Researchers print organs

Researchers from the UI are using the only multi-arm bio printer to research printing organs.

By MICHELLE KIM
hae-deun-kim@uiowa.edu

Soon, patients may no longer need to wait until for donors to secure an organ transplant.

The University of Iowa Mechanical and Industrial Department is conducting research on organ printing, a technology that one day may make it possible to print human tissue and entire organs. The UI is home to the only multi-arm bio printer in the world.

Once organ fabrication is developed, struggling with organ shortages and long waiting lists may be a thing of the past.

Students from five different fields — biology, chemistry, medicine, engineering, and biotechnology — combine their skills.

“Instead of using non-biocompatible materials, we use bio-ink that we can use to print,” said Ibrahim Ozbolat, a UI assistant professor of industrial engineering. “And again, we use the same principles and same strategies when printing living cells.”

Ozbolat said the primary goal for his research at the UI is to manufacture blood-vessel systems.

“The blood-vessel system is crucial because it transports all the [cell growth] media, it transports oxygen, nutrients, ingrowth factors to the cells,” he said. “Making something that is branching into channels is very difficult, and I haven’t seen any research that has a successful result with manufacturing branching tubes.”

Ozbolat also introduced the only multi-arm bio printer, which uses numerous arms that move independently to print different structures.

Howard Chen, a UI graduate student in industrial engineering and the designer of the multi-arm bio printer, said it took him about a semester to get it from conception to actually manufacturing.

Howard said he considers organ printing as a subset in the tissue-engineering field because the research itself uses tissues and reconstructs them.

The researchers at the UI use the patient’s own cell to make new organs that are more biocompatible with the patient’s body.

With this process, it will make it much easier to treat patients and reduce the number of patient deaths as well.

Organ printing works through rapid prototyping, technology to print cells, biomaterials, and cell-laden biomateri-

SEATS tiff continues

Johnson County and city officials are still at odds over funding for the para-transit SEATS service.

By QUENTIN MISIAG
quentin-misiag@uiowa.edu

A hand-delivered letter to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors seems to have local municipalities and county officials further divided over the future of the SEATS para-transit program.

The three-page letter, issued by the officials from Iowa City, North Liberty, and Coralville, concedes that although para-transit ridership and costs have risen, they are nowhere near the level that supervisors have publicly expressed.

Sullivan

City officials also outlined the importance of moving forward with “... intergovernmental matters cooperatively in a civil and productive fashion that will yield the most efficient and responsible services for our citizens.”

SEATS has provided door-to-door rides since the 1970s to individuals with disabilities, senior citizens, and other people in need of assistance accessing medical clinics, grocery stores, and other destinations.

Johnson County officials have proposed cutting the general levy funding for SEATS, in turn placing much of the cost burden on Iowa City.

In a supervisors’ meeting Thursday, Supervisors Janelle Rettig and Rod Sullivan criticized city officials for a lack of communication regarding cuts to SEATS funding.

“They were completely unresponsive until our budget meeting last night,” Rettig said. “It is a three-page letter that says nothing about the [SEATS] contract. In September, we told them there would be no subsidy [funding] for SEATS. Whatever [Iowa City Mayor] Matt Hayek said last

Lab looks ahead

The State Hygienic Laboratory wants to improve relations with students, UI Research Park businesses, and Kirkwood Community College.

By QUENTIN MISIAG
quentin-misiag@uiowa.edu

In light of a recent announcement by University of Iowa President Sally Mason for expansion of funding for the State Hygienic Laboratory, a group of proponents gathered Thursday evening at the Hardin Library to discuss the past, present, and future of the lab. Officials have hopes for an improved facility.

Mason went before the Iowa Legislature’s education appropriation subcommittee on Feb. 12, focusing on the university budget for fiscal 2014, including allocations for the lab.

Since state cuts in 2009, the lab has been forced to reduce the equivalent of 32-full-time positions and freeze equipment replacement in the facility.

Lab Director Christopher Atchison said the facility now has its sights set on improving relations with area students, UI Research Park businesses, and Kirkwood Community College, pending the completion of a $900,000 fundraising initiative.

“What we’ve tried to do is position this laboratory in its new facility to be more contributory to both the academic responsibilities for the university and its research commitments,” he said. “We want to have young people come through and see research in action. We’re in an era now where information technology is allowing us to be far more sophisticated in understanding environmental influ-

Cuts may hit farmers

Sequestration could cut the overall budget for farm programs by 5 percent.

By BRIANNA JETT

As sequestration looms, the farming community is anticipating uncertainty.

The automatic national spending cuts begin today. Although officials agree that it will definitely affect agriculture, they aren’t sure how it will play out.

“We’re not entirely sure,” said Dale Moore, the public-policy director for the

Caucus gears up for lobbying

The state Board of Regents approved a tuition freeze at their December meeting.

By JONATHAN SOLIS
jonathan-solis@uiowa.edu

Tuition for an in-state, undergraduate student was $145 per semester fifty years ago. Today, the same type of student can expect to pay $6,678 for base tuition per semester at the University of Iowa.

Members of the Hawkeye Caucus are resolute to keep tuition steady at current rates for at least two more years. On April 2, students will lobby in the capital to extend the tuition freeze beyond the 2013-14 academic year — Hawkeye Caucus' sole goal for this year's lobbying efforts.

"We're focusing on the tuition freeze because Iowa students are graduating with some of the highest debt amounts in the country, and they don't need any more money added to their debt," said Andrew Bates, the president of Hawkeye Caucus.

According to UI financial-aid officials, the average student debt was $26,296 for the class of 2012. Fifty-nine percent of the class graduated with debt.

The state Board of Regents voted in December to approve a tuition freeze for the 2013-14 academic year. The freeze applies only to in-state undergraduate students. They would continue to pay $6,678 for base tuition, while out-of-state and all graduate students would see a 2.6 percent increase in base tuition.

The Hawkeye Caucus revamped its recruiting efforts in the last week with the help of the UI Student Government.

Together, they are sending emails to students across campus and setting up tables in such places as the IMU urging students to send emails to their state senators and representatives.

"I think those small increases can really affect students, and I think we can tackle this piece to keep the price steady for the next couple of years," said Katherine Valde, the UISG government-relations liaison.

Additionally, the groups have appealed to College Republicans, College Democrats, and groups such as the Campus Activities Board to persuade as many people as possible to attend Hawkeye Caucus Day and support their efforts.

"We do support the caucus, and in fact we have quite a few members who are involved," said Quentin Marquez, vice president of the UI Republicans. "Republicans are paying for college, too."

Between now and caucus day, the groups hope to recruit a couple dozen more students, for a total of 100 students to attend, Bates said. They expect to bring somewhere between 40 and 60 undergraduates and about 50 graduate students.

Sen. Joni Ernst, R-Red Oak, who sits on the Education Committee, said the issue hasn't been fully explored yet.

"I'd have to see what that impact is, but I can say I don't want to see students' tuition to go up," she said.

Sen. Joe Bolkcom, D-Iowa City, said he fully supports the tuition freeze.

In general, the tuition freeze has support from regents, students, and UI President Sally Mason, who was quoted as saying she'd support the freeze for as long as she's president. However, the freeze did receive some opposition from the University of Northern Iowa's student government last fall.

In order to offset inflation, the proposed plan is to appropriate a 2.6 percent increase in funding from the state, which would allow the tuition to remain the same. It would be the first time since the 1980-81 school year.

Gov. Terry Branstad's budget proposal for fiscal 2014 includes the needed funds to allow regents to implement the tuition freeze.

"We're very hopeful that the tuition freeze will go through for next year," Bates said. "But we're going to still keep trying our hardest."

Peeping trial reset

The trail has been reset for an Iowa City landlord accused of allegedly spying on female tenants.

Elwyn Miller, 63, is charged with 11 counts of invasion of privacy. He allegedly peeped at female residents through manufactured holes in the walls and ceilings of female residents' bathrooms.

According to a police complaint during the initial investigation, Miller allegedly peeped at girls while they were in the shower through holes in the ceiling next to the vent fan. In an interview with police he also allegedly stated that he had looked at female residents at least two or three times during their time in the apartments and went to the peepholes at least once a week.

Miller's trial had been previously set for March 12 at 9 a.m., according to online court documents. His trial is now set for April 9 at 9 a.m., with a pretrial conference set for March 25.

Man victim of hit-and-run

A local man was apparently the victim of a hit-and-run accident by a newer model maroon car Wednesday afternoon.

At 12:18 p.m., Iowa City police responded to a report that a pedestrian had been struck by a car at the intersection of Wayne Avenue and Arthur Street.

Upon arrival, police officers learned that a passerby located an injured 20-year-old male at the intersection where he had been reportedly hit. The victim declined medical treatment and reported that he was crossing the street when he was hit by a newer model maroon car that was being operated by a young white male. The driver did not stop after he hit the pedestrian and had still not been identified on Thursday evening.

Council to ponder levee

The Iowa City City Council will mull a resolution allowing the city to move forward with the West Side Levee Project.

The project includes the construction of an earthen levee, riverbank stabilization, and interior storm drainage improvements, extending approximately 3,000 linear feet along the western bank of the Iowa River from the CRANDIC

Railroad Bridge to McCollister Boulevard.

The estimated cost of construction is $5,563,000 and will be funded with Community Development Block Grants.

Woman charged with arson

A North Liberty woman was arrested after allegedly setting fire to a mini-fridge.

Melissa Despain, 43, was charged Feb. 21 with third-degree arson.

North Liberty police officers responded to Despain's residence after a report of the odor of smoke in her home. She reportedly told officers she believed there was a fire in her residence. Police official located the fire in Despain's garage on top of a mini-fridge.

After North Liberty firefighters conducted an investigation, they determined the fire was set intentionally through the ignition of a container of Neatsfoot oil that was set on top of the mini-fridge. Despain was the only one present at the residence during the time the fire started, the police complaint said.

Third-degree arson is an aggravated misdemeanor.

Iowa high-schoolers share STEM research

By REBECCA MORIN
rebecca-morin@uiowa.edu

Sarah Kunch has spent time researching many major topics, such as heart-rate variability in babies with diseases and carbon content in soils and how they contribute to global warming.

However, she has had to juggle her research with the normal demands of a high school student.

The Fort Madison senior's love for science and research brought her to the University of Iowa on Thursday, where she formally presented her project to the 2013 Iowa Regional Junior Science and Humanities Symposium.

"I have no idea where I am taking my scientific research, but I know I will continue with it," Kunch said.

The annual STEM symposium is coordinated by the UI Belin-Blank Center, which brings together the brightest high-school students in the state to discuss their passions and research.

Gov. Terry Branstad implemented the Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics — or STEM — initiative in 2011.

"The U.S. aspired to dramatically improve achievement in science, technology, engineering, and mathematics," said Jeffrey Weld, the executive director of Iowa Governor's STEM Advisory Council.

Iowa is not alone in its pursuit of STEM-based education. Weld said 42 states currently have STEM initiatives in place.

There are six hubs, or regions, in Iowa, and each has its own programs.

Michaela Wheatley discusses her Glyphosate & the Colonization of Fusarium Oxysporum experiment at the Sheraton Hotel on Thursday. (The Daily Iowan/Joshua Housing)

Last summer, 12 programs spawned statewide, which were scaled up from programs that had existed locally in the hubs.

"There is a new robotics club, energy-education workshops, a computer-program competition that allows students to develop cyber defense programs, and at the UI, there is a health-occupations program that connects professors with kids in Iowa to do research," Weld said.

With technology as an increasingly important global asset, many countries are competing to be No. 1, including the United States.

"I think the world is becoming more competitive, and that means we have to have a good education, especially in [STEM]," said UI physics/astronomy Professor Donald Gurnett, the keynote presenter at the symposium.

Topics discussed ranged from binary-error correction to the psychology of music.

"The symposium is for high-ability students, most of whom were discovered by a talent search," said

Rachelle Rich, a secretary at the Belin-Blank Center. "They are brought together to bring the work they do and share it with individuals who feel the same and share their interests."

During the day, students also toured science and math labs around campus. The idea is to nurture interest in youth who will continue their interest in STEM programs and careers.

"If you don't reach out to the students, they won't develop their talent area," said Susan Assouline, the director of Belin-Blank Center.

Developing skills can affect students' future immensely, officials said, whether they are developing ideas or buying products classmates develop.

"Reasons for the goal are obvious, STEM courses and majors lead to careers that our overall integral states economic future as well as quality lives," he said. "Regardless of kids work in STEM careers, they are consumers, and STEM careers create many products that everyone buys."

Iowa climbs in health ranking

Iowa is now a few steps closer to being the healthiest state in the nation.

Iowa is ranked the ninth-healthiest state in the nation, according to 2012 data from Gallup-Healthways Well-Being. Iowa was No. 16 in 2011.

The jump shows progress toward Gov. Terry Branstad's Healthiest State Initiative, which aims at reducing obesity and making Iowa the healthiest state in the nation by 2016.

"This ranking proves our efforts are working. We jumped seven spots in an effort we began less than two years ago. I want to ... encourage the people of this state to continue their great progress," Branstad said in a release.

Part of Madison St. to close

Portions of Madison Street between Court and Burlington Streets will be closed beginning March 6 as part of a University of Iowa utility construction project.

The northbound lanes will be closed through April 17. One southbound lane will remain open, as well as the Campus Recreation & Wellness Center drop-off zone, and the northeast and southeast building entrances on Madison Street, according to a UI press release.

Drivers will take a detour east on Court Street, then north on Clinton Street. The sidewalk on the east side of Madison Street will be closed to pedestrian traffic.

WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT PENDING SEX-OFFENDER LEGISLATION?
Read today's column, and email us at:
daily.iowan.letters@gmail.com

EDITORIAL

Pending sex-offender bill a sensible solution

The Iowa Legislature is considering a bill that would require nursing-home staff to inform resident applicants and their families of any sex offenders living in the facility. It would also create facilities in the short-term to house sex offenders who were recently released from prison while a commission advises the Legislature on potential long-term solutions.

This comes after a convicted sex offender was released from prison and ordered by the court to stay at a nursing home. He/she later committed sexual assault on one of the other patients.

The Daily Iowan Editorial Board strongly encourages the Legislature to approve this bill.

At first, it seems like this may be an invasion of privacy for sex offenders. However, in light of the online Iowa Sex Offender Registry, which includes a map of where every registered sex offender in the state lives, pictures, names, addresses, and even more information, this bill isn't particularly invasive.

Terry Cowman, an Iowa Department of Corrections special agent in charge of the Sex Offender Registry, said in an interview with The Daily Iowan there were 5,821 registered sex offenders in Iowa at the end of January.

House File 53, the pending bill, could choose to use a state or private facility to house sex offenders who need special care, like elderly, after their stay in prison, said the Department of Human Services.

"The Department of Human Services may use a state facility to provide care for such persons or may conduct a request for proposal process to contract with a private facility to care for such persons," House File 53 states.

University of Iowa Law Professor Josephine Gittler said the measures proposed in the Legislature are similar to what neighboring states are considering. The priority, she said, should be to protect nursing-home residents, and the bill accomplishes that.

"This bill is a sensible and reasonable approach to the problem posed by the placement of persons with a history of sex offenses in nursing facilities," Gittler said.

It's also important to consider whose rights take priority in this case. Is it more essential that we protect the privacy of convicted criminals or the safety of primarily elderly patients?

Residents are living in nursing facilities for a reason: They're vulnerable. Most of them aren't in positions to defend themselves from sexual assault. Some can't speak, lack control of their bodily functions, and suffer from countless other dysfunctions. It is simply inhumane to put some of society's most vulnerable residents at risk even if the rate at which this reportedly occurs is quite low. Our society wouldn't dare place infants in such a position, so it follows that nursing-home residents, some of whom are just as defenseless, must not be left unprotected.

One of the bill's supporters, Rep. Bruce Hunter, D-Des Moines, said that although patients are rarely victims of sexual assault in nursing homes, "even if it happens once more and the state doesn't do anything to stop it, the state is culpable."

Andy Maas, an administrator at Briarwood Health Care Center, 605 Greenwood Drive, agreed that a solution is necessary. He said his facility and virtually all others with which he is familiar wouldn't risk accepting sex offenders under almost any circumstances. Maas said he supported keeping sex offenders in separate facilities, which the pending legislation proposes, as the best solution.

These measures aren't just for the sake of protecting noncriminal residents from potential sexual abuse. They're also necessary to care for sex offenders who may not be able to gain admission into a standard nursing home.

The moral and legal circumstances make the decision absolutely clear. It is imperative that the Legislature pass this bill for the safety of Iowa residents housed in long-term health-care facilities.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Heroes of human rights

It is no stretch of the truth that had not a small but intrepid band of young human-rights activists determined in the early fall semester to speak truth to power, and thereby inspire others to do the same, there would be no University of Iowa Center for Human Rights in existence as of July 1. To Zach Heffernan, Marisa Way, David Lam-Lu, Matthew Noftsgar, Thomas Langer, Libby Miller, Michelle Gin, and others — you are the real heroes of this story.

But by late October, Heffernan and his fellow travelers launched a campaign that would fundamentally change the political calculus. Their cause was arguably a fool's errand, but their political sensibilities were acute, their operation disciplined, and their hearts passionate and determined.

To quote Heffernan's second-in-command, Way: "We're not gonna go down without a fight." Heffernan founded UI Students for Human Rights and proceeded to run it in a way that would make his professors proud.

In 2012, not only did UI Students for Human Rights step up to act as the university's moral compass in articulating the basic duty of the institution to offer meaningful human-rights education, the members also forcibly reaffirmed, through example, one of the most basic prerogatives of citizens in a democratic society — the responsible and effective exercise of First Amendment rights. In the process, a number of students have found their calling in careers related to human-rights advocacy, teaching, and research.

In an odd way, the attempted closure of the Human Rights

Center was the most effective measure that UI central administration could possibly have taken to both strengthen human-rights education and swell the ranks of future human-rights lawyers and activists. But it is to Heffernan and his crew, who by example inspired us all, that we can ascribe the most critically central role in not only saving, but entrenching human rights education on this campus.

Leave Affleck out of it

By ZACH TILLY
zachary-tilly@uiowa.edu

Something you should know about me: If you step to Ben Affleck, you step to me.

That's why Ben Ross's column that ran on this page on Tuesday upset me so much. Ross, whom I do not know personally, was unhappy with the Academy's decision to award the Best Picture Oscar to Argo, directed by one Ben Affleck.

Here is an excerpt from Ross's brutal ad hominem attack against Argo and its creator:

"That Ben Affleck, the once-lovable screw up from Dazed and Confused got to stroll on stage with his pseudo-intellectual facial hair and accept the Oscar for best film made me swell deep in the wallows of my gut."

The snobbery disgusts me. Affleck's is a story of redemption; he's an American hero. To suggest that he was somehow personally unworthy of his Oscar is absurd.

Chances are you first encountered Affleck jogging up Matt Damon's driveway in a tracksuit in Good Will Hunting. After that — late-90s, early '00s — he was hot. Armageddon, Shakespeare in Love, Pearl Harbor. He played Jack Ryan in The Sum of All Fears.

Then came the lean times — the Bennifer I era. Affleck met Jennifer Lopez in 2002 and promptly rattled off five stinkers in two years. Daredevil, Gigli, Paycheck, Surviving Christmas, Jersey Girl.

(Lopez and Affleck clearly brought out the worst in each other. Another product of the Bennifer I era was "Jenny from the Block.")

It was during Bennifer I that first crossed paths with Ben Affleck. When I was 12 years old, I saw Daredevil on an airplane. I hated it; it's a ridiculous, horrible movie.

Mid-decade, Affleck's career was tanking. Nobody (nobody) comes back from a string of crap like that; just ask Josh Hartnett.

But Affleck did. He ditched J.Lo in 2004 and married Jennifer Garner in 2005 — so began the Bennifer II era. He started to right the ship. He did a little acting — Hollywoodland, Smokin' Aces — and took up directing. In 2007 he made his directorial debut with Gone Baby Gone, a movie that is unquestionably tremendous.

I began to consider that maybe there was more to Affleck than Daredevil.

Then he made The Town, which was good but not great. Then he made Argo.

Last Sunday at the Oscars, Affleck was re-deemed.

Remember in Skyfall when Javier Bardem (looking like one of the Golden Girls) asks James Bond what his hobby is and Bond says: "Resurrection"?

That's Ben Affleck. He deserves every award he gets.

Now, let's turn to Argo itself for a moment. In his column Tuesday, Ross asserted that Argo was not good enough to merit its Best Picture win. I respectfully disagree.

Argo is a flawlessly executed thriller that's tense throughout and gets more laughs than you'd expect, mostly thanks to Alan Arkin's turn as a profane Hollywood executive.

Ross derided Argo as predictable; it's a fair point, but I would suggest that Argo is predictable in the sense that Lincoln and Zero Dark Thirty are predictable. Yes, you know that the hostages get out of Iran, just as you know that Lincoln frees the slaves and Seal Team Six kills bin Laden. Just like you know Mike ErUZIONE and Kurt Russell beat the Soviets in Miracle.

The core of each movie isn't the predictable outcome but the story of how the characters get there. In Argo, the story moves at an exciting clip thanks to Affleck's knack for suspense. Think of the scene when the film crew visits the Grand Bazaar or the climactic sequence in the Tehran airport. Sweaty palms, man.

The genius of Argo isn't in its characters or its acting; the genius of Argo is its pacing. Affleck gradually builds and releases tension so that when that final tension breaks and the characters are safely on their way to Zurich, you feel safe, too. You feel like you've survived an ordeal.

Affleck achieved something really cool with Argo; he made a thriller that actually thrills.

Mr. Ross, I understand your unhappiness with the Academy — I have felt it myself. The dual snubbing of Moonrise Kingdom for Best Picture and Kathryn Bigelow for Best Director for Zero Dark Thirty infuriated me. The King's Speech over a stacked field of Best Picture nominees in 2010? Outrageous.

But I think your disdain for Argo is misguided. It's a great movie that deserved the award just as much as Zero Dark Thirty (my personal favorite of the year) or Lincoln.

If you must continue speaking ill of Argo, however, I will understand. Just leave Affleck out of it. ■

Women's suffrage celebration hits Iowa

The anniversary of a women's suffrage parade prompts discussion.

By MANDI CAROZZA
mandi-carozza@uiowa.edu

As the 100th anniversary of the 1913 women's suffrage parade nears, Republicans and Democrats reflect on what has and what still should be done in the name of women's rights.

Both parties said there are still improvements to make since the 1913 march in Washington, D.C., an event that was instrumental in gaining women's right to vote.

Sharon Day, co-head of the Republican National Committee, said women were beaten, tripped, and institutionalized for marching in the 1913 parade, and it is important to remember what the demonstrators did for women today.

"We need to celebrate that," she said on Thursday, standing in front of flags reading, "You Go Girls" and "Women's Strength."

The Johnson County Republicans hosted the event at hotelVetro on Thursday afternoon to celebrate the anniversary.

The Republicans advertised the event as a nonpartisan celebration. One local Democrat says the Republicans should be doing more to advocate for women's rights.

"It's good that the Republicans are celebrating this event with words," said Dennis Roseman, the former head of the Johnson County Democrats. "I wish they would celebrate it as much with actions."

Mary Kate Knorr, the head of the UI College Republicans and a former Daily Iowan employee, said the Republican Party has always supported equality.

women's suffrage, but it's time to move on from this and focus on true issues like jobs, debt, and unemployment," Knorr said.

Johnson County Supervisor Janelle Rettig, a Democrat, said society has made progress but discrimination against women still exists.

"People forget that our country hasn't stopped judging people based on our characteristics," she said. "We're just now starting to stop judging human beings based on their gender."

While the majority of political leaders in Johnson County are not women, Roseman said, the number of women in national government is growing.

"One of the biggest changes has been the role women played and continue to play in national government," he said. "We have a growing number of women as senators ... and it's really quite impressive."

Rettig said women have advanced in the past 100 years but cannot stop now.

"I think we forget that our history in this is short," she said. "We cannot rest on our laurels."

Iowa's sex-offender bill draws scrutiny

One pending bill has prompted discussion of specialized elderly care facilities for sex offenders.

By MANDI CAROZZA
mandi-carozza@uiowa.edu

The introduction last month of a bill that would combat sexual abuse in nursing homes has sparked conversation of creating elderly care facilities specifically for sex offenders.

The bill, which is currently pending in the Iowa Legislature, would put the Iowa Department of Human Services in charge of placing sex offenders in proper care facilities.

Rick Shults, the administrator of the Mental Health and Disability Services Division at Iowa Department of Human Services, said he is neutral on the bill.

"It does give the department responsibilities that we will have to follow up on," he said. "Should registered sex offenders need a level of care described on the bill ... that would fall to us to make services available to them."

Andy Maas, the administrator at Briarwood Health Care Center, 605 Greenwood Drive in Iowa City, said he supports the idea of a separate facility for sex offenders.

"There are some people out there who just seem to fall between the cracks," he said. "They aren't appropriate for a nursing-care facility or a dementia unit."

And in an effort to keep residents safe, Maas said, he would not admit a registered sex offender to his elderly care facility.

"As a facility, we are always trying to protect every resident in the facility from harm," he said.

Not only would this change affect local elderly care facilities, it would also affect registered sex offenders in Johnson County.

Lt. Raquel Wray of the Johnson County Sheriff's Office said the department currently monitors 103 sex-offender registrants.

At the end of January, 5,821 registered sex offenders lived in Iowa, said Terry Cowman, Iowa Department of Corrections special agent in charge of the state's Sex Offender Registry.

Elderly sex-offender registrants who require special care could end up in housing provided by the state.

The pending bill, House File 53, said the Department of Human Services could choose to use a state or private facility to house sex offenders who need special care after serving time in prison.

According to the bill, "the Department of Human Services may use a state facility to provide care for such persons or may conduct a request for proposal process to contract with a private facility to care for such persons."

Shults said specialized facilities would create a divide between sex offenders and the public.

A pending bill raised talk of specialized elderly care facilities for sex offenders.

"It would have to be a nursing facility that would be specifically designed to serve individuals that are on the Sex Offender Registry so that they are not living with people from the general public," he said.

Currently, no such specialized institution exists in Iowa, and while there has been talk of creating a facility specially catered to elderly sex offenders in the past, no money has been allocated to fund it.

Another key aspect of the bill would require Iowa nursing-care facilities to inform residents if a sex offender lives at the facility.

"What the bill envisions is that the nursing facility would have to notify residents and ensure their safety if they served a sex offender," Shults said.

als either individually or together, which creates a three dimensional tissue-like structure.

Rapid prototyping is a process that manufactures layers, starting from the bottom towards the top, and creates a structure in between. This technique has been around since the early 1990s and has been used in different fields.

In the field of art, Mark

Ginsberg, an art dealer and owner of M. C. Ginsberg, 110 E. Washington St., uses 3D prototyping skills to make pieces of art of models of deadly pathogens, such as HIV, influenza, and more.

"It's exciting to be able to look at every element on this planet, inanimate and animate, and think of what would it look like large?" Ginsberg said. "It's the idea of creating something that you wouldn't normally think about wearing and you would think about not necessarily being beautiful, but it is."

One researcher says the organ printing technology is more specialized.

"Organ printing is more specific than bio-printing," said Yin Yu, a graduate student in biomedical engineering. "We're specifically building parts instead of simply a cell. The most important part is that we want to make it into both tissue and organ, not just making cells."

Though, as being a young field, there are some difficulties.

"It's still a very new field," Chen said. "So there's a lot fewer researchers and a lot less we can rely on. It's a more challenging air."

Organ Printing

The UI Mechanical and Industrial Department is conducting research on organ printing.

- People would no longer need to wait for organs to be transplanted.
- The technique for organ printing takes advantage of rapid prototyping.
- The multi-arm bio printer only exists at the UI.

ences and human health effects."

Once the remaining funding has been secured, Atchison said the goal is to finish portions of the building's lower level, adding a 150-seat auditorium, biological and chemical wet labs, and upgraded video-conferencing equipment.

He said the UI is currently in discussions with Kirkwood and businesses in the Research Park in a partnership that would allow students to take advantage of the facility's offerings. To date, a $560,000 grant from the Carver Trust has been secured for a $2.2 million project.

Kathy Fait, a UI librarian and historian, emphasized the long-standing history of the Hygienic Lab. She pointed to its role as a facility that hired female workers in the early 1900s to aid in the treatment of rabies, tuberculosis, and diphtheria.

Today, the lab is responsible for testing newborns in all 99 state counties, and nearly 20,000 in North Dakota and South Dakota combined.

"The State Hygienic Lab has always been more than a testing lab," she said. "It's been an educational lab."

Pat Blake, the lab's public-information officer, said that although the facility has moved into a number of locations since its inception at the UI Biology Building in 1904, its mission has remained the same.

This year, it will celebrate a number of nationwide accomplishments, most notably the 50-year anniversary of newborn screening.

"From a few drops of blood from a newborn, we can now detect more than 50 conditions," she said. "If they were undetected, it could result in comas, severe developmental delays, and even death. Whether you're tested for influenza or if you're wondering what the quality of your well water is, or if a new baby is born into a family, we do all of this and much, much more."

SEATS

night didn't make mathematical sense to me."

Along with criticizing city officials, Sullivan attacked local media outlets for misconstruing the county's side of the story.

"There's a bigger picture here [that the cities and media] act like doesn't exist," he said. "They did a nice job of quoting Iowa City but not us. They continue to print the thoughts of the mayor of Iowa City. I just wish that concern over SEATS would spill over into the big picture."

Although calls to Hayek were not returned as of Thursday evening, Iowa City City Councilor Jim Throgmorton said it's extremely important to provide high-quality para-transit service to disabled individuals who need it.

"We have to focus on the problem that we share and try and solve it in a mutually satisfactory way," he said. "Iowa City has good reasons to believe the county should continue to provide financial support."

North Liberty Mayor Tom Salm said although his municipality only averages 15 SEATS rides per month, he believes North Liberty will continue to gain prominence in local politics as the population grows. He defended Coralville and Iowa City officials in their stance on para-transit funding.

"[City officials] just think the supervisors have gone a little overboard with funding," he said. "We don't have a lot of skin in the game yet, but someday we will ... The cities are willing to have some increases but they think that the increases that the county is proposing is too high."

Coralville Mayor Jim Fausett said he is unaware of prior attempts by the county to contact the city because he hasn't been previously involved. Although he is confident in a strong para-transit service continuing, he believes the county should still be able to allocate funding for SEATS.

"I just think it's entirely up to the supervisors to set their priorities and allocate their funding," he said. "I do, however, think they should be able to allocate funding to where they have provided funding in the past. I don't think it's right for public officials to put this on the shoulders of the users."

CUTS

American Farm Bureau Federation. "We know that it is going to have impact."

Moore said sequestration would entail a 5 percent cut in overall budget for farm programs.

"It's like watching one of those daredevil stunt shows where so much is going on that it is hard to keep track of the action," Moore said. "Somewhere in the middle of this process, we remain hopeful that someone is trying to figure out what is going on."

One local farmer is bracing for how the cuts might affect certain producers.

"Overall, I think that the impact of sequestering will likely be gradual, which is why I believe that we didn't see congressmen meeting late into the evening on the eve of the sequester," said local farmer Jim Dane, owner of Haldane Farm near Iowa City. "I think that the local farmers, like everyone, will adapt. My main concern among farmers is the impact on the dairy producers, but I'm not sure of the immediate impact."

Dane said the sequestration could immediately affect milk prices.

"The milk check might be smaller for dairy farmers almost immediately," he said. "This is a guess, but that's my inclination."

And with an already unsteady market, Dane is wary of more change.

"With such high feed prices for corn, soybean meal, and especially hay, it would be very difficult to make ends meet if the milk income dips even a little bit," he said.

Dave Warner, the director of communications for the National Pork Producers Council, is worried that sequestration might mean a furlough of Food Safety Inspection Service workers.

"It could affect pork producers if they are unable to send pigs to the packing plant," he said.

However, the nature of the possible furlough is also uncertain.

"Initially, USDA said meat inspectors could be furloughed for 'up to 15 days,'" Warner said. "Certainly, there would be a huge problem if all inspectors across the country were furloughed for that long at the same time. But that's not likely to happen. It's more likely that inspectors could be furloughed for a day or two at a time and on a rotating basis."

Dane is also worried about the implications of a possible furlough.

"I suspect that meat prices for the consumer will rise, because demand will continue while available meat is reduced," he said.

Even with confusion surrounding sequestration, the American Farm Bureau Federation supports the option.

"Farm Bureau policy does support sequestration as a federal budget tool, but it is not our preferred option," Moore said.

Men's tennis faces tough Illini challenge

By DOMINICK WHITE
dominick-white@uiowa.edu

Tonight's dual with Illinois marks the beginning of the Big Ten season. Iowa will take on its second ranked opponent in as many matches — Illinois goes into tonight's match ranked 17th in the country.

After falling to the No. 27 Drake Bulldogs on Wednesday evening, the Hawkeyes will be on the road for the first time this season. However, being the visitors tonight won't faze the Hawkeyes.

"We just have to go out there and play our own game," Iowa junior Michael Swank said. "The mentality going into a road meet isn't much different. We know that we have to hit our shots and make plays."

The Fighting Illini have been on a hot streak over the past month. On Feb. 1, Illinois took down Duke—the No. 5 team in the nation at the time. On Feb. 9, the Fighting Illini pulled off another impressive win against No. 7 Kentucky. Regardless of Illinois' early season success, the Hawkeyes know they have enough to pull off the upset.

"The fact that we played a close match against Drake shows us that we can handle Illinois," Iowa junior Jonas Dierckx said. "It gives us confidence and belief that we can beat them."

Illinois has a deep team that features a lot of young talent. The Illini figure to be one of the top teams in the Big Ten this season despite an early 4-3 record. All of Illinois' losses have come against teams ranked in the top 20.

Illinois has a trio of ranked underclassmen. Jared Hiltzik is one of the best freshmen in college tennis. At the moment, he is ranked No. 37 in the country. He is 5-1 so far this season, and he's beaten three ranked opponents. Sophomore Ross Guignon is listed as the No. 118 ranked player in the country. He has a 3-1 singles record this year, and he plays alongside Tim Kopinski in doubles.

Kopinski is another one of Illinois' touted freshmen. He is ranked No. 113, and he is the reigning Big Ten Player of the Week. Even though he's a freshman, he doesn't shy away from the big stage. On Feb. 9, he won the meet-clinching match against Kentucky to secure an upset victory for the Illini.

Getting off to a strong start tonight will be crucial for the Hawkeyes. Iowa has been successful in doubles play early on, while Illinois has faltered. Iowa has won seven out of eight doubles points this year — Illinois has lost six of seven. The Hawkeyes have an opportunity to jump out to an early lead tonight.

"Illinois is a perennial power in the Big Ten," Iowa head coach Steve Houghton said. "We've played them tough a couple of times over the years. Even with the loss on Wednesday, I think our team is starting to believe that they can compete with really good teams."

Ask a Ledge Guy:

Question: “Ledge Guy, my friends invited me to start playing D&D with them. Is this a good idea?”

Answer: No, and I'll give you an example why. Let's say you show up to your friend's basement (just guessing), start playing Dungeons & Dragons, and actually like it. Understandable. The allure of cheap delivery pizza, lukewarm Mountain Dew, and a rainbow-palette of slightly stale junk food often proves overwhelming. Suddenly, it's D&D every Wednesday. Your character starts out first-level, advances to second, and maybe even reaches third-level within a month. But then your advancement slows down, so you add a second night of D&D each week to satiate your fictional bloodlust. Pretty soon, every session, you're playing as four separate characters (each with a miniature, which you painted), as well as Dungeon Mastering your own games on the weekend. But still, it's not enough. You become an EXP junkie whose standing games become his only dates, so you take the plunge and start logging-in to World of Warcraft during your “free time” (you know, what you once called the “workday”) just to take the edge off.

Before you know it, you're reading Robert Jordan fantasy novels on the toilet, drinking five Amp energy drinks every day, playing Pokémon Black 2 on your Nintendo DS with a tightened belt around your neck, and writing freelance Ledges on the side just to scrape together enough bread to buy your next Monster Manual. I've seen it happen at least 3d8+5 times.

Long answer short: You can't run from your demons by chasing dragons, pal.

Quitting isn't easy, either; climbing out from those Nine Hells of Baator takes a whole lot more than 12 Steps. Besides, Warhammer Fantasy Roleplay 2.0 was a superior system, with fewer dice and a gentler learning curve.

horoscopes

Friday, March 1, 2013 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Listen carefully, and avoid being sanctimonious. It's best to do your own thing and allow others the same privilege. At the end of the day, you have to feel good about what you accomplished, not what everyone else has done.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's what you offer to do that will separate you from others. Don't let someone limit or interfere in your life or with your work. Make it clear what your goal is and how you are going to proceed.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) False information or confusing signals will lead you down a difficult path. If you aren't sure what's being asked of you, question your motives and those of the person you are dealing with.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Stop dreaming, and start doing. You have some wonderful ideas that must be implemented if you want to get ahead. Discover what you are capable of doing by presenting what you have to offer to friends, family, and clients.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Fix up your home, or nurture an important relationship. Set aside funds to make domestic changes that will alter your life. A move, trip, or involvement with an unusual group or lifestyle will enlighten you and your future.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Make plans to get together with friends, family, or take part in a community event. The people you meet and the exchanges you make with interesting people will shape the way you do things in the future. Love is on the rise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Finish work before you decide to take off on an adventure. Attending a reunion or visiting a place you haven't been to for a long time will open up new possibilities with someone from your past. Change is upon you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Plan to have some fun or work toward a goal that is creative or will improve your living arrangements. Love is highlighted, and romance should be scheduled in your busy day. A commitment or promise will make you happy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Pay close attention to what transpires between you and the people you encounter. Friends, family, and acquaintances may lead you astray intentionally. Don't shy away from the truth. Ask direct questions. It's better to know than to appear naïve.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A positive change to the way you are living is apparent. Put your skills to the test, and you will land a position that is interesting, unusual, and pays you what you are worth. A celebration will lead to love.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Take care of legal or financial matters. The sooner you clear up any misconceptions, the better. Changing your living arrangements will allow you greater freedom to explore new interests. Someone from your past will surface.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Take care of business. Contracts and agreements should be dealt with and put to rest. An important relationship can bring you closer to your goals. Ask questions if you don't know where you stand. Face facts, move forward.

Baseball hits the road again

The Iowa baseball team will once again hit the road. This time, the Hawkeyes will travel to Little Rock, Ark., to compete against Arkansas-Little Rock, Western Illinois, and Wichita State.

Iowa head coach Jack Dahm enters the weekend one victory shy of 500 career wins.

The first game of the series will be today against the host team, Arkansas-Little Rock (5-2). The Trojans are on a current three-game winning streak, and they are led by John Clarke and Bryson Thionnet.

Clark has a .409 batting average, and Thionnet boasts 2 home runs and 14 RBIs.

The Hawkeyes will play two games the following day, first against Western Illinois and then Arkansas-Little Rock for a second time. The Leatherbacks are 2-4 and are coming off a 14-6 loss to Arkansas State.

To end the series, the Black and Gold will compete against Wichita State (1-3). The Shockers haven't made it back to the diamond since their Feb. 19 victory over Oral Roberts. Since then, five games have been canceled because of inclement weather.

Iowa has yet to defeat Wichita State in the squads' 10 meetings.

The pitching lineup for the weekend for Iowa will be sophomore Sasha Kuebel, senior Matt Dermody, freshman Calvin Mathews, and freshman Josh Martsching.

Last weekend, Iowa took two of three in the Kleberg College Classic. The squad defeated Corpus Christi, 4-2, and New Mexico, 6-2, but fell to No. 14 Oklahoma, 3-1.

Men's swimming now 7th in Big Tens

The Iowa men's swimming and diving team fell to seventh place Thursday evening on the second day of the Big Ten championships in Bloomington, Ind. The Hawkeyes broke two school records, and the team earned another qualification for the NCAAs.

The 400-medley relay team of sophomore Grant Betulius, freshman Roman Trussov, and seniors Byron Butler and Jordan Huff came in third, touching the wall at 3:10.18 and earning an NCAA "A" cut. That time broke the previous school record of 3:11.87 and earned Iowa its highest finish in the championships thus far.

Junior Tyler Lentz competed in the 200-individual medley C finals, where he broke his previous school mark of 1:46.82 with a time of 1:46.15 to come in 17th.

Junior Manuel Belzer competed in the C finals for the 500 freestyle, finishing 19th at 4:23.74. Sophomore Brian Donatelli also earned 19th in the C finals of the 50 free with a time of 20.36.

Freshman David Ernstsson and junior Gianni Sesto rounded out the 50 free C finals at 23rd and 24th, respectively. Ernstsson swam a time of 20.55, Sesto 20.63.

The Hawkeyes have 86 points. No. 3 Michigan continues to lead with 316 points, followed by No. 8 Indiana with 237 and No. 13 Ohio State with 170.

Iowa will kick off the third day today with preliminaries starting at 11 a.m. and finals at 6:30 p.m.

than three minutes remaining.

Printy drilled it with all smiles, which was fitting as it turned out to be her final regular-season 3 in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Then the seniors started to take over. Two buckets by center Johnson, followed by a pair of Printy free throws pushed the Iowa lead to 74-68 with just over 30 seconds remaining.

"Those are the shots we shoot in practice every single day; I've shot those shots thousands of times," Johnson said.

The senior women weren't going to let their last memory of playing in front of the Carver faithful be a loss. Johnson finished with 17 points and 9 rebounds, and Printy finished with 14 points and 6 assists.

Next, the Hawkeyes will travel to Northwestern (3/3) for a last tune-up before the Big Ten Tournament begins on March 8.

"This win is enormous; we felt like we needed two wins this week, and you don't get the second one without the first one," Bluder said. "It's great to get this win heading into Northwestern."

on and off the court. I'm going to miss playing with them so much next year."

Despite trailing by 18 points at one point in the game, Printy and the Hawkeyes never doubted the outcome of the game.

"I looked at Sam at one point in the game — we were down probably 15 — and I said 'Sam, we are not losing this game. Let's go,'" Printy said.

Fellow senior Morgan Johnson said Printy has been an inspiration for her, helping her to understand how to achieve her goals in life through hard work and dedication.

"That type of personality, to want to continually work and dedicate yourself to one thing is what I want my life to be like," Johnson said. "I've definitely learned that from Jaime.

Printy was crucial in the team's second-half comeback. Her lay-up with 9:05 remaining brought her team within 2 points. Printy also found herself at the charity stripe with 36 seconds remaining, and she sunk both. The senior continued her streak of free-throw perfection in the final five minutes of a game. Printy is now 43-of-43 for her career in the last five minutes and 22-of-22 in the final minute.

Despite her departure from the program, Printy believes she's putting the keys of the Hawkeye basketball program in capable hands.

Dixon added 22 points off the bench, scoring 9-consecutive points in the first half, and Sam Logic tied Cara Consuegra's single-season assist record of 191.

"I know they're going to do great things in the future," Printy said. "They're getting even more experience than they already have. There are good things to come."

ROAD

country.

Simply put, the Hoosiers are one of the nation's best.

The Hawkeyes (18-10, 7-8) will once again be without injured starting freshman point-guard Mike Gesell, who missed Wednesday's victory over Purdue with a foot injury.

"Every time you lose a player of his caliber, everybody has got to step up," Iowa head coach Fran McCaffery said.

"We're not a team that is going to play seven guys and then one guy goes down and we say, 'Now what do we do.'"

Iowa has beaten the Hoosiers in three of their last four meetings, but Indiana won the most recent affair earlier this season, 69-65, in Iowa City on Dec. 31. The Hawkeyes will catch Indiana at a rare time — the Hoosiers are coming off a 77-73 loss at Minnesota on Tuesday.

The defeat in Minneapolis will undoubtedly make Indiana an even hungrier team come Saturday, which is a scary proposition given the Hoosiers are 16-1 this season at Assembly Hall.

And now for the Hawkeyes, heading there without their fiery rookie floor general seems downright horrifying.

But with three games remaining in the regular season, there's simply no time to heal; Iowa must move on as best and as quickly as it can.

"We feel bad for Mike, we're going to get him back, and we'll be happy when he comes back," McCaffery said. "But right now, we've got other guys that can play. Let's go play."

GYMNASTICS

won't overlook Saturday's competition.

"Just like at every point, we're not trying to get too ahead of ourselves," he said. "We have to look at the big picture. We can only focus on our scoring. This week, we have to focus all of our energy into ourselves."

Iowa head coach JD Reive echoed that mentality and has been preaching consistency and focus this week in practice.

"We've definitely got some momentum going," the third-year head coach said. "We talked about this in practice. It's important that the kids continue to do what's allowed us to carry that momentum, which is to do their job and their gymnastics and not step out of what's allowed us success."

Saturday will mark the first competition in which the Hawkeyes will compete under the new five-up, five-count scoring format. Previously, six gymnasts competed in each event, but only five scores counted. Starting today, the NCAA rule will change. From now on, only five gymnasts will compete in each event, and all five scores will count.

-JD Reive, third-year head coach

In preparation for the new format, the Black and Gold have tried not to change much about their approach. The only thing that will change for them, Reive said, is the way their scores will be written by the judges. The gymnasts, though, have been pushing each other in practice, knowing all of their routines will be counted, regardless of the score.

"We've been working on a lot of pressure sets this week because it will be the first competition with the new scoring format," sophomore Lance Alberhasky said. "JD has really been emphasizing staying on the event. And if you do make a mistake, finish the routine and don't throw it away because any thrown-away routine would be devastating to our team score."

A win Saturday would push the Hawkeyes to 4-0 in Big Ten competition and extend their winning streak to four. In Reive's tenure at Iowa, his squad had never won two dual competitions in a row prior to this season. But despite Iowa gymnastics' unfamiliarity with this kind of success, Reive, and the rest of his coaching staff are confident the team can continue to raise the bar.

"When they get out there on the floor and raise their hand, they're still doing the same routine they've been doing and the same event they've been doing," Reive said. "Nothing changes. Hopefully, they understand that and I can provide a little bit of comfort in the performance aspect of that ... We have everything we need to accomplish a win this weekend."

Iowa's women beat Indiana, 75-70, to give seniors one final regular-season win in Carver-Hawkeye.

The Iowa women's basketball team cut an 18-point deficit on Thursday to beat the Indiana Hoosiers, 75-70, and improve to 18-11 (6-8 Big Ten) overall. Iowa fell behind quickly; the Hoosiers took advantage of four-straight 3-point baskets, coupled with the Hawkeyes starting 1-of-7 from the field, to spark a 12-0 run early on in the first half. "We were down 18, but it was Senior Night, and we were playing with a lot on the line," senior guard Jaime Printy said. "We just kept believing, and I looked at Sam [Logic] and told her we are not losing this game — 'let's go.'"

Iowa's defense finally started to show up around the 14-minute mark in the first half — which in turn led to an 8-2 Iowa run to get the Hawks back in the game — trailing only 16-10. But Indiana senior forward Aulani Sinclair was not having any of the Iowa comeback. After knocking down a pair of 3s and a long 2 early on in the game, Sinclair came down and nailed another 3 and deep 2 in two-straight possessions to push the lead back to 12 at 26-14 with 8:34 remaining. She ended up with a game-high 31 points on 12 of 22 shooting.

After the lead reached as many as 18 with just over six minutes remaining, sophomore guard Melissa Dixon contributed her own 9-0 run by banking in one 3 and following it up by rattling home two more to cut the lead to 9 with 4:20 remaining in the first half. Dixon's spark put a little life in the Hawkeyes, and she finished with a team-high 22 points.

"You would have to be silly not to vote her as the Sixth Player of the Year," Iowa head coach Lisa Bluder said. "To me — it's a lock — we know she's deserving of it."

Everyone started to contribute in the second half; junior guard Theaira Taylor scored two quick baskets to bring the Hawkeyes within 1 at 55-54. Taylor finished with 11 points on the night. Iowa finally evened the score by a pair of Morgon Johnson free throws that tied the game at 60 with six minutes remaining.

With 5:15 left, Iowa finally took its first lead of the game. After a few possessions of going back and forth, senior guard Printy hit a huge 3 to give Iowa a 65-62 advantage with a little more-

Jaime Printy found herself at the top of the key with the ball. The outcome of her Senior Night matchup against Indiana was in her hands.

Without a moment's hesitation, she elevated herself off the ground, flicked her wrist, and let the ball arc through the air. A captivated crowd watched it soar toward the basket with bated breath.

If not for the roar of that rabid crowd, Printy would have heard the swooshing sound of a perfectly shot basket. She had just given her team a 65-62 lead.

"My whole life, I've been taught to not think about the pass and just think about the next shot," Printy said. "That's what I did. Sam found me open and had a great pass to me — I was just able to knock it down."

Printy's shooting slump seemed like it was going to continue after she finished the first half with only 3 points. But with her team down 44-34 after half-time, she took over. The native of Marion finished the night with 14 points, 6 assists, 3 rebounds, and 4 steals.

"I can't talk enough about how much I've learned from them," sophomore Melissa Dixon said about the Hawkeye seniors. "They're such great role models,

Hawkeyes' long and winding road

Iowa has been close, but hasn't gotten the job done on the road this season. Also, the Hawkeyes head to Indiana without Mike Gesell.

By TOM CLOS
thomas-clos@uiowa.edu

The Iowa men's basketball team has been nearly unbeatable in the friendly confines of Carver-Hawkeye Arena this season. The Hawkeyes won their first nine games in Iowa City to open 2012 and are 14-2 at home this season.

When they hit the road, however, well, that's a different tale.

The Hawkeyes have floundered when they've traveled into opposing teams' arenas this season; the Black and Gold have a 2-7 record as the visiting team. Worse, Iowa has allowed 95 points on two separate occasions — at Virginia Tech and at Michigan.

But a closer inspection of the numbers suggests the Hawkeyes haven't been that far from being respectable on the road. Iowa has been outscored by an average of only 72-67 in the nine games away from Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

So what's been the problem? "There's a reason we've been in such close games in other buildings," sophomore guard Josh Oglesby said. "On the road, you have just have to get some stops and eventually hope the offense comes around. This season, it hasn't happened at times."

Oglesby is referring to the Hawkeyes' four heartbreaking losses at Purdue (65-62 in OT), at Minnesota (62-59) at Wisconsin (74-70 double OT) and at Nebraska (64-60). In all, five of the seven losses were by single figures.

The Black and Gold own Carver-Hawkeye Arena; they beat their opponents by an average score of 74-57. But they have to find a way to turn around their visiting fortunes in a hurry.

Once the regular season ends, the rest of the Hawkeyes' games this season will more than likely be far away from cozy Iowa City.

"We have to carry [the home momentum] over onto the road. There's nothing more gratifying than coming back with a win," junior forward Melsahn Basabe said. "But in this conference, it's never easy, so you just have to be ready."

Hawkeyes face daunting task

Iowa will need to conjure up any of the good home vibes it can if it wishes to pull off a seemingly unthinkable upset at No. 1 Indiana on Saturday in Bloomington, Ind.

The top-ranked Hoosiers (24-4, 12-3 Big Ten) are atop the Big Ten standings and lead the conference in points per game (82.2), field goal percentage (49.7 percent), field goals made (767), 3-point percentage (42.6 percent) and free-throw percentage (74.8 percent).

Indiana has also made more free throws (551) than any other team in the

The Iowa men's gymnastics team will travel to Minneapolis Saturday to take on the No. 7 Minnesota Gophers.

The eighth-ranked Iowa men's gymnastics team will try to build upon its recent success on Saturday when it travels to Minneapolis to take on No. 7 Minnesota. A win for the Hawks would mark a season sweep of the Gophers — Iowa defeated Minnesota, 422.750-419.450 on Feb. 8.

The Hawkeyes are riding a three-dual meet winning streak — all three have been against teams ranked in the top 10 nationally. But despite their recent success in Big Ten competition, senior all-around performer Javier Balboa is certain his squad
