Student faces harassment, assault charges

A University of Iowa Student Government senator was charged Sept. 30 with first-degree harassment and assault while displaying a dangerous weapon after he allegedly threatened a friend with a knife.

Rishabh Nath, 20, was reportedly fooling around with friends in his apartment in the early morning hours of Sept. 30 when he allegedly began using a knife as a sword.

According to a complaint by Iowa City police, one of Nath's friends felt unsafe because of the display and locked himself in a bedroom. Nath then allegedly stabbed and beat upon the door with the knife.

The complaint said the victim then heard glasses and boxes hitting the floor, and he exited the room. Nath then allegedly threatened the victim, putting the knife against his throat and pressing him up against the bathroom sink, verbally threatening him.

The complaint said the victim feared for his life.

First-degree harassment and assault while displaying a dangerous weapon are both aggravated misdemeanors.

Man charged with record tampering

A 22-year-old North Liberty man was arrested for supplying officers with different Social Security numbers on separate, unrelated arrests.

Cruz Maximo-Campos, 247 B Holiday Lodge Road, was charged Sept. 19 with tampering with records after he allegedly obtained employment at Pancho's using a false Permanent Alien Resident card.

He was also employed under a different Social Security number, the complaint said. After investigation, officers found that neither of the Social Security numbers belonged to the man.

Campos may face incarceration and possible deportation if he is found to be an illegal immigrant.

Officials could not confirm if Campos is an illegal immigrant.

GOP caucus hopeful Rick Perry has repeatedly called for deregulation of business to spur job creation and he iterated those calls over the weekend in Johnson County.

But some experts said such deregulation of government may not create jobs.

"It's not as simple as saying if you deregulate, then jobs will be created," said University of Iowa economics Professor Beth Ingram. "Sometimes ... creating more regulations would

Arresting philosophy

The dysfunctional characters on the cult television show "Arrested Development" can teach people about philosophy.

This is the concept behind University of Iowa graduate student Kris Phillips' book, 'Arrested Development' and Philosophy: They've made a Huge Mistake, which is set to hit bookshelves this December as part of a series relating philosophy to pop culture.

Executive Producer Mitch Hurwitz announced earlier this month that a new season and movie adaptation of "Arrested Development" would begin next year.

Phillips said the publisher had planned to release the book before Sunday's announcement was made.

Photography born in tragedy

A tragic car accident in 2003 sparked the retired teacher's passion for photography.

BY JULIA JESSEN

julia-jessen@uiowa.edu

Spending the morning hiking around the Amana Colonies, searching for the perfect scenes to freeze in time with his camera, David Heusinkveld finds beauty in nature: flowers on the Amana lily lake, a grasshopper framed by a leaf, ducks sitting lazily in the water.

"I'm just trying to increase the beauty in the world with pictures," the former special-education teacher said.

But photography didn't become a serious venture for Heusinkveld until tragedy ripped away the life he once had.

In 2003, he was riding in the car with 18-year-old son Jordan when another car hit them head on. Jordan was killed on impact, and David was within a minute of dying before his life was saved by a passer-by.

"[The accident] changed everything," Heusinkveld said. "Everything was just totally different."

His left wrist is now immobile because the artery was severed during the accident, the bone protruded from his skin, and he nearly bled to death. His brain was also affected, causing behavioral changes, short-term memory problems, and a form of dementia.

Despite these challenges, Heusinkveld's mother, Joan Liffing-Zug Bourret, said she admires her son's transition into photography.

"I'm very proud of him for finding a new career when he couldn't teach anymore," Liffing-Zug Bourret said. "His photographs of nature have wonderful composition, and I think they're extraordinary."

Heusinkveld's photography is on display at the Kirkwood Community College's Nielsen Hall, and it will be the cover art for the upcoming book Perilous Moments, by Russell Noyes of Iowa City.

Photography became a way of coping for Heusinkveld. He started creating images more regularly after coming upon the Amana lily lake frozen in the winter. He said the foliage beneath the ice inspired him, and his photography ballooned from there, acting as a way of communicating with the memory of his son.

"I would maintain that all of my pictures are grief-driven," he said. "I think there's a kind of pain in this that I think makes a person much more sensitive."

An exhibition of Heusinkveld's and his mother's work was recently on display at the Cedar Rapids Museum of Art, titled Like Mother, Like Son.

Though the car accident sparked his photography, Heusinkveld had been interested in the art form for a long time, learning at the knee of his mother who is a well-known civil-rights photographer.

Cedar Rapids Museum of Art Curator Sean Ulmer said he was impressed with the level of accomplishment and sophistication in Heusinkveld's photographs.

"He has a very different way of looking at the world, and he sees things in the natural world around him that most of us just zoom right by," Ulmer said.

Carrying two cameras with him everywhere he goes, as well as a list of places he wants to photograph that day, has become a way of life for Heusinkveld.

"I have a lot of fun," he said. "If it's not fun, I'm not going to do it."

Despite the fact that his photographs come from a place of deep sadness, Heusinkveld said he doesn't ever take morose pictures. Instead, he said, he wants people to smile when they see his work.

"Without emotion, there are no good pictures," he said.

Man charged with assault

Iowa City police arrested an Illinois man after he allegedly assaulted another man at a downtown bar.

Robert Gavrick III, 19, Willow Springs, Ill., was charged Oct. 7 with assault causing bodily injury.

According to a complaint, officers became aware of Gavrick on the Pedestrian Mall in front of the Library Bar, 111 E. College St., when he was being shouted at by another male — who told officers Gavrick and two other men approached him while he was in the restroom.

The complaint said witnesses told police Gavrick and the male fought on the dance floor over a female.

Gavrick allegedly grabbed the male around the neck and slammed his head against the wall.

The complaint said the male had corresponding marks on his neck and a red lump on the back of his head.

Man charged with domestic-abuse assault

Coralville police arrested a homeless man after he allegedly slapped a woman and injured an officer while resisting arrest.

James Shaw, 21, address unknown, was charged Oct. 7 with domestic-abuse assault without intent causing injury and two counts of interference with official acts causing bodily injury.

Complaints said Coralville police were called to a First Avenue residence for a domestic disturbance. The complaint said Shaw held a woman, whom he was romantically involved with, by her arms to keep her from moving and leaving and slapped the right side of her face. Shaw also allegedly spit on her several times.

When being arrested by police, the complaint said Shaw pulled away from officers and flailed his arms and legs, causing an officer to receive a laceration on his arm and left leg.

The complaint said the woman had swelling on her face and bruising on her arms.

Woman faces drug charge

North Liberty police arrested a Colorado woman after allegedly finding 11 pounds of marijuana in her vehicle.

Alexandra Owens, 27, was charged Oct. 6 with failure to affix a drug tax stamp.

The complaint said officers pulled Owens' car over on I-80 near the 238 mile marker because of a non-functioning headlight.

Owens allegedly appeared to be nervous and shaking when approached by officers and denied officer's consent to search the vehicle.

A K9 later alerted police to the car, and a search yielded bags totaling approximately 11 pounds of marijuana without a drug tax stamp affixed, the complaint said.

Failure to affix a tax stamp is a Class D felony, punishable by up to five years in prison and a maximum fine of $7,500.

Gasoline prices fall

CAMARILLO, Calif. — A survey says the average U.S. price of a gallon of gasoline has dropped 13 cents over the past two weeks.

The Lundberg Survey of fuel prices released Sunday puts the price of a gallon of regular at $3.42, down 13 cents from two weeks earlier and down 25 cents in the past month.

Costs have seen similar drops in midgrade, now at an average of $3.58 a gallon, and premium at $3.70.

Diesel fell 7 cents to $3.85 a gallon.

Of the cities surveyed, Albuquerque, N.M., had the nation's lowest average price for gas at $3.07, and perennial price leader San Francisco had the highest at $3.81.

In California, the lowest average price was $3.71 in Fresno. The average statewide was $3.77, down 11 cents in the two-week span.

was just lucky timing on our part," Phillips said. "It's sort of serendipitous that it worked out this way. We sent it to print, and then they announced the movie."

Phillips, who initiated the idea and co-edited the book, said he pitched the project to the publisher several times before the idea was accepted. He said the book was going to be released at the same time as the movie, adding when the movie "looked like it wasn't going to happen," they decided they "might as well just put it out and see what happens."

Phillips said the book comprises 17 chapters written by different students and professors of philosophy from all over the world.

UI philosophy graduate student Brett Coppenger, for example, submitted one of the chapters, which focuses on the concept of the "Gettier Problem."

Coppenger related this concept to the show. For example, at one point in the series, a character named Buster Bluth believes his uncle to be his father because his uncle says, "I'm not your uncle, I'm your father." This makes Buster form a "true belief" that the person he thought was his uncle is actually his father.

However, the show later reveals the person who said this to Buster was in fact his father disguised as his uncle. Coppenger said just because the belief Buster held was true does not cause his belief to be considered "knowledge."

"The idea was supposed to be illustrations that are examples in which somebody seems to have a justified true belief ... it's not something that we call knowledge," Coppenger said.

Co-editor of the book Jeremy Wisniewski said he wanted the project to include "all the important elements of the show" while still providing an accessible path to philosophy.

Wisniewski said a large purpose of the book is to get people to ask "questions about whether or not what we believe is justified."

"Encouraging those kinds of questions can have sort of a ripple effect across all levels of society," Wisniewski said. "It's not only fun but important."

Phillips said the ideas of philosophy relating to the show have an everyday impact.

"It's actually more of an issue of seeing how important and how relevant philosophy is to the things that you enjoy on a daily basis," he said. "There are philosophical issues everywhere ... they're constantly around you."

Meet Your Councilor

Matt Edwards

Q. What is your title and where do you work?
A. I work in the Tippie College of Business in the Undergraduate Program Office. My position is Assistant Director, Global Perspectives.

Q. What is the most memorable event you attended on campus this past year?
A. I really enjoyed helping out at one of the 'Next Step Iowa' programs that the Office of Admissions puts on for high school seniors in the spring. It was great to talk with incoming students and their families and see how excited they all are to begin school at Iowa. And I'll add a 2nd memorable event- The Decemberists concert at the IMU last April was also pretty amazing.

Q. What is your favorite spot on the UI campus?
A. While the Pentacrest is always fantastic; I have come to appreciate the walking path behind Quad and Bowen Science Building. It's nestled in a gulch and is just peaceful and picturesque. When I'm heading to meetings on that side of the river it's great to walk that route instead of taking the bus.

Q. Staff Council is focusing on Sustainability this year. Any tips or practices you'd like to share?
A. Well, my 3 year-old son always reminds me to not leave the water running when I brush my teeth. On a campus note, I'd like to see more waterless urinals installed since these save a huge amount of water. I'm also looking forward to hearing more about the new campus recycling program.

Message from the UISC President

The latter months of 2011 seem to be passing by quickly, perhaps because we have all settled into the academic year with great focus on our goals and objectives for 2011/2012. We have much to accomplish academically and professionally and there is no time like the present to effect progress forward. That is certainly the perspective of your Staff Council as we are presented with many activities taking place in October. Among the significant accomplishments and activities of the Council are:

- Passage by Staff Council of revised bylaws.
The lengthy and tedious process of comprehensively revising the Staff Council bylaws was completed with an affirmative vote to accept the proposed revisions during a second reading of the bylaws at the September 14, 2011 Staff Council meeting. The comprehensive revisions were driven primarily in response to the newly redesigned UI Classification system and also in an effort to more accurately reflect the current approaches to the operation of the Council. The newly redesigned Classification system of jobs categorized by functions prompted Staff Council to redesign how future elections would be conducted to produce more accurate representation of constituents. Representation on Staff Council will now come from a combination of elections of staff from job functions and University Orgs/Colleges. The bylaws now clearly and accurately define how that representation/election process will be conducted on an annual basis.
- Scheduling of "Train the Trainer" Sessions with the Office of Sustainability
The Staff Council effort to assist the Office of Sustainability with promoting sustainability initiatives across campus has taken a great step forward. The efforts of the Council ad hoc committee on Sustainability lead by Joshua Smith, and in cooperation with Liz Christiansen, UI Director of Sustainability, have resulted in the scheduling of "Train the Trainer" sessions. These sessions will see staff councilors and building coordinators receive training to then provide others with information concerning the UI's new single stream recycling program, talking points, FAQ guides, and contact resources. This training will allow them to effectively teach others throughout campus about recycling. Two "Train the Trainer" session have been scheduled for the month of October with more to come later in the fall.
- Visits to UI Colleges/Orgs to Discuss Shared Governance and Council Elections
Staff councilors will begin visiting in October with representatives from the colleges and orgs on campus to discuss specific results of the Staff Council Shared Governance survey and to promote best practices in shared governance around campus. Councilors will also be discussing the newly designed election process with the colleges and orgs to assist them with providing representation on Staff Council. Staff representation and shared governance can provide a very positive synergy when practiced effectively together.

SUSTAINABILITY "DID YOU KNOW": the University of Iowa has added sort-free recycling to its environmental programs. Now you can put all of your recyclable materials into a single container. For more information please go to the following web site:

LOCALS ENDORSE PATEL, HAYEK

Hayek has experience

I have known Iowa City Mayor Matt Hayek since he was an intern for Rep. Dave Nagle for whom I worked when Iowa City was in the 3rd Congressional District of Iowa. I have watched and been very pleased with Matt's progression from that less-than-affluent status to Iowa City mayor and city councilor.

He has taken on some very tough issues such as the 21-ordinance and banning Information tables on the Ped Mall, and he works with the University of Iowa to jointly commission a market study for downtown working-space options with the Iowa City Area Development Group. The city, university, and private sector are hoping to establish a public-private partnership to combine the music-school facilities with taxable projects such as commercial and residential condominiums.

He wisely chose Mary Kate Pilcher as his wife and partner in establishing another Hayek family, which includes three lovely young children to keep Iowa City growing and maintain strong family roots for the future. His leadership and strong support for high-quality education and safe schools is another area of Matt's interest and commitment.

Iowa City is more than lucky to have Matt Hayek at the helm of our local government. We all need to work together to keep honest, superior individuals such as Matt in office. I am proud to endorse Matt and encourage individuals who do not know him to review his history and accomplishments and support him for re-election.

Patel embodies American Dream

Last week, I had dinner with UI student and City Council candidate Raj Patel, and something he said to me has resonated since.

"Jacob," he said. "This campaign, everything — it's not that I only want to do it — but it's, as if, I feel I have to do it."

He then went on to explain how his parents immigrated to the United States for its hope of opportunity and — after working in a Snap-On tools factory upon their first entrepreneurial endeavor — couldn't afford a home. Living in the 15-bedroom motel they ran for their sole source of income, they kept their spirits up and their work ethic strong, and they progressed. And, after all the setbacks and naïveté of coming to a new country, they were able to provide all three of their children with what every parent strives for: college educations and opportunities for success.

I'll vote for Raj because, combined with a precocious wisdom of the area's politics, he represents a visceral connection to what made this country what it is.

He's not a local business owner looking to have a say in the politics affecting his financial investments; he's a resident of Iowa City who has learned enough about Iowa City politics (serving as student liaison to the City Council this past year) to know what needs to be changed. He speaks with a voice that benefits the people of Iowa City, and not his own bank account. Raj fully realizes the blessing it is to be an American, and if elected, could become a source of opportunity and optimism for the city of Iowa City.

Hayek cares, has served

I support Matt Hayek for re-election to the Iowa City City Council.

Matt believes in the seemingly old-fashioned ideas of public service and volunteerism. I first met him 20 years ago in a UI classroom when he was learning Spanish to prepare for a two-year Peace Corps assignment in Bolivia. His public engagement continued upon his return to Iowa City. He was recognized by the state bar association for his pro bono legal work for less fortunate Iowans. He served on the board of the Englert Theatre for five years, including as president. He's been active in and has led numerous city commissions and task forces. For the last four years, he has worked hard and served us well on the City Council.

Matt has the integrity, work ethic, and good judgment I look for in a civic leader. I ask you to join me in supporting his continued public service to our community.

Joan Burns
Iowa City resident

Hayek knows Iowa City

I am writing to endorse Matt Hayek for re-election to the City Council.

I view Matt as a consistent advocate for responsible city planning. He is genuinely committed to policies that respect and indeed encourage the many diverse neighborhoods and communities that make up our city. He has a deep knowledge and respect for the history of Iowa City that he combines with a worldly outlook and an enthusiasm for new ideas and perspectives.

I encourage voters to support Matt in the primary election on Oct. 11.

Patel reaches out

Raj Patel is a born leader. I have watched him grow from "Just Another Student" candidate to a well-qualified, well-spoken candidate for City Council. He has taken the time to become extremely well-informed on the issues, as well as put in the work to make sure the community is aware of his efforts.

I have heard him tell me numerous times how he has spent time in the community, knocking on doors and listening to the people and their concerns. He has reached out to our low-income neighborhoods as well as the student populous. It's this type of commitment and work ethic that we all desire in our elected officials, and Raj personifies that.

His qualities as a business person allow him to better understand the troubles Iowa City has in attracting new businesses, and his status as a current student allow him to better connect with a portion of our population that is typically underrepresented.

I encourage you to take the time to read his well thought out positions and interest in the community as posted on his website, PatelCityCouncil.com, to learn more about him and what he stands for.

He is not only a great person but also a great leader. I ask you to join me in supporting him for a City Council term and believe that he has the youth, vision, and dedication to lead Iowa City moving forward. Please vote for him Oct. 11 and again on Nov. 8. Thank you.

Luke Schneider

Hayek is a leader

We support Matt Hayek in his re-election campaign for City Council.

Matt is a demonstrated leader who has been a key contributor to many of the major milestones within the Iowa City community over the past several years, including economic development, health and safety initiatives, and productive partnerships with entities such as the University of Iowa.

Matt is deeply committed to Iowa City — to maintaining its stature as a vibrant city while also supporting the health and safety of its diverse residents. He is a collaborative partner, willing to consider problems from numerous perspectives before choosing a course of action. Matt has provided excellent leadership on the Council.

Join us in voting for Matt Hayek so that he can continue to bring his considerable experience, insight, and skill to the council's important work.

Sarah and Scott Hansen
Iowa City residents

Hayek listens

There are many reasons to vote this Tuesday for the election of city officials. We are facing serious economic and social problems at local, national, and global levels that are tangible, particularly at the local level. The election of strong public officials is critically important at this time.

We encourage you to support Matt Hayek for the City Council. He is very effective in leading our City Council as mayor, having been elected and recognized for leadership to the post by fellow members of the council. Matt has the skills combined with personal integrity to lead us through difficult times.

As a small-business owner in downtown, Matt understands the fiscal operations and incentives for economic development. As a past president of the Englert Theatre and Peace Corps volunteer, he understands the value of the arts and social development. Matt Hayek continues to work through tough decisions for balancing our city budget. He listens carefully to students and long-term residents alike by hosting public hearings in creating bar-entry and other ordinances that improve our city.

We need intelligent, caring, and strong leadership now. Please vote this Tuesday for Matt Hayek, Iowa City City Council.

Separation of Mosque and state

JOE SCHUELLER
joseph-schueller@uiowa.edu

M. Zuhdi Jasser is not a household name when it comes to foreign and religious affairs, but it ought to be.

The Navy veteran and medical doctor with a practice in Arizona took part in the University of Iowa's Lecture Committee series on Oct. 2 and tackled one of the hotly contested topics in international issues: separation of mosque and state.

Jasser founded the American Islamic Forum for Democracy in 2003 after the events of 9/11 in order to establish a Muslim-American voice favoring the ideals and principles of the U.S. Constitution, freedom, and liberty. He feels that political Islam has perverted the peaceful nature of the Islamic religion. He wants Muslims to be able to practice Islam in an environment that protects their rights or for them to have the ability reject it at their discretion.

Achieving these results is as difficult as it sounds.

Among the forces in the Muslim community, American politics, governments, and radical Islamic groups, Jasser says, "we have become anesthetized about the discussion of religion." Beyond the scope of Islam, the mere mention of religion when it comes to political matters attracts inflammatory opinions about the separation of religion and the state.

In fact, those words aren't mentioned in the Constitution but are usually the layman's interpretation of the First Amendment. Religions of many types played an influential role in the founding of America and her guarantees of life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, including Islam.

"Islam?" you might be asking. "Were there Muslims in America at that time?" There were some, but only a few were prominent in our founding. One of them was Ayyub Ibn Sulaiman, who was a citizen of Maryland who helped George Sale with the first English translation of the Koran.

Interestingly enough, the first printed copy wound up into the hands of Thomas Jefferson.

Jefferson requested a copy of the Koran in the early 1800s because he needed it for intelligence research for America's first war following the foundation of the new federal government. The Barbary pirates along the coast of Africa were radical Wahhabi Muslims who held no allegiance to any nation, and they were ransacking merchant ships. The first Marine Corps fought these precursors to our modern-day Al Qaeda and won.

With this in mind, it should be known that the principles of religion and liberty go hand in hand, although the state should not dictate what the accepted religion should be.

Jasser made it clear in his lecture that "radical Islam is a byproduct of brutal dictatorships" such as that of Bashar al-Assad and Mahmoud Ahmadinejad. These nations are among the many in the Middle East that combine Islam and the mosque with the state, resulting in an oppressive society dominated by sharia, fundamentalism, and terrorism. "Sharia is a man-made concept," and it is the center of repression of freedom and women in the Islamic world "as delegated by history."

Jasser uses this to explain the radicalization of Muslims by the various terrorist cells in the Middle East and how America's efforts through military force are only exacerbating the problem. Our "Whack-A-Mole program" of killing Islamist terrorists and dictators fuels Muslim clerics' radicalization of individuals against the philosophy of American liberty. America's only response is to then kill or capture those people when they become a significant threat.

It's a vicious cycle that won't end unless we change our tactics.

We must focus on de-radicalization in the earliest stages by promoting the ideals of Americanism, self-identity with God, and individualism in the Middle East without involving our military.

"We don't need an umma anymore," he said. "The Islamic state should have died with the Prophet, and it didn't." ■

'Occupy' remains in 4th day

Occupy Iowa City protesters say they plan to stay indefinitely in College Green Park.

By MATT STARNES
matthew.starnes@uiowa.edu

As the fourth day begins in the "Occupy Iowa City" protest, an infrastructure has begun to take shape in the local movement.

And though the group doesn't have a specific demands for change in Iowa City, demonstrators said it's the message their presence sends that is important.

"Our financial system is not sustainable; we're starting to see the results of that, the way it's starting to fall apart around us," said University of Iowa senior Nathan Rogers, a participant in the Oct. 7 protest.

Protesters converged on College Green Park on Oct.

Occupy Iowa City

A preliminary statement of intent:

7 in solidarity with the Occupy Wall Street protesters in New York.

"I think a lot of people feel like we don't have any direct means of recourse against that," he said. "This whole movement is about these like-minded people coming together and voicing the opinion that we don't want to perpetuate a system the way it's been running."

The Occupy Iowa City protest began at 6 p.m., with a "general assembly" — a collective meeting of the group — at 7 p.m., in which organizers proposed an agenda and facilitated a vote on a preliminary statement of intent.

The occupation is still underway, and organizers say they will be staying indefinitely. So far, organizers said, they have seen a lot of community support for their efforts. Protesters have received donations of food and supplies from over 20 individuals, most of whom choose to remain anonymous.

The assembly also established committees in charge of specific aspects of the occupation, including security, medical, community outreach, and sleeping committees.

Despite previous questions about whether they would be able to assemble at the park without a permit, Iowa City officials said last week the group was permitted.

Protesters said as the event moved into the night, police came to ensure the safety of the group.

"We've been notified by the police that they will be here but only to protect us from possible drunk students walking by," said Michael Sears, an organizer.

UI alumna Carolyn Scherf told The Daily

Iowan about the outreach committee.

"We're talking about forming connections with other organizations in town, talking about how we're going to target populations that are underrepresented right now."

During another assembly, the group decided it would accept donations, but not from politically motivated groups, wishing to remain independent.

"We want support, not sponsors," said Alison Clark, a Kirkwood student and member of the occupiers' food committee.

Food donations have been so abundant that the protesters have extended an open offer to those in need — daily dinners at 6 p.m. are open to anyone who is hungry.

And some locals are impressed with the demonstration.

"The value of what is happening here is that people are educating themselves, and educating other people," said Iowa City resident Tom Hickey. "They're analyzing the situation and seeing things that can be improved."

To the 72-year old Vietnam veteran, there is a familiarity to the occupation.

"I was here 40 years ago, this is the same thing," Hickey said. "I think that this whole thing is about a return to democracy, 21st-century style."

ca's reputation abroad.

"Stop strangling the American domestic-energy industry with regulations, and we again can become a country that not only the rest of the world respects — because we [will] become a powerful economic country again," he said.

Still, Ingram noted there are merits to restrictions on business.

"In general, there are times when you want regulations in the economy when the market isn't going to do what's needed," she said. "Businesses even want regulations to make sure no one commits fraud. It creates a broad playing field."

Deregulation has been a hot topic in the wake of the 2008 financial crisis. Free-market proponents — mostly aligned with the Republicans — have pushed for less regulation, including in the financial sector.

The Heritage Foundation, for instance, charges that the Obama administration's over-regulation is a job-killer. Heritage's Mike Brownfield wrote last month, "During President Obama's first 26 months in office, his administration imposed 75 new major regulations, with reported costs to the private sector exceeding $40 billion."

Left-leaning economists, though, say deregulation would increase instability in the economy. Liberal blog Think Progress, for instance, points out that financial institutions are bringing in big profits in spite of the Dodd-Frank financial regulations approved by Congress last year.

Perry's message was well-received by those in attendance last week in Tiffin.

"You think about it — the most friendly states for business — they are states that have fewer taxes, less regulation," said University of Iowa freshman Sahan Thenuwara. "And mostly, Republican governor-run states."

Perry said more jobs would be created by lowering corporate and income taxes, and concluded his speech with a vow he's made to several audiences during his campaign.

"I promise you one other thing," he said. "I'll get up every day to make government as inconsequential in your life as I can make it."

Unions fight for jobs

COGS members have fought for improved benefits for UI graduate students.

By AUDREY ROEN
audrey-roen@uiowa.edu

Members of the Campaign to Organize Graduate Students and local union members marched last week in support of better graduate student compensation.

COGS leaders say fair job opportunities and guaranteed benefits remain an important cause and a continued fight for students.

"Whether you're a graduate employee who can join COGS, a nurse who can join the Service Employees International Union, an administrative assistant who can join AFSCME, or a public-school teacher that can join the Iowa State Education Association, the solidarity of Iowa's public employees to protect our rights has never been more necessary," said Kari Thompson, the COGS president, in a recent DI guest opinion.

Thompson and roughly 50 others from COGS and local union workers gathered wielding signs bearing the slogan "This is What Democracy Looks Like" and chanting on the Pedestrian Mall Oct. 7.

Local union members also participated in the march, encouraging Iowa legislators to pass job-creation programs.

"What we do is bargain collectively for all workers to have a better standard of living," said Jana Smith Carr, the executive coordinator of the Communications Workers of America. "We are here to try to show the community that we

Daren Seip and other protesters and union members stop near the railroad tracks by the Adler Journalism Building on Oct. 7. (The Daily Iowan/Christy Aumer) absolutely have to have jobs."

And with the actions of numerous unions, students, and other groups organizing across the country, the stakes are high, said Rep. Mary Mascher, D-Iowa City,

"The stakes are all or nothing now," she said. "They have to keep moving toward a collective goal and realize that if changes aren't made, they will lose the battle and lose their rights."

The group was also prompted by similar protests taking place that day, including the local "Occupy Iowa" movement. Though COGS didn't "formally endorse" the movement, Thompson said, the two organizations have similar principles — including more accessible health care and equal job opportunities.

"We all have one vote, and we are all one," Thompson said.

Last year, COGS pressed to improve contractual agreements for University of Iowa graduate students that included increased salaries for teaching and research assistants and 100 percent coverage for tuition.

Audrey Altman, a UI grad student and COGS member, said it was her first time participating in a group demonstration.

"I wanted to help send out a public message [and] encourage people to march," Altman said.

Smith Carr said the Communications Workers is a national union with approximately 700,000 members across the country in all different industries.

"What we know is that all of us cannot work against each other, we have to all work together," Smith Carr said. "It's going to take 99 percent of us to effect any change in the system."

PENN STATE 13, IOWA 3

Penn St. D smothers Iowa

Iowa tight end Brad Herman walks off the field in frustration after a pass intended for him was intercepted in the Hawkeyes' 13-3 loss to Penn State in Beaver Stadium on Oct. 8. The pick, with 3:42 left in the game, effectively ended Iowa's chances for a comeback. (The Daily Iowan/Rob Johnson)

Iowa's poor offensive execution against one of the nation's best defenses spells doom for the Hawkeyes in Happy Valley.

By JORDAN GARRETSON

jordan-garretson@uiowa.edu

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — A visibly frustrated Marvin McNutt did his best to maintain his usual stoicism in the aftermath of defeat.

The senior receiver offered a grounded perspective after Iowa's 13-3 loss at Penn State (5-1, 2-0 Big Ten) on Oct. 8.

"We know we have a lot of things to work on and we have a lot of games left in the season," McNutt said. "You try to keep it positive even though you have a negative taste in your mouth."

Iowa (3-2, 0-1) has seven games left to play, but this bad taste might last right until it kicks off its next one against Northwestern at 6 p.m. Saturday.

Mike Meyer's 23-yard field goal in the second quarter marked Iowa's only score. The anemic 3-point output was the school's lowest in a Big Ten game since a 31-0 loss to Illinois on Oct. 14, 2000. That was Kirk Ferentz's second season as Iowa head coach, and the Hawkeyes finished 3-9.

Iowa entered Beaver Stadium boasting the Big Ten's best passing offense, at 281.2 yards per game. It left with 253 yards of total offense.

"I think it's frustrating any time you only score a field goal. We know we have to do more than that," said quarterback James Vandenberg, who finished 17-of 34 for 169 yards. His two interceptions were twice as many as he had thrown all season.

COMMENTARY

Mystery of the Hawks continues

Iowa isn't as bad as it looked against Penn State. But the Hawkeyes aren't as good as they looked in the five quarters prior to the loss, either.

jordan-garretson@uiowa.edu

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. — The 2011 Iowa football team is still pretty damn difficult to evaluate after five games.

Iowa's offense showed an explosiveness for one quarter against Pittsburgh and for four quarters against Louisiana-Monroe that hypnotized many.

For just a while, many thought they had these guys figured out. The Hawkeyes were a squad with an uncharacteristically high-powered passing attack. A squad that didn't need to rely on lockdown performances from an inexperienced defense, but simply on timely stops when necessary.

Then Oct. 8 came, and so did a 13-3 loss at Penn State.

Quarterback James Vandenberg never found a solid rhythm. His receivers — the team's most consistent group this season — couldn't catch a pass when he needed it most. And too many times, the offensive line's pass protection withered against unrelenting Penn State defensive pressure.

So just how good — or bad — are these Hawkeyes?

No. 17 Iowa defeated Ohio, 2-1, on Sunday in Athens, Ohio.

The win pushed the Hawkeyes to 10-3 overall. The Bobcats fell to 11-3, ending their five-game win streak.

Ohio's Marissa Higgins put the Bobcats on the board first with a goal in the 27th minute, but the Hawkeyes were quick to strike back. Sophomore Kim Scrapper scored unassisted just a minute later — her team-leading 16th goal of the season.

in the 53rd minute off of a corner pass from junior Geena Lesiak. The Hawkeye defense remained stout for the remaining minutes and put the Bobcats away.

Iowa also notched a 3-0 road win over No. 12 Ohio State on Oct. 8, which got them back to even in Big Ten play at 2-2. The Iowa victory ended the Buckeyes' six-match win streak.

"We were opportunistic," head coach Tracey Griesbaum said in a release. "Our [three] penalty corners were very effective ... it was a great team win."

The Black and Gold will come back home to host Indiana for their final home game of the season on Saturday.

Brewers rally in NLCS

MILWAUKEE — Needing a rally in the NL Championship Series opener, Milwaukee turned to its power duo of Ryan Braun and Prince Fielder, then got a clutch hit from Yunesky Betancourt to beat the St. Louis Cardinals, 9-6.

Braun launched a two-run, 463-foot homer in the first inning and added a two-run double during a six-run burst in the fifth. Fielder hit a two-run homer, and the typically light-hitting Betancourt added a two-run homer to cap the big comeback.

The atmosphere was tense even before the first pitch, as La Russa was showered with boos during pregame introductions. He calmly tipped his cap to the crowd.

Starter Zack Greinke struggled, but reliever Takashi Saito got Cardinal star Albert Pujols to ground into a key double play in the seventh. Francisco Rodriguez pitched a hitless eighth, and closer John Axford threw a hitless ninth for a save.

Game 2 will be at Miller Park tonight. Shaun Marcum will start for the Brewers against Edwin Jackson.

David Freese hit a three-run homer off Greinke in the fourth, and the Cardinals led 5-2 in the fifth.

But Milwaukee made it tough on Cardinal starter Jaime Garcia, who left after giving up Fielder's homer. Garcia, who hit Fielder with a pitch earlier in the game, gave up 6 runs and six hits in four-plus innings with three walks. He took the loss.

Greinke earned the win despite his uneven outing, giving up 6 runs and eight hits in six-plus innings. He left the game to a standing ovation after giving up a leadoff single to Rafael Furcal in the seventh.

The Cardinals took a three-run lead into the fifth before Garcia allowed a leadoff single to Corey Hart and a double to Jerry Hairston Jr. Braun hit a two-run, ground-rule double to right and with the crowd still saluting him, Fielder hit the first pitch from Garcia deep to right for a two-run homer, giving the Brewers the lead.

Fielder then showed off his repertoire of celebrations, giving the team's "Beast Mode" gesture upon his arrival at home plate and exchanging mock knockout blows with Braun as he trotted back to the dugout.

That was it for Garcia, who left with no outs in the fifth.

Soccer falls short

The Oct. 8 Iowa soccer game was a tale of two different halves for the Hawkeyes, who lost to Minnesota, 2-1.

Iowa (10-2-2, 2-2-2 Big Ten) overmatched Minnesota (5-7-2, 2-2-2) in the first half, using precise passing and a stout defensive effort to hold the Gophers scoreless through the first 45 minutes of play.

The Hawkeyes captured a 1-0 lead going into halftime with the help of a penalty shot in the 35th minute. Senior Morgan Showalter dribbled from midfield into the Minnesota box before she was tripped up for the foul.

"I saw Leah [DeMoss] making a run — she made room for people, and Cloé [Lacasse] ran across, ready for a pass," Showalter said. "If I could've gotten to the endline and crossed it back, it would've worked — but [the defender] got me a little sooner than that."

Showalter placed the ball high in the center of the net for the goal.

That was the last time Iowa rejoiced on the soccer field — the second half was an entirely different story.

"We just didn't come out exactly like we wanted to," Showalter said. "We came out with words, saying we wanted to [compete with Minnesota], and it just didn't come out. We talked and didn't do."

Iowa's defense continued to play well against the Gopher's offensive attack, contesting each of Minnesota's 14 shots in the game. But lack of communication on the field led to miscues and mistakes for the Hawkeyes early in the second half.

"We have to get better at playing with the lead,"

BLACK & GOLD INTRASQUAD MEET

Men swimmers happy with times

This past weekend marked the beginning of the men's swimming and diving season, when the swimmers competed in the team's annual Black and Gold intrasquad meet. The Gold side earned bragging rights, defeating the Black squad, 108-91, in the Campus Wellness & Recreation Center.

The meet — which serves as a warmup to the regular season — has plenty of competitive spirit among the swimmers — the teams are selected by captains Ryan Phelan, Paul Gordon, and Kyle Noser in schoolyard fashion. Phelan combined with Gordon to choose the Gold team, and Noser picked the Black.

The meet consisted of 11 events, with both the men and women competing in alternate heats. Even though the meet only serves as a preseason exhibition, head swimming and diving coach Marc Long said he believes the performance his swimmers gave is a solid indication on how the team will fare throughout the season.

"It's a good reflection of how our team is coming together," the eight-year head coach said. "It's [still] early — I mean, the divers aren't even diving yet. But it's definitely an indication of our enthusiasm and how the team is coming together. It's a long road, and this is a great start."

Phelan, one of four Hawkeye All-Americans, competed well for the Gold squad. He set a pool record in the 50 freestyle — an event he was runner-up in the Big Ten in last year — with a time of 20.20.

Sophomore Manuel Belzer was the star for the Black squad; the native of Germany led his team to victory in the 500 and 1,000 freestyle with times of 4:32.49 and 9:28.35, respectively.

Phelan said he was excited that he and other teammates set pool records at the event but noted that there is a larger task at hand.

"Times don't mean a lot now," the senior said. "It's just the fact that we are racing ... it's great that progress was made today. A woman on our team [Becky Stoughton] broke three records today, which is pretty nice to see this early on, but there are bigger goals towards the end of the year that we are really looking at."

Iowa will return to action on Oct. 20, when it travels to Madison to take on the Badgers. Senior All-American Duncan Partridge said he was happy with the team's overall results at the intrasquad meet, and that he thinks the attitude his team showed bodes well for the rest of the season.

"I feel really good," the Lake Forest, Ill., native said. "I'm really happy with everybody's times. We set a lot of records today. We did a lot of fast racing; it was really fun and enjoyable. I feel really good going to Wisconsin — if we can carry that attitude throughout the season, it will be a big help."

Frosh shines in Black & Gold

Freshman Becky Stoughton sets three pool records in her college debut.

By TORK MASON
tork-mason@uiowa.edu

It was a record-setting weekend for the women's swim team.

Three pool records were set by the Iowa women's swimming and diving team, all by Black team freshman Becky Stoughton. Her efforts weren't enough for her team, though, as the Gold Team took the meet by a 108-91 score.

The Peoria, Ill., native set records in the 1,000, 500, and 200 freestyle and did so in dominating fashion.

In the 1,000 freestyle, she finished nearly a full lap ahead of fellow freshman Hillary Weigland. Her time of 9:59.02 was the fourth-best in school history. She followed that performance in the next race by posting Iowa's ninth-best time ever in the 200 freestyle. Her time of 4:53.42 in the 500 freestyle was also good for fourth-best in school history.

"It's great. It's outstanding," head coach Marc Long said. "It's definitely encouraging and exciting for the future."

Senior captain Daniela Cubelic echoed that.

"Becky's a trouper. She works hard for everything she does," Cubelic said. "Doubling the 1,000 and 200 free back-to-back and setting pool records in both is just incredible."

Stoughton also set the 200 record from lane two, the farthest outside lane in the heat. In swimming, the center lanes are where the faster water is, and the "slow track" is on the outside.

The performance was an unexpected confidence-booster, Stoughton said, but she still has improvements to make with her breathing and turns.

While Stoughton stole the spotlight, she wasn't the only one to provide excitement for those in attendance.

In the 200 medley relay, Black's Danielle Klunk had a near-tie in the water at the start of the freestyle leg and won the race by just 0.32 seconds.

Long said he was pleased with his team's overall performance.

"There was a lot of enthusiasm — youthful enthusiasm — and good upperclassmen leadership," he said. "It's a fun start. Especially having one of the freshmen breaking three pool records right off the bat and swim some of the top performances in Iowa history is encouraging."

Long said the team still must work on its technique while it prepares for the championship season in February and March, but Cubelic said the team's performance was "by far" the best in a Black and Gold meet since she's been on campus.

"It was absolutely amazing. There were some incredible times — people were going faster than they went at this point in the season last year, by far," she said. "I think, collectively, we did outstanding. We're really looking forward to our first meet against Wisconsin."

The answer lies between the hyperbole.

Iowa's offense isn't nearly as inept as the Nittany Lions' defense (No. 4 nationally, allowing an average of 250.8 yards game) often made it look on Oct. 8. But don't expect to see the dynamism that gleamed in Iowa's 21-point comeback against Pittsburgh, or in its 35-17 drubbing of Monroe, on a weekly basis.

"In our program, none of us have claimed that we've done anything significant," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said following Saturday's loss at Beaver Stadium. "We haven't climbed any mountains yet."

The Hawkeye defense — though inexperienced — isn't exactly built from papier-mâché, though it looked that way in a 44-41 loss at Iowa State last month. For a group that lost four players to the NFL draft along with other 2010 starters, it has progressed steadily from the embarrassing performance in which it surrendered 473 yards to the Cyclones.

Still, Iowa won't end the season with a defense ranked anywhere near the nation's top-25 units, like it has in each of the past three seasons.

If that much wasn't already clear before the Hawkeyes visited Happy Valley, it was after Penn State running backs Silas Redd and Curtis Dukes both registered new single-game career-bests in rushing yards (142 and 60, respectively).

"[Redd is] a good back, and I'm trying to remember the last time Penn State didn't have good backs. Nothing different there," Ferentz said. "We have some things we have to get better at, clearly. Just fundamental things, defensive tackling is a big thing."

Fortunately for the Hawkeyes, they're not the only Big Ten team with issues to address. The crucial part will be which teams can correct their respective issues first.

"The sky isn't falling. There are seven games left," linebacker Tyler Nielsen said. "There's not a team on our schedule that we can't compete with and can't beat. There's a lot of football left. If we clean things up, we'll be all right."

"It's just little things that we have to clean up," he said. "Missed throws, missed assignments, dropped passes, they all add up. We were just too inconsistent today, starting with my play."

In the team's first two drives, yards looked as though they would be much easier to come by. Iowa gained 119 yards on 23 plays, chewing up 10:51 of clock.

The Hawkeyes ran 41 more plays during the game, tallying only 134 yards. They crossed into Penn State territory only once in the second half.

While Vandenberg and Company noted their poor execution, they also made sure to dole out plenty of praise for the Nittany Lions' defensive showing. McNutt said they simply "brought the intensity and made plays when they needed to."

Penn State's defense is allowing 250.8 yards a game, the fourth-best mark in the Football Bowl Subdivision.

"I think it was a lot more of what they were doing," Vandenberg said. "... They did a good job of mixing up coverages and taking some stuff away from us that maybe we were used to getting. Their whole defensive scheme was good, and they tackled well all day. That makes it hard."

The challenge of facing a seemingly impenetrable Nittany Lions defense — a staple of the 45-plus seasons Joe Paterno has served as head coach — was nothing new to Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz.

Ferentz was 11 years old during Paterno's first season as Penn State head coach in 1966.

"They've been playing good defense since at least the late-60s," Ferentz said. "... They're aggressive, they're a tough group, and they really make you earn it. That's exactly what we experienced today, and we weren't good enough to finish some drives."

head coach Ron Rainey said. "I don't think we sat back, but in the second half, we allowed them to attack us. Then we made a couple of crucial errors that led to chances for them."

"We got the one-goal lead, and instead of continuing to attack and playing with confidence, I feel like we got concerned about defending it."

One mistake Rainey pointed out proved extremely costly in the 50th minute of the game. Poor passing by the Iowa defense resulted in a turnover, when Minnesota freshman Taylor Uhl — the Gopher's leading scorer this season — stole the ball and took it right down the field to tie the game.

Another error gave the Gophers the lead in the 68th minute. Minnesota freshman Becca Roberts stole another poorly passed ball from the Hawkeye defense, and some fancy footwork aided her journey down the field to net the go-ahead goal.

Iowa had a chance to punch in the game-tying goal in the 78th minute, when Minnesota goalie Cat Parkhill came out of the goal to attack the ball. Lacasse chipped the ball over Parkhill and watched the ball roll toward the net, but Gopher junior Marissa Price chased it down and kicked it away from danger just before the ball crossed the goal line.

"We need to generate more chances if we want to score that second goal," Rainey said.

Iowa goalkeeper Emily Moran was saddled with only her second loss of the season, but she recorded five saves to push her season total to 59.

She admitted the Oct. 8 performance wasn't the team's best.

"We just have to try to defend the goal a little more," she said. "We just have to keep working as a team and pushing through."

Despite the mistakes, Moran remained optimistic the team will learn from the loss and continue to move forward.

"We'll work on [passing] in practice," she said. "We can make those passes, and we know that. We're going to be fine."

QUOTED

'Crisis? Like a tsunami or a hurricane or a tornado? Nobody got killed out there, right? I think we're safe.'
 - Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz when asked if the Hawkeyes have an identity crisis.

'I don't know. We just couldn't get anything done. We obviously have stuff to work on.'
 - Iowa kicker Mike Meyer on the Hawkeyes' lack of offense.

'We tried to play Iowa like every other game. We tried not to make it a personal match. But you know what - I think everyone in the back of his mind was thinking, "We've got to beat Iowa for the past couple of years. They really rained on our seasons." It was a big game, not only for this season but for what they've done the past seasons to us.'
 - Penn State linebacker Glenn Carson.

Ya can't win

The Hawkeyes entered Happy Valley on a three-game winning streak against Penn State, and it had won eight of the last nine meetings. But a physical Nittany Lion pass defense, combined with a mediocre showing by the normally high-powered Iowa offense, slammed the brakes on the streak. Penn State only scored one touchdown, but that was more than enough to win, 13-3.

Iowa's only points came on a second-quarter field goal from 23 yards out. The Hawkeyes accumulated 119 yards in their first two possessions but managed only 134 the rest of the game. James Vandenberg was picked off twice and sacked five times. Iowa's defense couldn't stop Silas Redd and the rest of the Penn State running game from wracking up 231 yards on the ground. The Black and Gold's most productive player was punter Eric Guthrie.

Following the game, Penn State linebacker Glenn Carson — who had made headlines by calling Iowa a “wrestling school” — said the win provided a sense of retribution for Iowa's past domination of the series.

“Everyone in the back of his mind was thinking, ‘We've got to beat Iowa for the past couple of years. They really rained on our seasons,’ ” he said. “It was a big game, not only for this season but for what they've done the past seasons to us.”

Penn State running back Silas Redd breaks through the Iowa defense in Beaver Stadium on Oct. 8. Redd rushed for 142 yards and a touchdown.

Iowa wide receiver Kevonte Martin-Manley walks off the field after Penn State beat Iowa, 13-3, on Oct. 8 in Beaver Stadium.

BY THE NUMBERS

PRIME PLAYS

Penn State shredded Iowa's defense on a 90-yard march down the field in the third quarter and faced a third-and-five at the Hawkeye 6-yard line. Quarterback Matt McGloin dropped back to the 15 and lofted the ball toward 6-5 receiver Derek Moyer on the left side of the end zone, but 6-1 cornerback Micah Hyde boxed out the big wideout and came down with the ball. At the time, it seemed as if Hyde's third interception of the season would turn the tide in Iowa's favor.

Iowa crossed midfield following Hyde's pick and resulting touchback but faced third-and-long after a James Vandenberg incompletion. The Hawkeye quarterback took the snap out of the shotgun, but offensive linemen Matt Tobin and Riley Reiff failed to block blitzing linebacker Gerald Hodges. The junior knocked Vandenberg down from behind and the ball popped loose; the Nittany Lions recovered easily and used the short field to score the only touchdown of the game.

IOWA GAME BALL
MICAH HYDE

Iowa's cornerback made a bad mistake on special teams — he appeared to lose a punt in the Sun, and the ball bounced off his hands — but made up for it on defense with eight tackles, a pair of pass break-ups, and an interception in the end zone that snuffed out a 90-yard Penn State drive that appeared to give the Hawkeyes some momentum at the end of the third quarter.

PENN STATE GAME BALL MATT MCGLOIN

Coach Joe Paterno has toyed with the idea of using two quarterbacks all season long, but McGloin emerged as the clear favorite to earn the permanent spot with a 12-for-19 performance. While the rushing game carried the Nittany Lion attack, McGloin threw for the only touchdown of the game – and all three of fellow quarterback Rob Bolden's completions came after the ball was tipped in some fashion.

THUMBS UP

Eric Guthrie. The Hawkeye punter was called upon four times and averaged 39.5 yards per punt. Two of his boots went for 49 yards, and two of them landed inside the 20-yard line. None of them went for touchbacks.

THUMBS DOWN

The offense. James Vandenberg threw two interceptions, fumbled once, and was sacked five times – three of them coming in Iowa's final drive of the game – to erase what would otherwise have been a nice day on the ground. Marcus Coker ran 18 times for 74 yards, about half as many as Penn State counterpart Silas Redd. Marvin McNutt was targeted seven times but only caught four passes.

LOOK AHEAD

Iowa will try to rectify its offensive issues by the time it takes the field against Northwestern on Saturday. The Wildcats have defeated the Hawkeyes in three-straight years, although they are 0-2 in Big Ten play this season. The Northwestern defense picked off Michigan quarterback Denard Robinson three times in the first half on Oct. 8 but didn't show up after halftime and lost to the Wolverines, 42-24. The game was the second in a row that the Wildcats have coughed up large leads in the second half despite the best efforts of quarterback Dan Persa (42-for-58, 454 yards, four touchdowns in two conference starts this year).

The Iowa volleyball team is pleased with its first Big Ten win and low number of hitting errors but disappointed in the number of service errors over the weekend.

BY MOLLY IRENE OLMSTEAD
molly-olmstead@uiowa.edu

The Iowa volleyball team tallied only 29 attack errors in eight sets this weekend but committed 16 mistakes on services.

The low number of hitting errors boosted the Hawkeyes (11-8, 1-5 Big Ten) to their first Big Ten win, defeating Indiana on Oct. 7, 3-2 (25-14, 20-25, 25-21, 16-25, 15-13). But service errors knocked Iowa down the next day, and the team lost, 3-0, to No. 11 Purdue on Oct. 8 (19-25, 13-25, 21-25).

"Going into the match [against Indiana], I thought the team with the most kills at the end would win," head coach Sharon Dingman said. "But I was wrong. I didn't anticipate us only having 16 errors. The difference was hitting percentage, for sure."

Iowa hit .231 against Indiana and .229 against Purdue, the team's two highest percentages in its Big Ten season. No. 6 Nebraska is the only other team to hit over .200 against the Boilermakers.

"That's why we had a chance in the first and third set — we were low-error," assistant coach Jason Allen said. "We were making them play a lot of volleyball and got them on their heels a lot. I don't think they expected that; they were thinking we'd be a lot more high-error."

Sophomore outside hitter Rachel Bedell contributed heavily to Iowa's high percentage against Purdue. Bedell only played in the third set, but she dominated at the net with nine kills and no errors. She finished with a .562 attack percentage.

"She became a go-to player right when she came off the bench," setter Nikki Dailey said. "Lately, Rachel's been coming off the bench really strong, so I knew from the start she was prepared. Her first swing, she had high hands and scored, so I just knew I was going to her again and again until they stopped her."

Bedell said the team has practiced being consistent at the net and lowering the number of hitting errors in each game.

"Our main point is if you just make a lot fewer errors, it's harder for the team to come back," Bedell said. "We've been focusing on not giving away points to the other team. It's something we've been working on all season, so it was great to see it work on the court."

Although pleased with the few hitting errors and high-attack percentage, Dingman said she was disappointed with the number of service errors over the weekend.

Iowa lost its final set to Purdue by 4 points but made five errors while serving.

"In a set you lose by 4 and you error five times behind the service line on balls that you're really not going after that hard, that's pretty disappointing," said Allen, who works with the team on serving. "To be that close, we just couldn't build anything. We couldn't get any momentum because we couldn't keep the ball in play."

Dingman and Allen said they were disappointed because the service errors made weren't the result of aggressive serving but "egregious" errors — hitting into the net or far out of bounds.

"Clearly, our inability to stop Purdue — not even stop, we couldn't even slow Purdue's offense down — that was a real problem," Dingman said. "Part of that goes back to serving. We didn't serve aggressively, and we had a lot of service errors ... We just got eaten up there."

Golfers seek consistency

The Lady Northern Intercollegiate will provide a sneak peek into Big Ten action for the women's golfers.

By TORK MASON
tork-mason@uiowa.edu

The Iowa women's golf team will start the home stretch of its fall schedule today at the Lady Northern Intercollegiate tournament in French Lick, Ind.

The tournament will host seven other Big Ten teams and Iowa State.

Head coach Megan Menzel said she feels the tournament will provide a good test for the team and hopes the Hawkeyes will continue to build on the success they've had this season.

"I feel very good about where we are — I think we definitely haven't played our best golf yet," she said. "We've had some good rounds and individual performances at times, but I don't feel like we've put it together as a team. I'm hoping we get stronger in that area, starting this week."

Menzel

Menzel said the team needs to focus on its short game in order to make those improvements occur. She said it's an area that will make a team more consistent, even when the players are not hitting the ball well.

Junior Gigi DiGrazia and freshman Shelby Phillips have demonstrated the idea. Phillips ranks seventh nationally in average putts per round; DiGrazia is ranked 23rd in putting average, 26th in up-and-downs, and 36th in total short game.

The Hawkeyes have third- and 12th-place finishes to their name at the midway point of the season, and DiGrazia said she and her teammates feel they have something to prove to their conference foes this week.

"We definitely want to compete in the Big Ten, and this is the preview for what we'll see in the spring," DiGrazia said. "So we definitely want to go out and show the rest of the Big Ten what Iowa is all about. It's a new team and a new year."

Junior Kristi Cardwell said she felt it's been an "awesome" season so far, although it could have been better. Senior Chelsea Harris agreed, noting that he team left several strokes on the course at the Dick McGuire Invitational last month in Albuquerque, N.M.

Harris said she wants the team to commit to every shot this week and that Hawkeyes should finish well if they play to their potential.

DiGrazia said she expects that to happen soon.

"I know our best golf is yet to come, which is exciting because we've put up some good numbers," she said. "We shot a round under 300 — but that's not even our best yet."

CONNECTING YOU TO CUSTOMERS THAT MATTER

More than 50% of Iowans buy based on newspaper ads

Looking for customers who are ready to do more than window shop? In a recent survey, more than 50% of Iowans said they've made a purchase in the last two weeks based on an ad they saw in their local newspaper.

Newspapers attract a more affluent and more educated audience than any other media. And those readers buy local.

That's why your next customer is spending more time with their newspaper than any other news source. They count on the in-depth coverage, local content and access to shopping information.

Get access to the people you need when sales matter. They're reading their local newspaper.

We hold these truths to be self-evident (and a little nerdy):

- Somebody really needs to explain the concept of infinity to Buzz Lightyear.
  - The Justice League of America will always be able to edge out the Avengers in heavy traffic because the League has the Green Arrow.
  - “Hoboken” sounds not so much like a city as it does a martial art honed to perfection by generations of the destitute.
  - I like Ultimate Frisbee because there aren't nearly as many continuity issues as there are in the original Frisbee.
  - Paramount missed a golden opportunity by not marketing its Chris Pine Star Trek reboot as Star Trek: Control+Z.
  - Far too many people think ligers are cooler than tigons, and it's simply not true.
  - Ever wonder if Clark Kent is circumcised? I'm guessing he's not.
  - How does Obi Wan know the Sand People are easily startled? I like to imagine him stalking the desert wastes of Tatooine with a balloon, a sewing needle, and a rakish grin.
  - You know who would win in a fight between Alien and Wolverine? It doesn't matter. Because, consider this: despite his adamantium skeleton (just go with me here, fanboys), Wolverine's floating ribs could allow for a chest-burster to grow inside and exit his body through his lower ribcage; but Wolverine's healing factor means that, probably, seriously, Wolverine could actually LIVE THROUGH A CHESTBURSTER, then FIGHT THAT ALIEN a little while later. And that's so cool it doesn't even matter who would win. How has this crossover never happened!?
- Andrew R. Juhl thanks Brian Tanner and his friend Chris for contributing jokes to today's Ledge.

Think you're pretty funny? Prove it. The Daily Iowan is looking for Ledge writers. You can submit a Ledge at daily-iowan@uiowa.edu. If we think it's good, we'll run it - and maybe contact you for more.

horoscopes Monday Oct. 10

- by Eugenia Last
- ARIES March 21-April 19 Impulsive action will not bring good results. You must avoid arguments. A relationship may be on the line if you cannot bring yourself to compromise or to see both sides of a situation you face. Now is not the time to make a drastic life change.
- TAURUS April 20-May 20 Put greater emphasis on your future. Avoid a falling out with a colleague, employer, or authority figure. A snap decision regarding your career will not be beneficial. You must think matters through. Ask questions, and listen to advice.
- GEMINI May 21-June 21 Take part in an event, activity, or fundraiser that will help you stand out. Recognition for your generosity will lead to something worth your time and effort. Someone you impress will make you an offer. Take a leap of faith.
- CANCER June 21-July 22 Pick up skills and information or anything that will help you advance. Put some effort into a relationship that means something to you. Avoid being critical when encouragement is what's required. Don't mislead; be upfront about your intentions.
- LEO July 23-Aug. 22 Keep life simple; don't brag or take on too much. Learning will help refresh your memory and call to mind what you already know. Get domestic chores out of the way or consider making a move. You'll come up with a creative way to make extra cash.
- VIRGO Aug. 23-Sept. 22 Protect what you have. Giving out too much information or being to readily available to help demanding people will cut into valuable time you need to pursue your own projects. Avoid impulse purchases or hasty decisions that can lead to worry.
- LIBRA Sept. 23-Oct. 22 Communicate. Find out where you stand and what possibilities lay ahead. Don't procrastinate because you sense some difficulty may occur. Strive to overcome anything or anyone that tries to slow your progress. Original ideas will help you bypass setbacks.
- SCORPIO Oct. 23-Nov. 21 Follow your intuition. Use your talents, and you will spark interest from someone you've worked with in the past. Hone your skills rather than fight the impossible. Follow your heart and your dreams.
- SAGITTARIUS Nov. 22-Dec. 21 Home and self improvements should be at the top of your list. Clear up odd jobs. A change at home will help you reflect on what's happened in the past and how you should move forward in the future.
- CAPRICORN Dec. 22-Jan. 19 Stick to what you know. Assumptions will get to trouble. A problem with communication will lead to a sudden turn of events that can alter your day. Don't give an answer or make a promise without having all the pertinent facts.
- AQUARIUS Jan. 20-Feb. 18 Make changes that will benefit you emotionally, financially, and physically. Take the initiative, and ask for whatever you need to follow through with your plans. A partnership will lead to greater opportunities and benefits.
- PISCES Feb. 19-March 20 Follow a creative dream. Put together proposals, and present what you have to offer to someone in an influential position. Someone you least expect from your past will step up and offer help if you share your ideas. A deal can be made.
