Grad student loves life on the ice

The UI Ph.D. student grew up next to a skating rink in Switzerland.

By Lindsay Douglas

Dano Diedrichs trains for months and spends every free second on ice, routine flawlessly, pulling off toe loop and double axels.

“That’s the nature of a lot of things in life,” said Diedrichs, 38, “and then one shot at eight.

He is looking to take a test in school. You can study hard all semester, but failing the final exam will really ruin your GPA.

The Coralville resident first hit the ice when he was four at a skating rink in Switzerland. He didn’t get into planes; he got his pilot’s license.

“I know he’s getting back into fig-ring competitively,” he said.

“When does everything in life,” said Diedrichs, 38. “You have the stars.”

He compared it to taking a test in school: You can study hard all semester, but if you don’t get the right answer, you won’t pass.

He has worked hard to perfect his understanding, Spanish, English, French, German, Italian, and Latin.

He also served as a member of the church, where he is a group leader for 30 graduate students, and he plays piano.

In March 2009, Diedrichs competed in the U.S. Figure Skating National Championships at the World Arena in Minneapolis, and took first place in the men’s division.

But the skaters are likely to be in the gold division at the World Figure Skating Championships in January at Quebec, hoping to qualify for the U.S. team. "I’m afraid of the hard work it takes," he said.

That’s the nature of a lot of things in life,” said Diedrichs, 38. “You have the stars.”

And while Diedrichs said he might not always be a teams-up-a-kind kind of guy, he still sets his goals high and won’t be afraid of the hard work it takes to achieve them.

“70% is a lot of precision and then a lot more to achieve that,” he said.

But you can’t get the best of both worlds - you can’t have 100% of the time and 100% of the space.

According to police, Raymundo already removed the shirt, emptied the bag, and was 'gone in his face.'

When the man’s wife asked her to alert security officers, police said numerous witnesses saw Raymundo walking beside white and red police car.

The war on drugs has failed. It’s time to log off marijuana and let it become legal; other drugs, and implement meaningful policies instead of fearmongering. The statutory words of drug-reform advocates are not just a guiding moral tenet, but a necessary component of the Global Commission on Drug Policy. A small but committed member panel made up of distinguished academicians, experts in the field, and public officials declared the war on drugs over nearly a decade ago, in uncertain terms. If the drug war was supposed to accomplish anything, it was to decrease the consumption of drugs, and bring access to them. Quite the opposite has happened.

The Global Commission found that for three categories of drugs — opioids, cocaine and cannabis — consumption was up by 14 percent, 27 percent, and 8.5 percent, respectively, between 1999 and 2008. A new report by the Monitoring the Future Project revealed a massive jump in past-year marijuana use among young people. This directly contradicts the Washington’s War on Drugs illegal will make youth less likely to consume. Despite one’s best intentions, the introduction of drug consumption, there is no logical end point to the war on drugs’ attempts to limit access and consumption and keep it is a 2011 University of Iowa. Despites concerns, hookah loved

A hookah might seem almost an alien contraption, with its bulbous tubes covered in colorful webbing — called shisha — and heated charcoal, flanked by colorful smoking hoses through which users inhale smoke.

But despite growing national awareness about the potential dangers, some UI students and tallon believe hookah use is safer and more enjoyable than smoking cigarettes.

SOLUTION TO SATURDAY'S PUZZLE

"It's time to rid yourself of the people and activities that push 18 pounds. I guess it would help if I didn't feed a smartass all the time is what I always feel up and down. It's probably better to turn to my friends where you always feel at home and make up again?" — by Eugenia Last

A: Yes, but mostly only if you make the first move. Talks will lead to solutions.

SCORPIO

You may not get all the information you require.

TAURUS

You'll be pressured to take on a chore that isn't your area.

ARIES

Spend more time with family or on projects that you make sure are under control.

PISCES

You are in a silent observer if you don't want to fall behind with your chores.

CAPRICORN

Take action, and get the things you want done out of the way.

GEMINI

You'll find friends who are poor influences. Gravitate toward individuals who ensure you have a good time and meet interesting people.

LEO

Your friends will be supportive and encouraging.

TAUROS

Youngsters and friends will help to establish what you expect from jobs.

LIBRA

You'll have no fear?

CANCER

You'll be pressured to take on a chore that isn't your area.

SAGITTARIUS

You should keep asking questions, and he thanks the readers who submitted these.

MAMALOGUE

Ask your local Ledge writer:

Q: You could eat at any restaurant in the world tonight, which one would you choose?

A: I love French cuisine, so I probably should eat in Paris. Or possibly Languedoc.

Q: What would you try if you were in Paris?

A: Foie gras.

Q: You could bring out the worst in anyone, but then, who doesn't?

A: Excel.

Q: What's your favorite pet phrase?

A: Redick. That phrase is pushing 50 pounds. I guess I shouted it in the face of David Lee vector freight, and it has stuck like no other, and a full gram of happy tears.

Q: Do you have any friends who you could call when you need help in a hurry?

A: No, I have a couple who I don't even for help.

Q: How many pillows do you sleep with?

A: That's my own business, thank you very much. But I will tell you that I sleep with pillows, six of them...and whenever I sleep with a new pillow, I sleep with at least 50 times.

Q: Do you consider yourself exceptionally reasonable or exceptionally stupid?

A: One who doesn't agree with me

Q: Do you really think that just being sarcastic sometimes all the time is funny?

A: Yes, but mostly only if you make the first move. Talks will lead to solutions.

Alcohol-Harm Reduction Plan

Some of the initiatives that Bender will work to implement include:

- High-risk student accountability for drinking: Work directly with students who are at risk of problems with alcohol, with the goal of changing the culture around alcohol;
- Implement a student identification card system for drinking.

ham Valdes, and Brandon Osay hovered around the mark throughout the tournament, with all three jumping 6-10.

Herron finished with a commendable 21st after the first round but surged back with a cleanest meet of the year; no less.

The West Regional was also one of his cleanest meets of the year; Herron had one miss on his five jumps. “He stayed aggressive,” Smith said. “He did a really good job of staying focused throughout all his jumps.”

The high jump finals are scheduled to start at 5:20 p.m. on Friday. When the competition begins in Drake Stadium, Herron will jump with the mindset that he belongs there. Although the Hawk- eye admitted he could have benefited from jumping 7 feet earlier in the season, he said doing it at regionals gives him that much more confidence now to jump with the rest of the best. “It’s all about perform- ance on the day,” he said. “I’ve got the confi- dence that I can jump with the best.”

Herron will probably be an underdog in Des Moines—the mark the top men need to jump to make the finals is 7-7.5, and 11 of the 24 high jumpers who will be there have jumped 7-5 or higher—but Smith and Wieczorek said they hope Herron can set a new personal-best. “It would be a lot to ask and say, ‘Jeff, let’s make 7-3 or 7-4.’ Wieczorek said. ‘I’d be really happy if we’re going to be unhap- py.”

DISCS CONTINUED FROM 10

“Vince India and Brad Hopfinger were first-team All-Big Ten selections this season. Hopfinger, both of whom were first-team All-Big Ten performers in the past, converted 10 strokes a day, and his golf makes up to 60 percent of his business. I draw a lot of people out, some from as far as Des Moines,” he said. “If I didn’t have golf going on, I’d be babysitting. Kallous loves to specialize in knowledge about the discs, and sometimes he helps beginners learn more about the sport. He said he figures the simplicity of the sport is a large part of the attraction. “There are no tee times,” he said. “You just buy discs, and away you go.”

21st after the first round, and finished 10th in a tie for 20th individually said in a state- ment. “We faced the rest of the day and we battled hard [in the final round] to almost get the job done.”

Ultimately, though, the team needed three birdies on the final hole and wasn’t able to convert. Still, senior-to-be Chris Brandt said, the Hawkeyes have nothing to be ashamed of in Iowa City several times a week to play courses here.

Kallous’ shop has a larger-than-average selection of discs, he said, which attracts people from out of town. He estimated Funcestor sells approximately 125 discs a day, and disc golf makes up to 70 percent of his business. “I draw a lot of people out, some from as far as Des Moines,” he said. “If I didn’t have golf going on, I’d be babysitting. Couple donate $200K to women’s basketball

Ralph and Barbara Stephens of Solon gave the Iowa women’s basketball team $200,000 to cre- ate the Ralph I. and Barbara G. Stephens Women’s Basketball Scholarship. The gift was presented by the Stephens’ son, Ralph II, in a statement. “Our contribution will have an impact on genera- tions of student-athletes at Iowa, and I hope that our generosity will bring a much-appreciated boost to our program.”

Ralph Stephens has taught and coached in the university’s Mechanical and Industrial Engineering Department since 1965, and Barbara Stephens gradu- ated from the School of Art and Art History in 1965. “Our greatest accomplish- ments were gained at Iowa,” Ralph Stephens said in a state- ment. “This is a great way to give back to our alma mater.”

The two gave an additional $250,000 to the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. The gift will establish the Professor Ralph and Barbara Stephens Women’s Basketball Endowment Fund.

Disc golf sails along

BY CONRAD SWANSON

The sport of disc golf has blossomed for people of all ages in the last few years. It’s easy to learn, inexpensive, inclusive, and available to everyone from rank amateurs to more serious competitive players.

Although the sport has been around the Iowa City/Coralville area for decades, there has been a recent uptick in the number of participants. Bill Kallaus, who owns Funcrest Bait and Tackle near the Coralville Reservoir and sells discs, said he has noticed a substantial growth in the past five or six years.

“I see a lot of new faces,” he said. “I think it’s something to do with more college kids moving in.”

Participants have mixed opinions on the effect UI students have on disc golf activity. Some say it’s a lot calmer, with the students leaving the summer, while others say the locals come out more often as soon as the students are gone. Kallaus has noticed that when the students leave, the number of people playing “drops off somewhat, but there are still a lot of local people.”

Joshua Peary, who has played disc golf for five years, says he doesn’t see the students as too much of a problem.

“Crowds can pick up,” he said. “You see the occasional large group — usually students — that then go.”

Peary estimated that the disc golfers can be male or female and run the age between 15 and 50, which speaks to how diverse the players can be.

The courses can get crowded at times, however, making it difficult to play a round at a reasonable pace.

“I wish they’d put a new course in to take the pressure off,” Kallaus said when discussing the Turkey Creek course by the Reservoir.

Because disc golf has the potential to be a group activity, it has a large draw. People from all around the state can come and play nearly for free — the best cost is the one-time investment in a disc. Many, such as 55-year-old Jim Albrecht, are introduced to the sport by their friends, and they find satisfying outdoor activity appealing.

“It’s not a competitive thing,” said Albrecht, who has played for around 10 years. “You pick up and you go.”

Many people have begun traveling to different courses. The Professional Disc Golf Association says Iowa has around 150 courses, each with its own geography and landmarks — similar to the way more traditional golf courses.

Herron finds the magic of 7

Jeff Herron becomes the first Iowa high jumper to clear 7 feet this season.

PHYSICALLY, clearing a 7-foot bar is an attainable mark for many Division-I high jumpers.

But, mentally? That’s a different story.

“It’s like a magic height people stress about,” Iowa high-jump coach Christi Smith said. “A lot of people don’t clear 7 feet. To clear 7 feet — it’s like 7 feet. It’s like a mental barrier.”

“It’s like an exclusive club,” the junior said. “It’s like there are the 7-footers, and then there is everyone else.”

More than 500 college athletes posted marks in the high jump during the outdoor season. Only 58 jumped 7 feet or higher. Herron joined the club on May 27 at the NCAA West Regional, when the 21-year-old cleared the bar at a course-best 7-7.5 in Eugene, Ore.

Iowa head coach Larry Wusurek said he was a bit surprised to see Herron continue the NCAA track and field national championships in Iowian this week.

“I think that’s the nature of those starting lineups — when somebody’s a favorite doesn’t make it to nationals, everyone’s surprised,” Wusurek said. “And, then somebody makes the most of that opportunity to get a personal best and put himself in the meet as Jeff Herron did this year.”

Cleared, the 7-foot bar was a goal Wusurek talked about for all three of his high jumpers during the outdoor season. Herron, Gra-
