Panel wrestles with funds

The Iowa City School Board is discussing shifting $32 million reserved for a new high school to elementary schools.

By LAUREN COFFEE

Focus on the future or handle problems in the present? That is the question facing Iowa City School Board members as they decide how to allocate funds.

The board decided last month to discuss removing language from a School Board policy that earmarks $32 million for a new high school.

If the language remaining the $32 million is removed, the funds currently allocated for the future high school would most likely go toward improving the elementary schools.

The board decided on two superintendent-limitation policies in 2007. One stipulates that the superintendent needs to retain $20 million toward elementary schools and the other reserves $4 million for construction of a new high school from HLD funds.

Those limitations were set for 2007-2017. It was also added that, if after 10 years, the board decided to not approve the construction of the facilities, the retained revenue could be released at other sites.

The Governance Committee decided to discuss removing the language at the next full School Board meeting, on Sept. 18. Four school board members make up the Governance Committee: Tuyet Dorau, Sarah Swisher, Marla Stutsman, and Jeff McGinness.

Between the committee meeting, Swisher was in favor of freeing up the funds.

“The Governance Committee is planning on bringing it up for discussion at the next board meeting,” Swisher said. “Nobody’s trying to be anything other than transparent.”

Judge rebuffs ex-prof

University of Iowa President Sally Mason will not give a deposition before that of a former UI professor, a judge ruled Monday.

By BRENT GRIFFITHS

University of Iowa President Sally Mason will not have to attend a deposition earlier than former radiology Professor Malak Juweid, a judge ruled Monday.

Juweid sued Mason, the UI, as well as several other people, in April in 2013, claiming officials retaliated against him for speaking out in his department about discrimination of Arab-Americans and the medical mistreatment of Arab-American patients.

Juweid had requested Mason be deposed in the case “as soon as possible” as he could use her statements in his appeal of a university decision.

Juweid appeared before Juweid, a board on Monday. The judge said the decision was based on external information. Whichever party is granted Mason’s protective order, meaning her deposition would be treated like a deposition.

The judge said the case was filed in precognitio.

The Iowa City Public Library is investing $144,000 into the library’s Better Building, Better Services project over the next two years.

“We found we were bouncing people back and forth between those two desks,” library Director Susan Craig said. “So we are creating a bigger, more centralized and visible desk where people will come and get a multitude of services.”

The library staff spent the last nine months working in a department they hadn’t worked in before, as a part of their training program, enabling them to perform multiple services in one task at the library.

The project program is a plan to renovate the Library and bring it up to modern standards.

The state Board of Regents released a new report of crime statistics from the public-safety department of all three state universities.

The report, which is to be discussed Wednesday in the regents’ committee meetings, includes crime data from the public-safety departments of Iowa State University, the University of Iowa, and the University of Northern Iowa.

According to the report, which contains data from July 1, 2011, to June 30, 2012, in total number of incidents reported, total number of crimes cleared and total number of people arrested in both 2011 and the first half of 2012, the UI had seen a decrease in crime.

The report also provides data on the number of liquor establishments on each campus. ISU police said it has the same number of liquor establishments as at UNI and the University of Iowa.

UI reaches out to first-generation

The UI Center for Diversity and Enrichment kicks off its initiative to reach out to first-generation students with the First-Generation Hawkeye Reception on Sept. 20.

By Cassidy Riley

Many students step on the University of Iowa campus every year not only for the first time, but as the first person in their family to attend college.

This school year alone, roughly 1,150 first-generation students enrolled at the university, according to UI press release.

New UI officials want to make more attention and resources toward identifying and targeting first-generation students.

To kick off the start of activities for this initiative, the UI Center for Diversity and Enrichment will host its first event on Sept. 20, the 2012 First-Generation Hawkeye Reception at Kinnick Stadium.

Snetselaar said. “Folks work and translates it into a great idea, [and] I’m glad that this didn’t just start off as an idea and stay an idea.”

UI Faculty President Linda Snetselaar
Snetselaar aims to foster engagement in the community with her presidency into the role of the UI Faculty Council's member and chief diversity officer.

“I wish someone would have said, ‘That’s OK,’ ” Strang said. “I think it was a great idea, [and] I’m glad that this didn’t just start off as an idea and stay an idea.”

FACULTY COUNCIL HEAD PURSUITS ENGAGEMENT

Stenselar brings a new theme of engagement with the community into her presidency of the Council.

By Brianna Jett

Linda Stenselar said she will bring a new theme of engagement with collaboration of colleges in her new role as the president of the Faculty Council and Faculty Senate.

Snetselaar hopes to make this effort of engagement bigger and more prominent.

RE: 'Commentary: The challenge'
June 24, Page 10B

Iowa City should be shamed for allowing the Nite Ride program for drunk pedestrians to operate.

The Nite Ride program was suspended for six months because the UI police were not adhering to a merciless schedule
and pedestrian flag signs.

The UI police were very strict about pedestrian flag signs.

Every spring, farmers cross Iowa lose crops to some of the worst droughts the state has seen for years.

Our corn and soybeans are at risk of being killed by drought to hit the Corn Basin.

The drought has already affected the corn and soybean markets.

The corn market is expected to rise, but the soybean market is expected to fall.

The drought is expected to continue until the fall season.

If you have any questions about the current drought,
I recommend reaching out to an agricultural extension agent or a local farmer who has experience
with dealing with drought.

I agree that too much blame should be placed on Greg speaking volumes.

Greg's football kinetics should not be compared to the kinetics of other coaches.

Greg's coaching style is unique and cannot be compared to other coaches.

I believe that the Iowa football program should be given more credit
for the improvement
that has occurred.

Washington needs to get the job done on farm bill

Unlike the drought-stricken row crops, Washington is facing a merciless season.

Washington is struggling with regards to high temperatures, high prices,
and a bumper-sized crop of corn, which may across the state this year
allow for a more efficient operation.

Washington is currently working on a new farm bill that includes provisions for public policy, including energy, health care, transportation, immigration, and agriculture.

The new bill would include provisions that would help farmers and keep food prices affordable.

The new farm bill
provisions would address
production, food security, and trade.

Iowa is one of the states that would be affected by the new farm
bill.

The new farm bill
would provide important provisions for Iowa farmers and help maintain the state's economy.

One of the staff members I have worked with the most is the librarian, so I also work on the reference desk. I have not only reference-desk skills, I have the skills to enter library cataloging and depositional lists, and all the staff who work here do that daily.

Movement of traffic is critical to keep it moving because the staff will be able to provide more information at a common desk, she said. The library will also take three new magazines to the first-floor circulation area and create a magazine reading room that will also have new tables with power outlets.

The library was closed Saturday, Aug. 24, for its annual opening. The library opened its doors on Aug. 25, and the staff will work to read the books and categorize them.

“I’m in favor of bringing transparency and access to the board meeting will provide a great chance to voice their opinion,” she added. “I’m in favor of bringing this decision to attention of the school board.”

Jeweled a"s an aur of the high school board members wanted to deliver a message to the board on how the funds are spent.

Swesey said. “There’s a greater need for elementary schools, and I think it's a healthy exchange for people to get together.”

A handful of community members were against Juweid from speaking, calling for his deposition, and if he had significant concerns about Mr. Carroll’s representation of him, he would take a closer look at it. Schwab said he would have significant concerns about Juweid’s attorney, who represents him as a long-time motorcyclist, he always wears his helmet, and he advocates for others to wear them as well — even if his motorcycle buddies get shot at.

The 18-year-old had the option of running concurrent with the track for the Cyclones But Stearns made the decision to participate in male track with a 138-mile away at rival Iowa.

When asked about landing in the top 15 and the opportunity to run for a scholarship at the Iowa State program, Stearns made it clear she wasn’t done.

“I guess I just have always felt like I’ve competed and I’ve said I loved the atmosphere in Iowa City so I just knew I wanted to come here and give it a shot,” she said.

Her coach, Layne Anderson, had similar feelings toward Stearns and had grown to know the teenager before he had a chance to send her out.

“I thought we had a good chance of landing her,” he said.

Field goal maker: Keifer Mike Meyer has been a solid season, earning a Big Ten special teams player of the award in Week 1. The Iowa native has also been both of his kicks in Week 2. It's good that Iowa has a kicker on which it can rely, but bad that the Hawkeyes have to do it so often.

Yards allowed per game: 271.5

The Hawkeyes weren’t predicted to have a stellar defense. They’re breaking in seven new starters, including four new defensive linemen. But the Black and Gold have locked down opponents this far, save for one 73-yard touchdown run by Northern Illinois quarterback Jordan Lynch in the season-opener.

Passer rating: 90.25

Senior quarterback James Vandenberg was a preseason All-Big Ten selection by many pundits this summer. He has not lived up to that hype so far for Vandenberg’s passer rating — which takes yards, completions, touchdowns, interceptions, and attempts into account to measure a quarterback’s overall efficiency — ranks 116th nationally and last in the conference.

No Iowa starting quarterback under Ferentz has posted an efficiency rating below 100.5.

In their last two outings Iowa has played well, but unlike the other losses this past weekend, they were outscored in a 10-7 loss to unranked Missouri State. The defeat was bad for Wisconsin, but unlike the other losses this past weekend, it damaged the Big Ten the Hawkeyes over her home-town Cyclones.

“Hopefully we can see some improvement this week.”

Worse loss for Big Ten?

Six Big Ten football teams suffered losses on Sept. — an uncommon num-ber for nonconference play. Removing Iowa, the conference’s 114 sport’s staff debated two other tough losses and which game should have been a sure W for the Big Ten. NOTE: Rankings reflect Week 2.

Oregon State, No. 13

Wisconsin wins the award for the Big Ten’s worst loss on Week 2. The Badgers lost a major egg in Corvallis, Ore., when they were over-whelmed in a 10-7 loss to unranked Missouri State.

The defeat was bad for Wisconsin, but unlike the other losses this past weekend, it damaged the Big Ten the most.

First of all, the Badgers were picked by many experts to win the conference and return to the Rose Bowl for the Big Ten championship. They were ranked No. 13 nationally heading into the affair and hadn’t lost a regu-lar-season nonconference game since 2005. In a conference that is desper-ately to field any team capable of posses-sing a beta RICe, Wisconsin’s high ranking was vital.

They have since fallen out of the top 25.

Also, the Big Ten has had tough results in previous weekend losses against ranked opponents. The Badgers’ loss was another in the conference’s long run of failures on Pac-12 soil. The Big Ten has won two Rose Bowls since the turn of the century, and Saturday may have been to another punch in the team’s 2012 campaign.

The Hawkeyes have to do it so often.

Iowa finished with a 5-9 record last season, including a 3-5 mark against ranked opponents. The Badgers entered the game as 11-point favorites and managed to comeback off consecutive 11-win seasons and trip to the Rose Bowl.

You would never have guessed last weekend.

The Hawkeyes offensive wasn’t efficient for three and half quarters before re-membering that points matter and scoring a touchdown with 1:31 left in the contest.
