Summit expected to be sold

The city is no longer recommending denial of Summit’s liquor license after violations found were fixed.

By ALISON SULLIVAN

The popular Iowa City restaurant and bar has been sold to be $387 million, to be more expensive than initially planned, officials say.

Mike Porter, known for his design of the Summit’s marquee, is in the process of selling the establishment, officials said on Thursday. He is seeking $332 million. Porter has a request from the new owner of Summit, ipass LLC.

Porter and his family have run the Summit for 10 years.

The UI’s Art Building West sits flooded on Sunday afternoon, June 15, 2008. The cost of the new University of Iowa’s flood projects — a new Frankosh, new art museum, new visual arts building, and studio-arts building — to be $569 million, $55 million more than the original estimate of $513 million.

But on Thursday, costs did not seem to concern regents as much as time.

Regent President David Miles said he shares some of the public’s concerns of the flood projects.

"We want to make sure it’s taken care of, and we need to move faster," Miles said. "We can only operate on a temporary base for so long."

Regents eye talks on tenure

Regents would like to see further discussion of the tenure evaluations at future meetings.

Laird Holden stands with a toy firetruck in the Pedestrian Mall during the Iowa City Public Library’s first Preschool Story Time Thursday.

The 4-year-old, wearing black and red, stood clutching a red fire truck to his chest, his eyes transfixed on the life-size version parked attack in the middle of the Pedestrian Mall.

The 4-year-old, wearing black and red fire boots, had the chance to meet his heroes during the Iowa City Public Library’s first Firefighter and Crime Stoppers Preschool Story Time Thursday.

During the story time, roughly 120 list- tened as officials from the Iowa City Fire and Police Departments and the Johnson County Sheriff’s Office provided safety tips.

But the event wasn’t just a chance for Laird to come face-to-face with friendly firefighters and safety officials — it was an opportunity for him to overcome a fear.

"He loves anything associated with a firetruck, and practice "stop, drop, and roll." he said.

Laird’s fear isn’t uncommon among young children, and it’s something emergency personnel said they want to avoid.

"It is important that they recognize a police, thank goodness, as any interaction with officers is a good thing," said Iowa City Crime Prevention Officer Jerey Bailey from his squad car.

"Sometimes, we run into children who have climbed on a police officer in a bad occasion — maybe mom or dad got into a fight, and they're scared — and we can talk to them and say any good interaction is good for us and it's good for them as well," Bailey said.

The state Board of Regents is scheduled to discuss the University of Iowa’s tenure-faculty evaluations at the meeting Thursday. But one regent asked for a review of the tenure system to see if the process allows for public conversation.

Regent Craig Lang said he would like to better understand how tenure plays into the roles at the UI, Iowa State University, and the University of Northern Iowa. He spoke about the late meeting in Ames about developing more time at future meet- ings to tenure discussion.

Lang noted he thinks officials should consider varying the evaluation process based on the length of a faculty member’s time at a university.

"I know we have to follow equal rights and all those things, but I wonder if we shouldn’t take a look at those of the beginning of their career differently from those that are older," Lang said.

Tenure is a symbiotic conversation use to allow a community a high level of job security after completing certain requirements. On Thursday, regent approved revi- sions to the UI tenure-review procedures.

The dean of Johns Hopkins University’s business school is in the running for the University of Iowa’s provost position, offering him a chance to return to Iowa.

Yash Gupta is scheduled to next week, according to a report on a public forum at 1:30 p.m. on the UI campus.

Despite several attempts to contact Gupta on Thursday, he could not be reached.

The dean is the second of three provost candidates to visit campus, following the announcement of interim provost P. Barry Butler’s candidacy earlier this week.

Residents, students need more awareness of rights

Iowa City residents seem to have difficulty saying "no" to police officers. Over the past week, there have been 40 reports about the presence of police officers in Iowa City. Thirty-three of these officers are Irish-American, and one is Black. None of the officers are of Latino background. This brings up the question: Why are all these police officers in Iowa City?

The Iowa City Police Department has been criticized in the past for its use of force and excessive use of pepper spray. The department has also been accused of racial profiling in the past. These issues are important to consider because they affect the quality of life for Iowa City residents.

Regents OK UIHC hike

By AAMNA MITT

The state Board of Regents voted unanimously Thursday to approve a $664,000 rate increase for the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics.

But officials said the hospital system is facing more than their rate hikes. Interim, the UIHC’s chief executive officer, said hospital officials are working to ensure all clinical and non-clinical facilities experience financial growth, despite difficulties in the budget process.

He attributed the problems to inflation and factors such as drugs and medical supplies.

According to the report, the hospital has a budget projected for fiscal 2011 of about $1.2 billion and for fiscal 2012, nearly a 4 percent increase from its fiscal 2011 budget. Additionally, officials projected a nearly $22 million budget for the UIHC in fiscal 2012, a 6.4 percent increase from the fiscal 2011 budget. The Currow College of Medicine’s projected expenditures, which are its primary revenue source, will be nearly $611 million, a 4.5 percent increase from fiscal 2011.

At a regents meeting in 2010, UIHC reported a revenue increase of 2.4 percent from fiscal 2009 to fiscal 2010.

UIHC officials said a "key driver" for the revenue increase was a projected 1.1 percent increase in total patient volume during fiscal 2012.

"These rallies continue to bring down the issue and get people thinking about sexual violence on our campuses and internationally," Haag said. "It's a really powerful way to help people who have been sexually assaulted get the help they need, and also to help prevent sexual violence in the future."

UIHC officials want the new Children's Hospital to help the top 25 facilities in the country and for the Currow College of Medicine to help the top 50 in the nation among medical schools. Officials added they hope to continue to raise substantial funding from the National Institute of Health.

"When we think about the budget of our entity, it is based on those goals in mind," Robillard said.

Regent Robert Donver said he thinks the UIHC and medical school are showing great strides for the university in terms of its medical outputs.

"We are certainly appreciative of the hard work and effort that goes into the work with our physicians, students, and staff," he said. "This budget appears to reflect that, and I hope we can continue to see the entity grow."
City continues to buy, demolish flood-damaged home

After a few initial misfires, the city continued its buying and demolition of flood-damaged homes.

City Solicitor Mark Bergman said the city has purchased additional properties and is preparing to demolish them. The city has already bought 30 homes and 11 businesses, and has demolished 14 homes and one business so far.

Bergman said the city will begin demolishing the properties in the coming weeks.

The city has received $387 million in Federal Emergency Management Agency funds to cover the cost of the flood damage.

Mayor Frank Forte said the city will continue to purchase properties as long as the funds last.

Farmers' Market returns

The Iowa City Farmers' Market will begin on Thursdays in May and run through Labor Day. The market will be held on the grounds of the former Comfort Inn.

Survey work

The survey will be conducted by Dr. William P. Singer, professor of psychology and director of the Iowa City Public Library, and will be available on the library's website.

Counties to sell some property

The Orange County Board of Supervisors approved a plan to dispose of some county-owned property in the county.

According to estimates, the sale of the property could bring in around $500,000, with some of the money going to the Orange County Community Foundation and other charities.

Royal wedding fever sweeps IC

The Iowa City Public Library is hosting a 5 a.m. viewing party complete with coffee, tea, and a wedding cake.

The event is being organized by the library's special events coordinator, April Flowerdew, and the library's marketing and communications director, Laura Callahan.

Callahan said the event is open to the public and that tickets are not required.

The library will provide coffee, tea, and bagels for the event, which will begin at 5 a.m. on April 29.

Phyllis Rosenwinkel met her fiancé through her interest in sewing machines.

By KATIE HEINE

Phyllis Rosenwinkel examined her 1800s Davis Law Arm treadle sewing machine in her southeastern Iowa City home on April 15. Rosenwinkel has a variety of treadles and electric sewing machines that date from the 1880s to the 2000s.

Rosenwinkel's Iowa City living room today, and the collection expands to nearly all other rooms of the house, except the bathrooms. "It's just an off-the-wall type of commodity that we share," Waganka said. "They're almost prettier with sewing machines after all of that," said Heywood, who has a variety of treadles and electric sewing machines that date from the 1880s to the 2000s, said the University of Iowa secretary in the Mathematics Department starting restoring and collecting sewing machines around six years ago. She said she was tired of seeing beautiful machines — some of them around 200 years old — sitting around collecting dust.

"It totally blows my mind that somebody can know so much about machines, she said, continuing to work with each machine she finds with. "They're almost prettier when they're all taken apart," she said, and she can easily spend eight hours fixing a machine. She also uses many of them for quilting, another passion of hers. Ellen Heywood, who has known Rosenwinkel for nearly 25 years, said the two still quilt together.

Rosenwinkel noted her passion literally sprout from a number of interesting machines. She said it keeps her "interested and engaged," although that she has had to tweak her hunting habits. Either than choosing every machine she stumbles upon, the bespectacled collector is more selective and chooses only the machines that intrigue her the most. Regardless of her lack of space, she is proud of her collection. "It would take up nearly as much space," said Rosenwinkel. "But it wouldn't be nearly as fun."
Michael Slider plays handcrafted guitar on the Pedestrian Mall on Thursday. Slider began playing the guitar more than 40 years ago after seeing it in action on the PBS series "The Music of Cello," Kay Rogos, Sonny Landreth, and Johnny Mercer. This particular guitar took 125 hours to make and was begun during his senior year at the University of Iowa. Slider has played around the world since 1996, and he is upset with the panhandling ordinance because of the recent tension it has caused. "I own a business," said Slider. "I don’t want to be living in fear."

Slider guitars are known for their beautiful craftsmanship and quality. They are made from solid wood and are handcrafted with precision. The sound they produce is rich and full, making them a favorite among musicians around the world.

The guitar used by Michael Slider is a special model designed specifically for him. It has unique features, including a solid spruce top and mahogany back and sides. The guitar’s design allows for maximum resonance, producing a rich and warm sound.

If you are interested in purchasing a Michael Slider guitar, you can contact him directly at his website or through his guitar shop. His guitars are available for purchase online, and they are shipped worldwide.

The Pedestrian Mall is a great place to watch Michael Slider play his guitar. He has been playing there for many years, and his music is always well-received by the crowd. So make sure to stop by the Mall on Thursday and enjoy the music of Michael Slider!

Tough water for rowers

The Hawkeye rowing team will face more tough competition at Saturday’s East Coast Races in Itacha, N.Y.

Throughout the spring season, the Iowa rowing team has faced some of the nation’s best squads. Seven of the nation’s top 15 squads competed against the Hawkeyes, including three of the top four.

On Saturday, the Hawkeyes will face more tough competition at the East Coast Races in Itacha. The races are the team’s final series of racing before the $10.5 million end/summer availability.

Members of the Hawkeye rowing team will be on the water from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the Cayuga Lake Inlet. The team will face the nation’s best rowing teams, including Dartmouth, the nation’s best team, and Yale, the nation’s top two teams.

Senior coxswain Emily Melvold said the team is ready to go into the Big Ten championships on May 15. The Hawkeyes will be a part of the nation’s top 15 teams in each event.

“Every time, you go out there, you want to impress outsiders,” she said. “Every time, you want to impress the opposition.”

The Hawkeyes have been making each race better than the last one, so we keep improving. We want to keep improving, and we want to impress outsiders.”

The Hawkeyes are working to develop a winning plan. The team has a 10-2 record in each event.

The Hawkeyes will try to develop a campaign against the Golden Gophers this weekend. Iowa is ranked sixth in the nation’s best rowing teams, and Iowa is ranked second in the nation’s best rowing teams.

Miller said that by facing top opposition in the final races of the regular season, the Hawkeyes have an opportunity to show that they are as good as the top teams in the nation.

“We want to get as close to as possible to those top teams,” Miller said. “We want to make people take us seriously. We want to be one of the best.”

The Hawkeyes will face top teams in the nation, including the nation’s top two teams, Yale and Dartmouth.

“We’re always going to bring our A game and try to put up a good race plan,” Miller said.

“We’ve had a couple of close finishes all season, and we’re really hoping to do well and show the nation’s top teams that we have pretty good performances.”

Melvold said the team will continue to improve and make a difference every time they step into the boat.

“We’re working hard every day to get better and make our mark on the pool,” she said.

The Hawkeyes are looking to expand their coaching authorization to.”

Molly Olmstead and McKenzie Melander, and anchored the field team’s 4x1,600 meter relay finishes second against Wisconsin on Wednesday. After dropping a double-header in its third Big Ten showdown in a row.

Watkins leads softball into Bloomington, Ind. Junior Liz Watkins hopes to break the Iowa hitting coach’s home run record against Indiana this weekend. Despite the success she has found behind the plate, Watkins continually works to improve her swing. Her motivation is a goal placed in front of her by Johnson, who said that if Watkins can perform every inning, she will hit 25 home runs in a season. "My goal is just to hit the ball hard," Watkins said. "You can’t go up to the plate and say you’re going to hit a home run. Every swing that I take..."

Experts consider Ryan Donahue one of the best punters in this year’s draft. By SETH ROBERTS

The first round of the 2011 NFL Draft is over, but plenty of former Hawkeyes, including punter Ryan Donahue, are still looking for a home. Donahue, a 2010 Ray Guy Award finalist and one of two of the five-longest punts in school history is widely expected to get picked somewhere in Saturday’s later rounds. The Daily Iowan got Donahue on the phone for an interview on Wednesday.

Outside of college the past four years, I’ve been doing spring ball and stuff like that. It kind of takes you out of the game, and you’re expected to pretend at midseason level during the spring. That’s what it feels like to see — they want you to do it.

It definitely throws you off a little, but a little bit of pressure is good. Sometimes it’s good to be a little bit nervous.

What have you been hearing from teams? Has anybody expressed an interest?

Donahue: Teams have expressed interest, but I don’t imagine a whole lot of teams will be looking punter. There’s only like two or three every year, and last year, you’ll see that no kicks were

The Iowa softball team will travel to Bloomington, Ind., the site of the 2011 Big Ten Champions- ships. Competition will take place through May 1 and the site of the 2011 NCAA championships.

The Hawkeyes were defeated by default when opponent Wisconsin was unable to travel to Bloomington, Ind. The Hawkeyes entered as the repeat of the 2010 Drake Relays.

So far this year, Iowa has produced a first-round pick.
