Sex-positive shop opening

The Toolbox, a sex shop, plans to open in early to mid-December.

Two Iowa City women have opened a sex-friendly shop in Iowa City.

Julia Schafer and Madison Montgomery own and operate the shop, Toolbox, in early to mid-December.

The shop will open the doors, Toolbox, in early to mid-December. The shop will open in Iowa City.

The Toolbox, like other businesses, is collaborating to entice holiday shoppers.

City Eye changes for restaurants

The potential changes would put businesses with high PAULA rates at risk of losing 21st-century exemptions.

Iowa City bars and restaurants with exemptions to the 21st-century laws will face stricter conditions if a series of proposed ordnance passes.

Changes to the exemptions would make the laws more onerous, as well as more “fair,” and prevent establishments from using advantages of loopholes the exceptions provide.

With people taking advantage of this exemption, it puts out an unfair playing field,” said Leah Cohen, the owner of Bio-Jamas, 119 E. Washington St., and a member of the Partnership for Alcohol Safety advocacy council. “We are a 24-hour, and we need to enforce that.”

One of the regulations says if a business is in downtown, the floor space covered cannot be anything less than 25 percent adult products.

“It’s not exactly defined as to what adult would entail, it’s sort of what you think fits into that,” Schafer said.

Schafer said the goal for the store is to create an open and welcoming environment for people to purchase products and gather in the community.

In downtown Iowa City business owners have created a coalition to keep their purchases local this season.

The first issue, he said, is the controversy of opening a sex business.

“I think we do that,” Schafer said. “We need to enforce that.”

Despite the exemptions, restaurants do not seem to misuse their exemption, PAULA rates at bars can be indicative of that.

“Any retail is healthy for the community,” said Leah Cohen, the owner of Bio-Jamas, 119 E. Washington St.

Melsahn Basabe has struggled recently in Iowa's last three games.

By Ben SCHUff

Men's wrestling action at Carver-Hawkeye Arena following a dual meet between the Hawkeyes and Lindenwood.

Iowa's 77-61 loss to Campbell's Hawkeyes beneath the press room as Melsahn Basabe sat for nine fouls over the second-half. Basabe is averaging 2 points and 3.3 rebounds per game in the past three contests. One likely reason for Basabe's lack of production is foul trouble in which he has found himself.

The 6-7 power forward has been pulled from nine fouls over the past three contests totaling 6 fouls. Basabe recorded a season-low 11 minutes against Indiana/Purdue-Fort Wayne on Nov. 26 after picking up two fouls in the first half of the game. Iowa head coach Fran McCaffery said it's "fairly typical" for Basabe to be "quiet" in games in which he has star forward in foul trouble.

The answer might surprise you. It was the offense. As McCaffery said Tuesday sharply, "It's a Hawkeye attack spat- tered late in the game. The reason was simple: Iowa's offense simply didn't improve much even over the course of the year. Instead, one in the heart of the Big Ten schedule, the offense often felt a much less talented — but consistently improving — defense out to dry settings of what you don't already know," McCaffery could tell you guys that they also played the nation's toughest schedule and, therefore, mustered late in the season. The Hawkeyes had struggled since, averaging 2 points and 3.3 rebounds per game in the first seven of the first three contests from 2010, which unmistakably save the best offense of the entire conference.

But Iowa scored 31 points just once during its 2-3 season-opening stretch — and warning signs surfaced long before that.

The earliest came in a 44-41 triple-overtime loss at Iowa State on Sept. 10. Iowa finished with 41 points, zero, but Iowa's Thanksgiving break this past weekend: 125-pound Matt McDonough, Lofthouse, and Telford each recorded open on Nov. 19: McDonough, Ramos, Marion, St. Denis and Telford each recorded two. Whatever isn't known is who The Hawkeyes have seen a different Basabe in their last three games than the first three contests. The sophomore upsets the 5-7 rebounds per game to start the season against Chicago State, North Carolina A&T, and Northern Illinois. But Basabe has been nearly invisible since, averaging 2 points and 3.3 rebounds per game. One likely reason for Basabe's lack of production is foul trouble in which he has found himself, but not too much I could tell you guys that you don't already know," Basabe said after recording so many fouls (2) as points against the Fighting Camels. The Wolverines couldn’t find their shooting touch, missing 18 of 27 shots at large but so did a BCS game.

Three of the teams in the post-season teams are filling out a spot. Michigan will have to prove precious few. The Wolverines have a chance to turn this around, with Nebraska’s defense.

“We need to get it to him more often than not, and we need to do it at all times.”

“Send a message that there’s a team that can compete with us. It’s about doing that at all times.”

The Hawkeyes say they’re confident they can do that. They’ve got their first three games to 30 wins in the second half, partly because of their defense.

But when asked if he was still playing well, Marble said, “I’m more of a good leader than a player.”

“Now we’re going to try our best and see how it goes.”

The defense surrendered 406.7 yards of offense in the first seven games. In the first seven games, Iowa allowed 395.

The first-ever Big Ten Heroes Game was forgettable for the Hawkeyes. Iowa (7-5, 4-4 Big Ten) couldn’t overcome its worst offensive performance since the Big Ten opener at Penn State and lost to No. 20 Nebraska, 20-7 this past weekend at Memorial Stadium in Lincoln. The Hawkeyes were shut out for 56:34, using Marcus Coker’s 2-yard touchdown run late in the fourth quarter to narrowly avoid their first goose egg in 11 years. Nebraska’s defense — particularly corner Alfonzo Dennard — led to Marvin McNutt’s worst performance of the season. The senior receiver was held to 4 catches for a season-low 29 yards.

Quarterback James Vandenberg struggled to find other options and finished 16-of-35 for 182 yards and an interception. The Cornhuskers used Rex Burkhead’s 160 rushing yards on a Nebraska-record 38 carries and an uncharacteristically efficient passing performance from Taylor Martinez (12-of-22 for 163 yards and a touchdown) to distance themselves from the Hawkeyes. Eight of Iowa’s 12 drives spanned five plays or fewer, leading to a 37:47 to 22:13 discrepancy in time of possession.

“THe story for us, we couldn’t do anything in the pass game,” Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. “We ran the ball effectively but we couldn’t make anything go in the passing game, especially in the first half. So we were never able to get that balance. We weren’t able to sustain drives.”

A pair of Nebraska defenders tackle Iowa quarterback James Vandenberg at Memorial Stadium on Nov. 25. Vandenberg was 16-of-35 passing and threw 1 interception in the Hawkeyes’ 20-7 loss to the Huskers. (The Daily Iowan/Adam Wesley)

Nebraska chose to run the ball with Rex Burkhead on a fourth and 1 late in the second quarter, and the Hawkeyes couldn’t do anything about it. Burkhead rushed for 2 yards and a first down, one of his nine carries on that drive alone. Quarterback Taylor Martinez found Kyler Reed for a 6-yard touchdown pass six plays later, giving the Cornhuskers a 10-0 lead with 32 seconds until halftime.

Iowa forced a Nebraska third-and-7 from the 50-yard-line midway through the third quarter, but Martinez connected with Kenny Bell for a 28-yard pass. A penalty on Iowa’s Tanner Miller moved the Cornhuskers up to the 11-yard-line and Brett Maher connected on a 21-yard field goal a few moments later. The score pushed Nebraska’s lead to 13-0 with 4:42 left in the third.

Huskers more Heroic than Hawkeyes

That pretty much sums up any season unless you’re LSU or something like that. We’re going out and trying to do our best and trying to get a win.

— Iowa linebacker James Morris when asked to explain Iowa’s up-and-down season.
Iowa outscored Nebraska 31-20 in an offensive struggle Saturday at Memorial Stadium.

"The story for us, we couldn't do anything in the pass game," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "We just didn't execute."

LOOK AHEAD

Players will get another much-needed rest as Iowa waits to learn its bowl opponent. Possible destinations include Temple, Army, for the Insight Bowl, Jacksonville, Fla., for the Gator Bowl, and Houston for the Meineke Car Care Bowl of Texas. Regardless of where the Hawkeyes go, they'll try to extend a school-record three-game winning streak. Iowa has knocked off the likes of South Carolina, Georgia Tech, and Missouri in bowl games over the last three seasons.

"The offense's struggles, the story for us, we couldn't do anything in the pass game," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "We just didn't execute."

Hyde finished the day with 160 rushing yards and a touchdown on a school- single-game school record 38th carry, which came on a kneel play the offense's struggles, really. I thought it was not a good way to get it, just taking a knee.

"I didn't want to do have to do it in that fashion, really I thought it was not a good way to get it, just taking a knee. But after the first play, Marcel did a great job on that. He's got great balance."

"The story for us, we couldn't do anything in the pass game. We ran the ball effectively but we couldn't make anything go in the passing game, especially in the first half. So we were never able to get that balance. We weren't able to sustain drives."
