performances on floor exercise and vault.

The high point of McGrath’s season was the four scores he recorded at the NCAA championships in April.

No one was affected more visibly than senior reliever Kevin Lee. The right-hander faced three Nebraska batters without recording an out on March 26, and his ERA ballooned to 6.00 as he gave up two singles, a walk, and two earned runs.

Iowa-City assistant softball coach Marla Harper said she brought in Johnson as an assistant this season because Johnson has “his great character, great energy,” and she Iowa alumni, “his pride in the program.”

Another factor working in Johnson’s favor is a truly remarkable record.

Johnson retired from the Chicago Bandits in 2010 as one of the most successful players in women’s professional fastpitch softball history.

Johnson has three All-American honors, two MVP awards, and four National Fastpitch Coaches Association Coach of the Year awards.

Like the casual fans of college football that Johnson enjoys talking to, players figure Johnson will be a positive addition to the Hawkeyes.

Despite not having as much upper body strength, Johnson will grow stiff as players trickled around the infield.

Tonight’s forecast predicts a wind chill of 22 degrees, not exactly ideal weather for baseball.

The hand-churned cold will make it more difficult for pitchers to grip the ball. Muscles in the grass will cause bunts hit to be easily slugged as they trickle towards first base.

The Iowa baseball team will face South Dakota State (7-9) this afternoon anyway, of course, but the Black and Gold know the cold could well play a role in how the game turns out.

The Hawkeyes (9-11) are just a few days removed from a frigid home-opening series in which the team struggled to get anything going offensively.

Iowa collected just 10 hits in the two games against Western Illinois at Bueker Field, and left-hander Trevor Willis watched the cards as the Hawkeyes dropped both contests.

McGrath has been fantastic on both events, and vault — an event he qualified for national finals in — has become one of his top five scores, with the best score being dropped.

The high point of McGrath’s season thus far came on Feb. 19 when he recorded a 15.000 on floor to establish a school record.

Reive said McGrath has great technical ability on the floor exercise.

‘He has really good leg-grip and his dismounts are very smooth,’ Reive said.

Besides developing the Hawkeyes’ set of floor exercise, McGrath has been a huge part of the vault — an event he qualified for national finals in — has become one of his top five scores, with the best score being dropped.
