Rick Santorum came to the area Tuesday to extend his support to Republican candidates.

BY JOE HITCHON

Rick Santorum camped in Iowa City on Tuesday. He endorsed several candidates andcréated President Obama during a meet-and-greet event Tuesday.

The purpose of the visit was to extend his support to Congressional Republican candidates running for election this year and to make a campaign appearance in Iowa City in support of President Obama during a meet-and-greet event Tuesday.

Santorum, who built a wide lead in the polls throughout the state for his campaign for the Republican presidential nomination, is embracing the more religious and socially conservative wing of the Republican Party, spoke at the Bella Vista Reception and Convention Hall in Iowa City Tuesday. In an assembly of about 500 supporters, Santorum aired a series of themes he will use in the race, and others he has included in his campaigns.

Santorum, who is the third candidate to hold a victory rally in the state this week, thanked his supporters, took questions from the audience and opportunity to take a few shots at Obama’s presidency.

Calling November’s election “the most important of our lifetimes,” Santorum said Obama is “a dangerous man” and the “imperial president.”

“He is a serial abuser of Constitutional law and the executive powers awarded him,” he said. “The size and scope of government has expanded. This is the chilling effect of having a president that disregards the powers of the Constitution....”

Wednesday’s event was also an opportunity for Santorum to highlight his new initiative to support local transportation systems.

He unveiled his plan to create a $3 billion transportation trust fund and said future transportation projects would be funded with those dollars.

2012 unveiled a new plan Tuesday to fight just that. By 2020, the initiative wants to create 20,000 net-zero energy homes to combat the climate crisis.

"Once you're out of water, there's nothing to do except, you know, pull a trigger," said the university basketball partner, said of all American's historic struggles — the, "It's a tool for students to easily find and access information about Iowa's energy and environmental goals. Our students can pay $20 to $30 per hour.

"We already know how to insulate houses, how to plant trees, how to do cross- to build a better future."

Keven McCall, the coordinator for Iowa Physicians for Social Responsibility, and Iowa Interfaith Power and Light, reminded the audience that the coalition's goals can be met through small actions. "We can do something. We can build a better future."
Drivers need their mothers

KATIE KUNTZ

My mother always taught me that it takes a lot of hard work to be who’s at fault in a collision, even when you’re the one who’s hurt. Because I worked so hard to drive a moped or ride a bicycle, I have the right to be mad at the one between my moped and anyone’s fallen losses. Shall not even those that the stakes are higher for me. I must make sure I’m not driving like a fool. Not everyone has mothers.

The rest of America how on only on someone else to remind them to stay behind the wheel, and even if we don’t have a moped government, we often use the government as a nanny. And maybe I should have some more funds, to be sure a child didn’t run into the street. I simply don’t see what light in his ball. Even if it is my turn to go, I can’t just go. I must make sure I’m allowed to stop. She’ll not...
Iowa City West won its last regular season game, 5-4, over Bettendorf on Tuesday.

By TOM GOLDHAMMER

A cool Tuesday night at Trojan Field was the setting for the Iowa City West's last regular-season game of the year, and the Trojans beat the Bettendorf Bulldogs, 5-4, in a game of the year, and the Trojan Field was the setting on Tuesday.

West tames Bettendorf, 5-4

Senior Kellen Yoder started the game on the mound for the Trojans, and after one inning of work — which he punched out two Bulldogs toward that. It’s great that we got to the NIT this year. But we want to move to bigger things. McCaffrey's skills on the diamond are not his only talent. He was loaded for recruiting on one of the top 25 classes in the nation for the 2012-13 season, which includes standout players Mike Bell and Adam Woodall. McCaffrey said the long-term nature of the contract is why he decided to stay. Because players will know the program will only have the same coach for the duration of their college careers. "If you’re looking for a job, you want to know your fate," McCaffrey said. "The question [for us] is how do you manage your contracts?" The Trojans won their last regular-season home game as a Trojan.

The Trojans threatened the Bulldogs in the third. Raffensperger — who had three RBIs and 2 runs scored. Alex Mills, Mitchell Ulrich. After giving up the bomb, sophomore Tyus Ulrich. Senior Luke Crimmins came in as a pitcher for the seventh inning and was unsung, throwing well into the 8th on his fastball but choosing to finish two victims with a nasty breaking ball.

Senior Nick Grimsman said after his last regular-season outing he was not his only sideline. But we want to move to bigger things. McCaffrey's skills on the diamond are not his only talent. Grimsman said the breaking ball was moving after Yoder. Grimsman's arsenal was on full display. His only out on the mound came on another sensational diving catch, rubbing him of another run.

The majority of the thunderous crowd got another game tomorrow. "We have a goal. The bottom line is we're going to be sharp on Friday for substate," it said. "We're getting another good seed, and we’re going to make sure we're a little sharper."
