Iowa sees fewer tornadoes

Iowa may break the record for lowest number of tornadoes this year.

By NICK HASSETT

Iowa is on track to record the lowest number of tornadoes since 1963, though experts maintain that the situation is quite variable.

Harry Hillaker, the state climatologist for Iowa, said 16 tornadoes have been recorded thus far, and conditions that caused the lack of tornadoes were hard to pin down.

“The drought affected tornado conditions here, because severe thunderstorms create opportunities for tornadoes,” he said. “But there is a certain amount of chance involved.”

However, Hillaker said, some years, such as 1989, had similar drought conditions and yet had more tornadoes. There were 49 recorded tornadoes in Iowa in 1989, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

While Hillaker said most tornadoes occur during spring and early summer, when the contrast in temperature across the region create ideal conditions for tornadoes, there is a possibility — however remote — of more happening this year.

Iowa is certainly familiar with these late season tornadoes. On Nov. 12, 2005, eight tornadoes touched down in central Iowa, and cut across the state, causing significant damage and resulting in one fatality. This event was an anomaly, though. Only 22 November tornadoes have occurred since 1980.

As tornadoes ripped through Iowa City, destroying many buildings and causing at least $10 million in damages, the forecast for the rest of these tornadoes, Hillaker said that most don’t impact the state a great deal.

“When you think of Iowa, most of it is rural farmland,” he said. “Though tornadoes, even weak ones, can cause total devastation across small areas, if the area they hit is just right crops, the overall impact is pretty small.”

William Gallia, a professor in the department of meteorology, said that caused the lack of tornadoes were hard to pin down.

“There are several opportunities for torna- does on some occasions during the forum. I believe when citizens have alterna- tives, they vote for it, it helps better cooperation and communication and results in more efficient government,” he said. “This leads to more stable prop- erty tax without diminishing human
Policing policy, jail crowding

Cite and release policy helps jail overcrowding on game days and reduces transport costs.

By MATT STARNES

A policy established in 2010 at the University of Iowa police has helped reduce the number of individuals transported from the holding cell at Kinnick Stadium to the Johnson County Jail, and it is helping to reduce the cost of housing inmates in other jails.

The cite and release initiative, which kicked off Oct. 9 and is tentatively scheduled to continue for the games until Nov. 10, is intended to ensure simple charges can be dealt with before a prisoner is transferred to a holding cell at Kinnick Stadium or transported from the holding cell at Kinnick Stadium to another jurisdiction.

The policy, which allows individuals who are only charged with public intoxication to be issued a written citation instead of being arrested, is in the care of a sober friend or family member — or by police who have been helpful to the Johnson County Jail.

“This has worked out quite well, and it helps to keep the jail population down during game days,” Green wrote in an email Monday.

Green said the initiative was put into place after UI police spoke with the Johnson County Attorney’s Office and other local law-enforcement organizations.

He said the policy was established to avoid a significant increase in the number of individuals being brought to the Johnson County Jail for public intoxication on game days.

Johnson County Sheriff Lenny Pulkrabek said the initiative has had a significant effect on jail crowding for game day weekends. The reduction in the number of inmates they are moving increases the lower level of overcrowding on home-game days, he said.

He said the policy was instituted to make the jail better and has helped to reduce the cost of housing inmates in other jails for public intox. Pulkrabek said the initiative allows society to deal with the charges and get on with their lives rather than be transported from the jail.

“Instead of putting these people in jail before the game, we are working with the UI police to put them on report that prior to the change, anyone who got arrested at the game went to the detention facility and allowed to stay there until the sheriff’s office.

Pulkrabek said the decrease in game-day traffic has helped to reduce previous costs related to the housing of inmates outside of the county, he said.

Records made available on the Sheriff’s Office website show the cost to house inmates outside the Johnson County Jail for fiscal 2013 was $1,115,314. Pulkrabek said his office houses inmates out of the county to lower the numbers in the jail. The office houses inmates out of the county 2012 was $1,116,511.

Pulkrabek said his office houses inmates out of the county to lower the numbers in the jail. The office houses inmates out of the county 7 percent last month for the first time since Obama’s inauguration. But the campaign has made sure to put more stock in economic indicators showing an Obama recovery in consumer confidence and retail spending, not the Obama administration’s deficit reduction efforts.

“We’re encouraged by how much it has a big impact on how busy the jail is,” he said.

That, along with the fact that we remediated, we could ask anyone who got arrested at the game to get into the detention facility and allow to stay there until the sheriff’s office.

The GRE is still not as economically significant as it once was. “You can’t beat going for an early vote,” Hagle said.

“If you’re getting your base to respond; it probably means you have more votes in the bank,” said University of Iowa political-science Associate Professor Tim Hagle.

According to the Office of the Iowa Secretary of State, 115,280 Democrats had voted, compared with 62,176 Republicans, as of Oct. 12. Those votes were either absentee votes or votes made at a satellite location.

“People are not voting at home, they are not voting in their hometown, they are voting somewhere else,” Hagle said.

Early voting lies in convenience. “People say this is easier; I’ve been getting out, along with my fellow actors, is the Obama volunteer and UI student Oliver Hidalgo-Wohlleben, who was part of the early voting program.

“With the Romney campaign early voting is encouraging early voting and that allows them to show up at the polls,” Schafer said.

According to mcbu.com, the cost to take the GMAT is $250, and the GRE is $215 globally. “The GRE gives business schools the opportunity to have a more diverse pool,” said Christa Retana, manager of external communications at the Educational Testing Service, which administers the GRE.

“The GRE is for admission to M.B.A. programs. UI business officials say they prefer the GRE.” Schafer said. “The GRE M.B.A. program is now accepting students on a case-by-case basis who have taken the revised GRE.” Schafer said. “Even though the revised GRE isn’t a regular part of the admissions program to the UI M.B.A. program, it is being discussed as part of admissions at the university, joining others around the world in its implementation.”

The UI joins Duke University and the University of Wisconsin-Madison among the top 500 institutions around the world that accept and require UI M.B.A. program applicants to take the revised GRE.

Consider the Eurozone in the campaign

When it comes to foreign policy this presidential election has two distinct camps: those who believe that the U.S. should only react in the Middle East, the Persian Gulf and South-Central Asia; and those who believe that the U.S. should take an active role in the Middle East, the Persian Gulf and South-Central Asia.

The current presidential election is marked by a new focus on the global economy. In a recent speech, President Obama pledged to work with his European counterparts to create a “deeper collaboration” on budgeting. Obama said the U.S. and Europe are in danger of regressing as a global actor.

The Romney campaign’s foreign policy plan emphasizes the need to foster strategic partnerships around the world. Romney believes that the U.S. should work with its allies to achieve common goals.

Get informed about voting

We are 24 days away from Election Day. For many of us, this is our first presidential election, but for six million Illinoisans this is their twelfth. Whether you are eligible to vote or not, we strongly encourage you to vote. However, many of us still do not know how to vote or will vote, whether we are already registered or are planning our polling places by election day.

As a conservative, Romney believes in the need to cut federal spending and end the growth of our debt.

We have to tune in now and vote for Mitt Romney in the presidential election.

6. For many students, Election Day, Nov. 6, is a day to check in on campus and network. However, many of us still do not know how to vote or will vote, whether we are already registered or are planning our polling places by election day.

Before you do vote, you should be informed about the candidates in the race. One of the main goals of the UISG is to provide a platform for discussion about the candidates in the race. You would like to become more informed about the candidates. One of the best ways to do this is to listen to the UISG Debate With Us at 7 p.m. today in the BP.

The defense is carrying the brunt of the load for the Hawkeyes.

By TORK MASON

The Box Score is a weekly segment in which a Daily Iowan football reporter vetoes statistics to continue the football's performance over the course of the season.

Six games into the 2012 season, Iowa's passing game still hasn't emerged the way many thought it would. Mark Weisman has struggled all season. The Hawkeyes have allowed 18 scores on 21 trips inside the opponent's red zone. The 86.7 percent allowed is best in the nation. But only 1 of 13 Spartan possessions plus a four-play drive that netted Michigan State minus 9 yards has resulted in a touchdown. The 38.1 percent touchdown rate is 10th-best in the country.

This past weekend was no different. The defense forced field goals in the red zone on four different possessions against Michigan State, including two in overtime on a field goal to win a 19-16 victory.

The Hawkeyes have allowed the second-fewest first downs per game on the road of any team in the nation this year. Forcing third-and-outs consistently has kept the score low; opponents have averaged just 16.5 points per game against Iowa away from Kinnick Stadium. That's been vital for an Iowa offense that has struggled all season.

Iowa's stringiness was new, or more evident than in Kaukauna, Mich., on Oct. 13. The Hawkeyes forced four, three-and-outs in 13 Spartan possessions, plus a four-play drive that netted Michigan State minus-9 yards. Opposing quarterbacks have put up a nearly 102-10 pass efficiency rating. That mark is best in the nation by a wide margin. The second-best rating is 109.9, held by Western Kentucky.

Iowa's effort against the pass has been a key component in allowing just 4 first downs on third down with 7 yards to go. Senior cornerback Micah Hyde has played a big role, breaking up 6 passes on the season. The linebackers have also been able to lock down opposing receivers and have broken up 8 passes and picked off two more.

Opponent's red-zone touchdown rate: 38.1 percent

But all of the above isn't to say that Phil Parker doesn't subscribe to some of his predecessor's philosophies.

The Hawkeyes have allowed 18 scores on 21 trips to the red zone, which ranks near the bottom of Division-I teams. But only eight trips have resulted in touchdowns. The 38.1 percent touchdown rate is 10th-best in the country.

This past weekend was no different. The defense forced field goals in the red zone on four different possessions against Michigan State, including two in overtime on a field goal to win a 19-16 victory.

Injured Weisman not on depth chart

Mark Weisman’s game-touching in the loss against Michigan State may have come at a deep cost. The senior back came back injured on his ankle on the play and is not listed on the weekly depth chart released by the Hawkeyes on Monday afternoons. Weisman was tackled into the end zone on a fourth down in the red zone. He was not able to walk off the field, necessitating treatment on the sidelines but not return to action in overtime.

Weisman has carried the ball 303 times this season for 879 yards and 8 touchdowns this season— almost all of that coming in the last four games, when the Air Force transfer took over as Iowa’s top running back. Former long snapper is listed in the starter in place of Weisman. The fruit freshman carried the ball four times for 1 yard against the Spartans, and he has 6 carries for just 25 yards this season. Sophomore Jordan Canzeri is listed in the No.2 back, making his first appearance on the two-deep for postgame interviews after Iowa’s win over Purdue in a game in which he has been practicing since August. He is apparently ready to play now if needed.

Weisman’s absence on the two-deep, however, doesn’t guarantee he won’t play. He appeared for postgame interviews after Iowa’s win over the Spartans in a protection boot and said he would “determine” if he is ready to play against Penn State on Saturday.
