Council dumps Taft levee

The city council voted 5-2 against approving the Taft Speedway levee.

By Nick Hassert

The Iowa City council rejected a proposed measure to construct a $8.1 million levee to help protect against floodwaters Tuesday afternoon, saying the arguments for the flood-mitigation project outweighed the benefits.

“We have to be very judicious in the way we do protection,” City Councilor Susan Milne. “We have to think about the impact it has on other people in other areas: the minute you put up a levee, it affects other people.

The proposed project — dubbed Alternate 7 — would have involved the construction of an earthen levee around the Idylwild neighborhood and Parkview Church primarily along the Taft Speedway between Dubuque Street and N. Meade Road. The west side of the levee would have tied into the high ground along N. Meade Road, and to the east it would have tied into high ground north of Taft Speedway.

The proposed flood-mitigation project was one of eight proposals for the area, which ranged from establishing a floodwall to establishing a levee and floodwall system. The proposals ranged in estimated costs from $3 million to $14.3 million, The Daily Iowan has previously reported. The National Housing and Urban Development Disaster Recovery Office would have administered the funding through a Community Development Block Grant the city would have had to apply for.

However, councilors and community members expressed doubts that the levee proposal met the requirements of the grant, including that “existing conditions pose a serious and immediate threat to the health or welfare of the community for which other funding is not available.”

“This is federal money, taxpayer dollars that would pay for this,” said Gary Sundius, an Iowa City resident. “Should we really be spending $8 million to save people who have bought property near to speculation after the flood? To me, that’s just not right.”

Sundius, along with 15 community members spoke during the public discussion, including some from the Idylwild and Taft Speedway neighborhoods. Most opposed the levee, though several thought the Idylwild condominiums did not have the same level of flood exposure as other affected areas.

City Councilor Michelle Payne said the council should use logic rather than emotion in deciding the issue.

“Spending $8.2 million for 92 people while putting more in danger is too much money for the benefit of a few,” she said.

Discussion surrounding flood-mitigation for this neighborhood is not anything new to the council.

Following the 2018 flood, many expressed concerns about how to mitigate risk around this area of the Iowa River. In 2009, city officials called a levee “the best option for providing a long-term benefit to the community,” the DI has previously reported.

Not all opposed the city-backed project on Tuesday. Iowa City Mayor Matt Hayek and Councilor Terry Dickson were the only councilors to vote for the proposed levee.

Hayek said he was satisfied with the city’s staff’s evaluation, which recommended the council move forward with the proposed levee, and thought the levee was consistent with city efforts.

Once again, the cluckers have it

Citizens have one last chance to persuade the Iowa City City Council to allow backyard chickens within city limits at least for now.

City councilors voted 5-2 Tuesday night in the second consideration of an amendment legalizing backyard chickens in city limits. The same vote of a total of six for an amendment that would allow the city’s zoning code to establish a permit process for the chickens.

Much of the debate centered around giving neighbors the right to “ veto” any neighboring chickens, which face moral reactions from the council and community.

“There’s all sorts of things people do make neighbors angry that have nothing to do with chickens,” said Councilor Jim Throgmorton. “There are things people do that make moral reactions from the council and community.

In an attempt to both enrich the lives of University of Iowa students and raise cultural awareness, UI officials are launching a new first-year seminar for the spring 2013 semester.

The seminar, dubbed “Passport Project: Exploring Knowledge,” will engage students by requiring them to attend 12 cultural events offered by the UI. Students can choose from events such as art workshops, dance recitals, political forums, and readings.

Patrick Reed, academic coordinator for the seminar, said students will be exposed to different cultures, themes, and events that are not yet previously been aware of.

“The project aims to introduce them to the wide variety of high quality cultural and scholarly activity happening in the University and in Iowa City,” he said. “It also aims to assist students in exploring other areas of potential or even unexpected interest that are outside their given reality of studies.”

With that comes an increase in bicycle citations, intended to catch riders. Bikers would have to fork over nearly $100 in fines for each violation or face up to a year in jail.

In addition to sparring bikers from the fine, many law enforcement officials said they would use the citations as an educational component as well.

To put this in perspective. This levee is something I think is consistent with long-term flood-mitigation protection strategy that the city has pursued in the past four and a half years," he said.

"If we don't get this levee, we're not going to get the federal grant," he said.

"We should identify alternative uses of [block grant] funds to benefit low- to moderate-income households," he said. "The levee would be an inappropriate use of those funds."

"We have to think about the impact it has on other people in other areas: the minute you put up a levee, it affects other people."

The class will include events, as well as multiple opportunities. It covers the topics of students and help encourage students to pursue lifelong learning opportunities.

The class will include reading of the Iowaans For Life. "Availability of contraceptives actually increases abortion," Logsdon said. DeWitte hopes that the class will have an impact on the number of abortions that have decreased in Iowa. "I would love to believe that the number of abortions have decreased in Iowa," she said. "And that the pre-life movement in there exists something."

"Availability of contraceptives actually increases abortion," Logsdon said. The class will include visiting cultural events as a recurring aspect of the UI.

"We noticed that a lot of students don't show up for these types of events," he said. "By implementing this course, we're trying to promote the enrichment opportunity that these events offer."

The class will include small group discussions regarding the attended events, as well as multiple media reviews and reflections that students will complete during and after the events.

All attendance at cultural events.

Part of the definition of the university is universe," he said. Reed, Logsdon, and Winet all said they felt the seminar can serve a major purpose in the required coursework for UI students.

"It'd be great to have this be a part of the heritage curriculum," Logsdon said.

"Contraceptive isn't the end all be all," she said. "There are other options."

Man’s best friend might be turning into man’s worst enemy at the local mall.

Members of the council are considering an ordinance that would allow dogs on the Ped Mall, as reported by The Daily Iowan.

The council has been considering this issue for some time, as they believe that having dogs on the mall would take away from its character.

The council has also mentioned that the current law is not enforced, and thus the dogs could become even more of an issue.

But Matthew Theobald, co-coordinator of Family to Heart, said that cleaning up after pets is not difficult for people who want to move to the new ordinance. The city偶尔 could become more of an issue. If the law is not enforced, it could be a problem.

Many people do not clean up after their pets and the dogs could become a nuisance, as they could be stepped on by unknowing toddlers.

The city eventually needs to do something about the dogs, as they are not only a nuisance but also a potential hazard.

However, the city currently has no plan, and the Animal Control Department is not sure what they need to do to clean up after the dogs.

Do you think dogs should be allowed on the Ped Mall?

The Iowa City City Council moved forward with an amendment to city regulations regarding taxi companies with several minor taxicab representation.

The council voted 7-0 in favor of the ordinance in its first consideration, which would require cab companies to have a distinct color scheme and label, a distinctive and consistent color scheme.

Amendments have not been made to the ordinance since its first consideration, saying the amendment would be a positive impact.

No decision has been reached on new collaboratively funded organizations, but two student-government bodies would vote again on the Joint Finance Committee's recommendation.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Trey Burke had 18 points and 11 assists, and No. 3 Michigan held off a late rally by No. 18 North Carolina State in a 79-72 victory Tuesday night.

Nik Stauskas led the Wolverines (6-0) with 20 points, and Tim Hardaway Jr. added 16, but Burke controlled the game, equaling his previous career high of 9 assists in the first half and going the whole game without a turnover.

North Carolina State (4-2) trailed 73-58 before going on a 10-0 run capped by T.J. Warren's lay-up with 2:11 remaining. Hardaway answered with a driving lay-up.

It was 75-58 when the Wolfpack forced a turnover and called a timeout with 4:42 to play, but C.J. Leslie was called for a foul on the next possession. Leslie appeared to swing his left arm a bit while backing down against Michigan's Mitch McGary.

N.C. State coach Mark Gottfried was incensed by the call on the sideline.

“Why should Israel respond to the demand that they choose either of these solutions? In fact they need choose neither of these solutions. Instead, they should create a new solution, which is not Israeli and not Palestinian. The reality is, that solution is a two-state solution. These commentators advocate a one-state solution, which is lose and lose and would be in one state, with all inhabitants having the same citizenship, call it Israel or Palestinian. But such a solution, in most places, is unacceptable to the Jewish population...”

Although the ranking system relates to a sport with an emphasis on the national championship — everything else is secondary — the criteria will be to finish as one of the top four teams in the country — there’s a lot of programs not making the preseason rankings in top 25.

While not absolute, all coaches in the NCAA have a top 25 on their mind as they try to attract the best players and maximize the team to achieve their national goals.

One of every three sports dated in the fall, the officials release preseason rankings. In December, the Blue Jays must travel to Minneapolis, where it will face Marquette, and the winner of that game will travel to Oklahoma City for the NCAA Tournament.

Politics aside, the rankings have evolved from a four-game losing streak to a team that is undefeated, and it loses star cornerback Louis Trinca-Pasat and linebacker Steve Bigach
