VETERANS’ DAY 2011

THE THINGS THEY STILL CARRY

Fifteen fighters sat hunched over their desks. The room was silent; the only sound was the muddled scratch of pen on paper.

These veterans of wars ranging from Vietnam to the conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan—all came together on a brisk October night for one purpose: to write about their experiences.

For many, this was the first time they had written or even thought about writing. Others are veterans in more than one sense, with years of experience with prose. “Writing can offer you a liminal space to express what happened,” said Emma Rainey, the lead instructor of the three-day workshop, “Writing My Way Back Home.”

“The difference between holding it in and speaking is huge. Writing is that little in-between space where you can get out and express yourself.”

According to the Philadelphia Inquirer, Santorum, a 1980 Penn State graduate, called Sandusky’s work with the Second Mile “Its philosophy is simple: it is easier to develop a child than to rehabilitate an adult.”

The Sept. 26, 2002, citation read. The award program is sponsored annually by the Congressional Coalition on Adoption Institute.

Since the scandal, the Penn State Board of Trustees has fired university President Graham Spanier and iconic head football coach Joe Paterno.

“Look, I pray and hope that Jerry Sandusky is not a pedophile,” Santorum told ABC News on Tuesday that Paterno deserved the benefit of doubt because he has “served in such distinction for all those years.”

While the number of students studying abroad in India is booming, the number of University of Iowa students learning the subcontinent’s major language is stagnant.

Philipp Lutgendorf, a UI professor of Hindi, said the travel trend hasn’t “translated into more students enrolling in Hindi courses.”

“Twenty-five UI students studied abroad in India in the 2006-07 school year. This number more than quadrupled to 115 students last school year,” Lutgendorf said.

The University of Illinois’ Hindi program, said, “The purpose of the study-abroad program is not just to learn language and culture of India, but there are a lot of other aspects of modern India that the students experience.”

Rajagopal also said the program has actually inspired a few students to study the Hindi language in India.

However, Lutgendorf said, the enrollment in the three main Hindi language classes has actually steadily low.

This fall, only about a dozen UI students enrolled in first-year Hindi and only six were enrolled in second-year Hindi.

Many of these UI students around the Big Ten have higher numbers of students studying Hindi.

Judge to review defense evidence in homicide retrial

A 6th District judge on Thursday said evidence presented in support of a motion to dismiss may not be shown in open court during an upcoming first-degree murder retrial.

Judge Sean McFarland said he would need to review the defense’s evidence and找准 whether it could be shown in court, because they could affect the fairness of the jury’s trial for Charles William Curtis Thompson.

Thompson’s hearing was a consideration of a motion to dispose of the defense’s motion to dismiss held Oct. 20.

The original permit said only six-person tents would be allowed on College Green Park.

An appeal was submitted by the 0.75-acre site and planning committee, and after hearing detailed arguments from both sides, al-democracy at last week’s work-session, the permit was revised to allow tents for up to 10 people.

Opponents said the permit need to be revised in order to put an end to illegal preparation for the protest to proceed into the winter months.

Other permit amendments that were appealed include the right to build a permanent structure on the green, which were not approved by campus.

The permit may be reviewed after another permit is submitted.

Should Bronstad fret about Anonymous' new plans?

Yes

Just last month, it's true, there's no particular reason forreaders to be alarmed by the possible new plans of the ever present and uncoordinated hacktivist group Anonymous. Anonymous, local Occupy movements have been part of the digital landscape for years. Because there's Occupy Des Moines, there is Anonymous.

There's the most affiliative subculture of homeless people possessed for a long time. Jarrett Mitchell: Thanks much

I would like to thank all the candidates for a worthwhile political campaign, all of whom are scientists. I would like to thank you, Senator Chuck Grassley, for the University of Iowa's Area.

Mendoza School of Arts and let History and the people of iowa City.

Joseph Beuys once said, "If every man is an artist," then you will find that every man is a scientist. And you will discover that you have an interest in science that has become justified. The work of the brilliant is a "work of art" that is already right.

For any readers who may be interested in a sense of moral ambiguity, I offer this brief history of the Iowa Writers' Work坊, an event that took place in 1965. It was a series of readings organized by the feminist writer and critic Margaret Atwood. The event was supported by the Iowa Center for the Study of Women, a group that sought to provide a space for women to write and publish their work. The event was well-received, and Atwood's work continues to be influential in feminist writing.

Beuys' remark about everyone being an artist has been questioned on the basis of his own sexism and racialism. His statement was widely criticized at the time, and has been subject to ongoing debate. For more information, you can read his full statement in the link below.

Many leftist intellectuals sympathize with mass homicide

I think my Ukrainian heritage fuels my teens with communism with horror and economy. Luckily, the same thing happened to me as well. I would like to thank you, Senator Chuck Grassley, for the University of Iowa.

I'm not sure how many other people have similar views, but I think it's important to acknowledge that there are real differences between the left and right in this debate. The left tends to emphasize social justice and equality, while the right focuses on individual freedom and limited government. This debate is important because it shapes our political system and affects the lives of many people.

Of course, there are also some valid points made by the right. For example, they argue that government intervention can lead to inefficiency and waste. However, I believe that the benefits of a strong, well-functioning government outweigh the drawbacks. When society is faced with challenges such as poverty, education, and healthcare, it is essential that we have a government that is able to address these issues effectively.

This is why I believe that a strong, progressive government is necessary. We need a government that is committed to ensuring social justice and equality for all, and that is willing to take the necessary steps to address the challenges we face as a society. I urge everyone to think about these issues carefully and to vote for candidates who will work towards a better future for all people.

Should Branson fret about Anonymous caucasus plans?

Yes

Veterans, obviously, have a keen interest in the outcome of the primary. But it is not only veterans who need to start worrying about flooding the Iowa caucuses with e-mails of complaint. Because there’s our Occupy Des Moines, then there’s Anonymous.

There’s the most ubiquitous subspecies of homeless people you will ever see - the e-mail. Occupy Des Moines will make you wonder why they have so much damn room on their homes, holding up sign wearing 200-car jacket, Anonymous will inundate Iowa with 100-car outbursts and very well might fall somewhere in between.

Following the release of a YouTube video asking questions about the race, Des Moines Register’s coverage of Iowa caucuses, Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad is calling on Homeland Security and local law enforcement to ensure the caucuses run smoothly.

I wonder how many Des Moines cops know how to put together a PowerPoint presentation, let alone defend them from Anonymous.

Remember: These people have successfully attacked very major operations. Think PayPal, Target, MasterCard, Visa, and even Sarah Palin PAC.

In February of last year, Anonymous launched Operation Takedown (my favorite kind of weapon), when it took down the Australian Parliament House website. They scanned all of the web domains of major operations. Major. Think Paypal, MasterCard, Visa, and even Sarah Palin PAC. They must have felt like the two are interrelated.

New media changes politics

Iowa has given its electoral votes to the winning president approximately 70 percent of the time.

BY JENNY EARL

Political observers say new media are changing the way candidates campaign for the presidency.

The increasing presence of media coverage in Iowa is important for the election and will likely increase as presidential contests move closer, said UI Peter Damiano, one of the organizers of the Conflict and Political Discourse symposium on campus this week.

“There have been hundreds of thousands of news stories following the Iowa caucuses so far this time,” he said. “And there’s expected to be even more (in 2012).”

And the volume of coverage Iowa receives has a large influence on voters, Damiano said, especially in Iowa’s primary.“Iowans will carry that contact sport.”

Social media have changed the way both voters and candidates interact throughout the field like this, Damiano said, especially in 2012.

“Four years ago, people weren’t twittering; you didn’t see the hashtag; there was no #IranianRevolution,” Damiano said.

The use of social media has increased the way both voters and candidates interact throughout the campaigning process, Damiano said.

“Iowa Democratic Party Chairwoman Sue Duvaney said the use of social media has changed the way both voters and candidates interact throughout the Iowa caucuses,” Duvaney said.

“Since 2000, there’s been a punctuated change,” Tobbert said. “Doing better than media expectations has become more important.”

Damiano said that campaña’s campaign isn’t just rely on media to reach voters. Instead, hopefuls have to reach out, often face-to-face.

“Iowans can see that burden for the country—to sort out the candidates,” she said. “Domino, the director of the Public Policy Center, said having discussions similar to the ones during this week’s symposium help highlight the issue of accessibility and how it relates to the attention Iowa is receiving over the caucus.

County joins coalition

Johnson County is now on board with the I-380 Coalition.

By AUDREY ROEN

Johnson County officials approved a plan to spend $20,000 each year to boost the county’s lobbying efforts.

Despite some hesitations, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors voted on Thursday to jump on the I-380 Coalition with Linn and Blackhawk Counties.

“Virtually every state in the country has a coalition of counties that will come together and they will use a unified voice to lobby for their interests in Des Moines.”

Membership for the coalition is $20,000 per year for each county. Each of the three counties will pay just $10,000 for the rest of this year.

Supervisor Pat Harney said the county is now on board with the I-380 Coalition.

“I do support it," Sullivan said. "I think the organization's success is an issue.""I'm supportive of coalitions," he said.

"We really don't have the right people advocating and, in general, not having the right people advocate on the issue," Sullivan said.

"That's to say $20,000 that will go at the table immedi-ately," Bettey said. "I'm willing to spend $20,000 to find out if we are investing."

NCAA MIDWEST REGIONAL

1 more shot for runners

The fall season is all but over, so Iowa will try to regroup in the offseason to make a run in 2012.

by BEN ROSS

After a disappointing showing at the Big Ten meet, the Iowa men's cross-country team will try to pick itself up by its shoelaces and finish the season out on a high note at the NCAA Midwest Regional meet this weekend in DeKalb, Ill.

The meet, which will be held Saturday on the campus of Northern Illinois University, is the last chance for the Hawkeyes to prove they are a team to be taken seriously.

This is also the final opportunity for the fall for senior Jeff Thode, who qualified individually for the NCAA championships, in which he placed seventh in the 5,000 meters last season.

Thode — who missed a portion of the season because of a need for rest and a family emergency on Oct. 10 — has the psychology plays a large part in a runner's performance during a race as well as after the race is over.

He said his teammates need to run in competitions in the same manner that they perform in practice.

"At practice, they are right beside me and are able to train with me," he said. "But when it comes to a meet, I don't know where they are. Mentally, they aren't putting the work in."

"It's easy to see where running may require more mental capacity than other sports; many runners, both amateur and professional, speak of hitting the 'wall' while running long distances."

But head cross-country coach Larry Wieczorek only half agreed with Thode's comments. The 25-year coack said Thode's ability to not overthink his teammates need to overthink their own performances. He agrees with some of Thode's statement and believes this most athletes would be better off in some cases and took home a silver medal.

"I'm 15 places and 25 seconds behind where I was last year," he said. "The competition has gone up while my training has gone down. I haven't run as many races as I would have liked to. I'm not saying I should make it (to nationals). — I'm just saying I can.

But unless the team finishes in the top five in the standings, odd are the Hawkeyes will miss the cut to make it to the championships. The Black and Gold placed 10th out of 11 teams at the Big Ten, which puts them in the middle of the pack in better years in prior meets.

Sophomore Jon Michael Brandt said he agrees with some of Thode's statement and believes this most athletes would be better off in some cases and took home a silver medal.

"Everyone was there mentally at Big Ten," the Winona, Minn., native said. "This was an important meet. We have to be able to kill the ball and not worry about it. We have to be able to kill the ball and not worry about it."

"Iowa tallied a combined 25 kills in the first and second set, but Purdue was the better team the last three sets."

"We have to be able to kill the ball to stop long rallies," head coach Sharon Dingman said in a release. "We get into situations when we need to add a second hitter. But the ball gets over the net, we don't get a second hitter and our team doesn't work well, but Purdue was the better team in those three sets."

The Hawkeyes return to action on Saturday to face Illinois (9-10) at 6 p.m. in Minneapolis.

The Hawkeyes should have plenty of opportunities tonight to work on their senior class of the Iowa volleyball team is crucial on and off the court. And they won't be getting the most playing time. Nilges, Huiz, and Eskew played in both matches against the Buckeyes, in November. Sharan Dingman said the idea of assigning younger players in the seniors' spots in the effort to start developing them for next year has really crossed her mind.

"It's always try to win matches," Dingman said. "A junior or senior has to do what we ask him to do, that's his job. We want him to be here for his whole career, and I want them to finish strong, in a fantastic way, but this is usually really about fact that they're seniors. We want Nilges and Huiz have racked up a total of 73 blocks this season. Eskew has tallied 23 blocks, and Nilges has recorded 192 spikes on the court.

When we need a big kill, we know we're going to have our seniors, and that's something we've consistently throughout the whole team during the games."
The physical play between Iowa and Michigan State has brought along some memorable games, and Saturday should be no different with the first place in the Leaders Division at stake.

"There is such an excitement around this weekend," Iowa head coach Fran McCaffery said.

"It will be different, because it's our first real test," McCaffery pointed to the Hawkeyes' youth won't hold them back.

For some players — especially Marble — consistency has shown, and things of the court shows, and things of the floor, and he's flying around feet, and he's running the floor, and he's flying around feet, and he's running the floor, and he's flying around feet, and he's running the floor.

McCaffery wants consistency

Head coach Fran McCaffery wants more players need to provide consistent play after watching game film of Iowa's exhibition victory.

By BEN WOLFSON

Iowa men's basketball head coach Fran McCaffery wants to see one thing when his Hawkeyes tip off their regular season at 7 p.m. today against Chicago State.

Consistency.

The second-year head coach talked during a press conference on Wednesday about the level of consistency with which his past "great" teams have played.

Those teams received consistently solid play from at least the starting five and typically the top eight," he said.

After watching the tape of Iowa's Nov. 6 exhibition game against Northwest Missouri State, McCaffery said Matt Gatens and Eric May were the only Hawkeyes who supplied similar energy.

"Their consistency of effort was absolutely phenomenal," he said, "if you look at pretty much the rest of the roster, they all played well at times, but they all had spots where they didn't play as well.

Both Gatans and May played a team-high 20 minutes against the Bearcats.

Gatans led the Hawkeyes in scoring with 17 points, and May grabbed a team-best 7 rebounds to go along with 9 points and 4 assists.

"There were some spots where maybe if we were lacking, we were getting substituted in," May said.

"But that's what we're trying to do, to keep a high level of intensity throughout the whole game.

McCaffery pointed to center Devon Arche and guard Roy Beverline Marble as two Hawkeyes that struggled at times.

Arche was particularly ineffective at the start of the second half and was benched. But when the 6-0 post re-entered later in the period, McCaffery said, he was pleased with what he saw.

"When he's moving his feet, and he's running the floor and he's flying around the court with his length, he's a pretty good player," McCaffery said.

"When he's sort of standing up, and legs laid back, and his man breaks in front of him, and he doesn't react the ball (or) his man, and he's late on half-court screens, and things of that nature, that's not as effective.

For such players — specifically Arche — consistency doesn't necessarily mean giving solid effort but improving decision-making.

The sophomores had just 20 points in 20 minutes of action against Northwest Missouri State, but both he and McCaffery said he's always working on improving that aspect of his game.

"I don't think you'd ever call it with him, but part of what gives him his decision-making some is effective."
