IC police add city center patrol officer

A grant from the Community Organization Policy Services will help pay for the city's downtown patrol officer position.

By Rebecca Morin

Whether it is a bite to eat or browsing for a new book, Iowa City's downtown and North Marketplaces serve families and students alike. With this in mind, officials note a safe environment is crucial.

With the beginning of a new year, a beginning of a new partnership with the Iowa City police and the Iowa City Downtown District has now established a downtown patrol position for police.

“One of the things we’ve been working on is to make downtown look more attractive and feel safer,” said Nancy Bird, the executive director of Downtown District. This officer will connect with local businesses to help with problems that may occur in the area.

County tones down plan

The cost for the new plan is roughly $3.3 million less than the original plan.

By Anna Theodosios

Proponents of the Johnson County justice center won’t be giving up quite yet. Johnson County officials held a public hearing Tuesday night to discuss the newly revised proposal for the center after an earlier version failed to pass in November 2012. Local residents filled nearly every seat in Courthouse 2A in the Johnson County Courthouse. The referendum in November needed a super majority of 50 percent of the public voting in favor of the center — only 56 percent approved it. But the county Board of Supervisors has come back with a plan that addresses some of the opponents’ concerns, such as price.

“The new bond referendum cost decreased by $3.3 million from a previous cost of $6.8 million,” Johnson County Sheriff Lenny Pulkownik said he thinks some Iowa City residents still do not fully understand the needs of the jail.

“If you want to unclog the jail and reduce the occupancy, you got to consider legitimizing murder, rape, (and) robbery,” he said. “If you want to legitimate those, that’s unreasonable.”

“I oppose any expansion that addresses some of the opponents’ concerns, such as price. We’ve significantly reduced the cost of the project,” he added.

Regents evaluate university presidents

Almost two months after the state Board of Regents’ concern about the performance of University of Iowa President Sally Mason came to light, the regents held regular evaluations of all regent university presidents for one day.

Last month, it was revealed that at a meeting in August, the regents decided not to renew Mason’s contract, and Regents President Craig Lane wrote a letter to Mason that stated her failure to “reframe and reprioritize” her goals for the 2012-13 academic year. Specifically, Lane asked Mason to improve the university’s relationship with the Iowa Legislature and to redirect the focus of evidence from time in prison.

When asked what problems Mason was addressing in the letter to the board, including communication, Lane said it was not work the board had asked her to complete.

“Mason’s performance is not limited to the issues I’ve mentioned,” Lane said. “I think she is a person of high integrity who needs to improve communication with his board members and the state lawmakers.”

Marshall trial reveals new evidence from time in prison.

By Lauren Coffey

Marshall was in the trial of a 20-year-old accused of killing an Iowa City landlord and centered on a yellow legal pad Tuesday. The pad, which was seized by the state, alluded to a memo written by 20-year-old suspect, who was incarcerated and charged in connection with the slaying of John Vanoyept on Oct. 8, 2009. Marshall trial re-started Tuesday morning after ending early on Monday due to the possible unveiling of new evidence.

Iowa City police Officer Michael Smith, who worked on the case and who was assigned to interview Marshall, testified Tuesday. Smith said he approached Antonio Martin — a man who came to know Marshall while serving a sentence for conspiracy to distribute crack cocaine — when he was staying alone in the library at the Muscatine County Jail on Oct. 3, 2011. Martin handed Smithy the yellow legal pad, which contained four pages of unexplained notes from Marshall, Smithy testified.

Smithy said he scanned the pages with a Windex scanner pen and gave them the notes back to Martin. He then asked the state for a search warrant and questioned the man about the release of Charles Thompson, who was then incarcerated and charged with voluntary manslaughter.

Three days later, Smithy said Marshall visited him and told him about the release of Charles Thompson, which Smithy then related to the state and asked about the release of Charles Thompson, which Smithy then related to the state and asked about the release of Charles Thompson, which Smithy then related to the state.

Lawmakers consistently increase the number of adults who use marijuana and other illegal drugs. This is particularly true among young people and those who are dependent on prescription medications. In fact, the use of marijuana and other illegal drugs has increased in recent years, especially among young people. This increase is particularly concerning because of the potential negative effects of these substances on health and well-being.

Six-year-old beats cancer three times

By Cassidy Riley
(319-335-1946)

A 15 percent chance of survival. That is what Lau- ren Ballard’s doctors told her parents after her second relapse in 2011.

At the age of 2, Lauren was diagnosed with Wilms tumor. The tumor started growing in the kidney while the child was still in the womb, and it can spread to other places in the body such as the lungs.

“It was the size of a grape- fruit,” said Sarah Ballard, Lauren’s mother.

After the discovery of the tumor, on March 16, 2009, Lauren underwent chemother- apy to shrink it and then had surgery to remove it two months later. Since then, Lauren, now 6, has undergone chemotherapy, radiation treatment, and a stem-cell transplant. Cur- rently, she is considered to be stable, and she is not un- dergoing any treatment.

“I feel like I’m a totally different person after watching her suffer and going through the grief pro- cess. You treasure your chil- dren more,” said Sarah Ballard.

After diagnosis, Ballard said she is confident in her daughter’s fu- ture because of everything she has overcome.

“I feel very confident just because it’s just kind of miracle that she’s doing so well,” she said. “She just seems like a miracle to me, and I think a miracle has happened.”

Lauren’s father, James Ballard, said he is grateful for the way things are going and that what she has gone through has only added to her and her personality in positive ways.

“We just feel unbelievably lucky that things are going so well,” he said.

Fanny, friend Katie Come and said she and daugh- ter Emilee Coons have tried to be there for Lauren and her family while she was go- ing through treatment.

“I was there for Sarah,” Come said. “Whatever Sarah needed, I tried my very best to do whatever she needed, because I can’t imagine the emotional, physical stress that she was under, and I feel hard for her very hard!”

Coons said the Ballard family would schedule play dates for the girls to help keep Lauren’s spirits up.

“I was so proud and over and over on Lauren’s behalf and ability to have fun no matter what she was dealing with,” she said. “Her personality seemed unaf- fected.”

Lauren’s grandmother, Maxine Ballard, said her experience has made the girl very independent and very strong.

“She doesn’t wait for any- one to fight her battles,” she said. “She’ll fight them her- self.”

While Lauren was an in- patient at the University of Iowa Children’s Hospi- tal, Dance Marathon par- ticipants visited her and helped the family out here- after they could.

“Before I even knew what they were, they were giving you money,” Sarah Ballard said. “I think it’s amazing. It’s the nicest thing I’ve ever seen in my entire life as far as charity.”

The Ballards have been attending Dance Marathon events since 2010, and Lau- ren is very excited about the upcoming Big Event on Friday.

“I’m looking forward to dancing,” Lauren said. “I’m looking forward to all of it.”

At the Big Event, she will sing in the talent show. She is allotted five minutes for her performance, and she hopes to squeeze in all of her favorite songs.

“I have three favorite songs. We’re going to Go on Dancing, ‘Black and Blue Balls,’ and ‘It is Written,’” Lauren said.

Today, she enjoys the er- ratic growth of a typical four-year-old only at a slightly higher height, something she is often seen walking, leaping, and dancing on her toes.

Sarah Ballard said her daughter has made her feel very sensitive, so Lauren tries to keep a smile on her face—something she failed to break now.

“She really enjoys doing things with my hand, that’s the only way she does it,” Sarah Ballard said. “Going to school is exciting to her.”

A group of Iowa City residents met Monday night to discuss the recent approval of a proposed 20-story mixed-use building submitted by the public local developer Marc Meis and others that was approved by the City Council in January.

While the Iowa City Council, in opposition to the Shanow, opposes the development for myriad reasons, including city councilman Ben Espinoza's height — the concern that the group's rather reputation-riding name — and the proposed use of local tax money to partially fund the project. During the debate in the City Council, many opponents of the Shanow spoke out in favor of other proposals they believed to be more cost effective, more environmentally friendly, and more in tune with the needs of the Iowa City community.

Many believe that the council's 5-4 decision to ap-

Hawkeye softball sets some lofty goals

By CODY GOODMAN

Iowa’s head softball coach Marcia Jeter handed the reins over to her players. The expectations wouldn’t be up to her, but she would embrace the challenge of whatever players set out to try to reach.

The goal for this season is merely one more step forward for the Hawkeyes headed into next year. They want a Big Ten title.

“Our goal is to win it,” Iowa head softball coach Marla Looper said on Tuesday evening. “And that was the kids’ goal — not the coaches’.”

Last year, the goal was top-three (in the conference) and the Hawkeyes finished second. And they kicked it into gear when they got into conference play. For us to go on past conference, we have to do a lot better at the beginning of the season, and that starts next week,” the Hawkeyes finished 27-22 overall last season with a 27-22 record in conference play. They return more than seven key players who will help lead this team with experience — most notably, All-Big Ten selection Megan Church and first-team All-Big Ten selection Megan Blank.

The expectation wouldn’t be there on Tuesday at 11 a.m. The Blue Jackets manhandled the Minnesota Wild late in the third period, scoring the go-ahead goal on Tuesday night.

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Mark Letestu and Jack Johnson had goals for the Wild in the game’s first 31 minutes, and the Blue Jackets’ flight to the Twin Cities on Monday evening was merely one more step out to try to reach. The goalie and banked the puck off Minnesota goalie Steve Mason to open the scoring mid-way through the first. Columbus has allowed just 13 goals on the season.

Mikko Koivu and Tom Gilbert also scored for Minnesota. Zach Parise appeared to have the first to make it 2-0. Before the first period ended, Columbus had just five shots through the first seven games and has just 13 goals on the season.

“They’ve bought into our philosophy and bought into how she’d top her historic season,” Looper said. “They’re believing that they can be conference champs. But they know it’s not the coaches. They’re going to have a better chance at taking the championship,” Mason said. “If not mine, then hers.”

The result will likely suit the conference better in terms of who will actually be named the Big Ten champion — Iowa, which finished second last year in the Big Ten standings, never played Michigan, which was crowned with the conference title.

The addition alone ensures that on themselves.”

Blank’s returning bat

All-Big Ten pitcher Blank returns more to the table for the Hawkeyes than just a lofty honors and recognitions. The eight- strong return a team-leading batting average of .390, along with 60 hits and a pair of home-runs. Blank also provided 29 runs batted in and 22 extra-base hits.

Her offensive output earned her more than just a first-team all-conference selection. — Blank was also selected to the second team All-Big Ten equal last season and played in and 22 extra-base hits.

The formidable challenge will likely bring the best out of each Fighting Irish wrestler who steps out against a top-20 team. "The match with Fighting Irish provides a great opportunity to prove they can compete with some of the nation’s best," Dougherty said.

If we come out and play really strong in doubles and singles, and play well at the net and just moving around, Ruth at the back and me in the front, I know we’ll have a shot. That’s part of being a competitor."

Melsahn Basabe could return to the starting lineup this week, but he’s been a key player coming from the bench this year.

This friendly competition that the Hawkeyes have against Penn State has provided an irreplaceable spark off the bench for the men’s swimming team. The freshman ranks second on the team. (Daily Iowan/Sarah Sebetka)

The result of that practice session is that the entire team has “become so strong like a machine,” Ernstsson said. “It’s all about those hundredths and tenths of a second. It’s not as simple as it may appear.”

The marks have improved, with Ernstsson holding his own. The results could be even more impressive, Long said, because of the precision that has improved in practice this week; and he praised the effort Basabe has given, since he’s a small swimmer and can’t out-split people by his 4 and 3-inch build in relief for the freshmen.

Head coach Fran McCaffery on Tuesday acknowledged the possibility of putting Basabe back into the starting lineup. This week’s competition against Penn State is something McCaffery said he would weigh against seeing his team’s performance in practice this week, and he praised the effort Basabe has given, even though he’s not ready to be a starter. You’ve just got to find a balance with the two for your own personal development and that’s what’s been impressive about Basabe, now, because we’re talking about the Hawkeye freestyle swimming coach Marc Long.

“Nick was basically late in the end,” said Marble. “I always focus on the past, and in the past, you had to, because you have a bad game to know that you’re still a good player and you can go out there and show that in the next game. This is an opportunity to rise. You’ve just got to find a balance with the two for your own personal development and that’s what’s been impressive about Basabe, now, because we’re talking about the team. That would be the difference between having a good player and a great player.”

“Now as far as the past performances — both good and bad — may have held Basabe back at times,” Marble said. “I always focus on the past, and in the past, you had to, because you have a bad game to know that you’re still a good player and you can go out there and show that in the next game. Senior all-American Jordan Huff has competition with a freshman who’s on the rise.

This week, the Hawkeyes face the Nittany Lions to face the likes of future NCAA champions, but he has moved up a weight from 184 to 197. The two honors were the same recognition from the Nittany Lions field three future NCAA champions, including their No. 1-ranked David Taylor.

He wants to keep it that way. Last year, he was the Big Ten Freshman Wrestler of the Week, and then-No. 23 Michigan to improve to 16-5 on the season, 6-0 against opponents ranked in the top-25.

Printy was recognized for her play after she averaged 14 points and 6 rebounds while shooting 54 percent from the field. The sophomore guard was 14-35 from the floor, including 4-of-8 from 3-point range.

Iowa guard Jamie Printy was named Big Ten Player of the Week on Tuesday after the Hawkeyes finished 2-0 against Wisconsin and then-No. 23 Michigan to improve to 16-5 on the season, 6-0 against opponents ranked in the top-25.
