Cats overrun shelter

The 100 cats that call the Iowa City Animal & Adoption Center home mark a 50 percent increase over a month ago.

A recent home impoundment, coupled with a peak breeding period and a lack of available space at a nearby facility has one local entity pinched for space.

And at the center of it all? More than 100 furry and fuzzy felines. In the past month, director Misha Goodman said the Iowa City Animal & Adoption Center, 4852 Sand Road S.E., has seen a 50 percent jump in the number of cats and kittens in need of new homes, which has put a space, budgetary, and care strain on the shelter.

Although she said an influx seems to appear on a year-to-year basis, she said the collection of 28 cats from an Iowa City area residence has prompted the facility to lower adoption costs, send out nearly 300 mass volunteer-needed emails, and increase the weekly mobile adoption services.

“[The cats are] everywhere,” she said. Current space and adoption aiding measures, Goodman said, include reducing the initial adoption cost and sticking up to three per kennel in some instances.

Those looking to adopt should note that for $40, an adult male cat with a microchip, license, health screenings, spay, neuter, and vaccinations can be purchased.

That stands at a $25 reduction in cost from standard rates.

An adult female cat now costs just $50, down from $85 originally.

Aldi will relocate by Jan.

The grocer will move to newly available land near the Iowa City Walmart.

By QUENTIN MISIAG
quentin-misiag@uiowa.edu

By the start of the new year, Iowa City grocery shoppers will have a new place to pick up that gallon of milk, among other household staples.

Requests for construction bids were sent out by the city of Iowa City Monday morning for a new Batavia, Ill.-based Aldi store, said Fred Rose, a representative for the Rose Companies. The Cedar Falls-based contracting and consulting firm began demolishing and clearing the five commercial buildings on the corner of Ruppert Road and Highway 1 West on Monday, on land just west of the recently opened Deery Brothers Chrysler, Dodge, Jeep & Ram, 631 Highway 1 W.

Rose said his company will take control of the land for the five-month project on Aug. 1, and one of four construction bids will be selected at the end of this week. A new nearly 16,000-square-foot store is expected to open sometime by the end of December or the beginning of January.

Hemingway announces School Board bid

A local parent and activist has once again decided to try his hand at landing a seat on the Iowa City School Board.

Iowa City resident Phil Hemingway, who ran in the 2011 election, announced his second bid in a Monday press release. In the release, he contended that many current board members have lost sight of the parents and students who help make up Iowa's fifth largest school district.

Even with a two-year gap period between campaigns, Hemingway said, his campaign principles and his broader goals for the district have remained unchanged.

Although the schools in the district continue to be ranked among the best at the state and national level, he said, the voice of the public has been lost among new construction projects, school closings, and current board member input.

“They’re transparent as a brick wall,” he said about the board members. “They say, Give us the money, and we can do these great things; I think there’s an honesty issue there.”

Hemingway said under current leadership, fiduciary responsibilities have been lost, the district budget is poorly managed, physical-plant employees report for outside architects and planning firms, and the safety committee is anything but.

If elected, he said, he would bring back the recently terminated home-building program that gives high-school students the opportunity to work on-site at home and business construction projects, while expanding it to the junior-high level.

“I think our students are hungry for opportunities to be creative and work with their hands,” he said. “There are many on the board who look at that as a failure and not as a success.”

Hemingway also said he plans on keeping current neighborhood schools intact, save for the potential for complete remodeling or reconstruction efforts.

He said he will reuse his old yard signs from 2011 and will not seek private or public monetary handouts.

“I have not taken money from anyone nor will I,” he said. “I need voters, not money. This is a real grass-roots effort.”

Calls made to Superintendent Steve Murley seeking comment on Hemingway’s campaign and criticism of the board were not immediately returned Monday evening.

Furniture program fills an int’l need

By identifying a need, one local church attracts members and propagates its message.

By ROBERT CROZIER
robert-crozier@uiowa.edu

One local church continues to open its doors to international students arriving at the University of Iowa by offering free necessities.

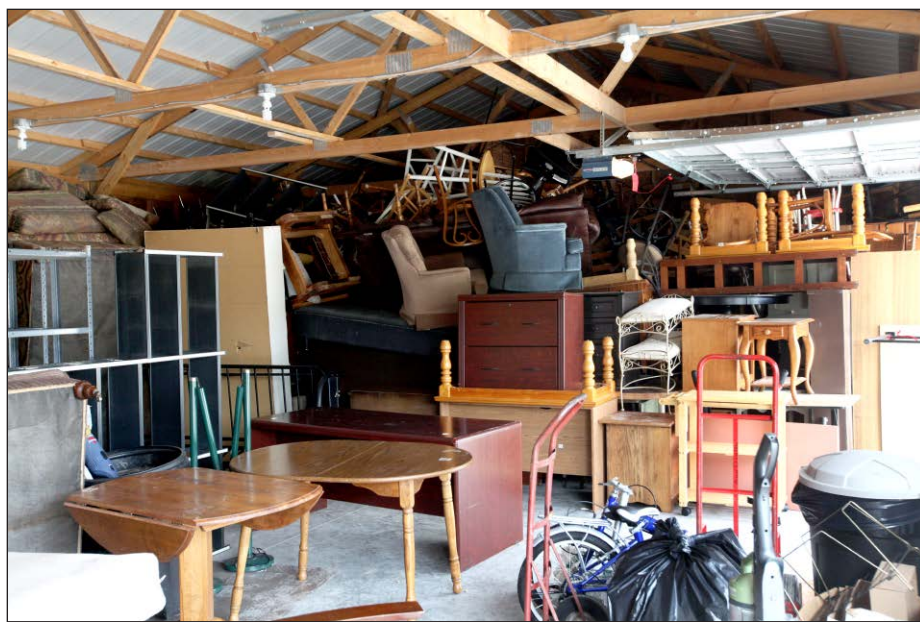

Faith Baptist Church, 1251 Village Road, will host its 11th-annual International Furniture Giveaway on Aug. 17, an event Assistant Pastor Jake Mangold said is the biggest way the congregation meets students.

In August 2012, approximately 250 students from a number of counties received around 350 pieces of furniture with no strings attached.

This year’s turnout should be about the same, he said, noting that the church also gives appliances, kitchen utensils, and other household items.

“The actual day of the giveaway is nutso ...” Mangold said.

Volunteers bus the students from the Main Library to the church, sit them down, collect their addresses, explain how the giveaway works, talk about Jesus Christ for around 15 minutes, and then send them all into the backyard to pick out what they want. The service is only available to international students attending the UI.

To reach out to the students, event organizers work with International Programs in putting fliers in Orientation packets, whose staff may refer students who need furniture to the program, said Laura Holtkamp, a UI International Student & Scholar adviser.

The UI works with many religious organizations, Holtkamp said, noting that staff members are very particular about what items are included in the packet.

CATS

The age range of cats in the shelter is between 8 weeks and 3 years.

Goodman said if the number of available adopted cats continue to rise, a move into their new, 9,300-square-foot larger permanent facility may not even be the needed aid.

"We are accommodating the numbers we are currently taking in, but any additional numbers, and we'll be in the same boat," she said.

Charlotte Tobiason, a program director, said as many of the 300 individuals who volunteer at some point throughout the year are college students who have gone home for the summer, email efforts have proven to be of little help.

With a cramped location more than six miles from the middle of Iowa City and a staff of 11, and she said even starting the day at 6 a.m. has proven to be a challenge.

Generally, Tobiason said, just four people are taking care of the 166 total animals, which can yield errors in disease detection and the nurturing process for young animals.

"It's just an insane number for us to take on," she said. "Anyone who has ever considered adopting, now is the time."

Tobiason said increased variety of cats and kittens is the one silver lining that has appeared in the whole process.

To date, the Iowa City Friends of the Animal Shelter Foundation have raised $750,000 toward its $1 million fundraising goal.

Jeff Davidson, the city director of planning and development, said the current influx only demonstrates the further need for the permanent facility to be built on Napoleon Lane near the Terry Trueblood Recreational Area and Napoleon Park.

"The important thing from the city perspective, we've got to get it built," he said. "That's the global thing."

Goodman said that at the end of the day, if adoptions fail to take place, one certainty will come forward.

"We don't have a choice; we have to take them in, but if we keep getting more, the sad truth is, we may have to euthanize some," she said. "We're doing our best to not have to do that, but we can only hold so many."

GIVEAWAY

When asked about her thoughts on the church's sermon practices, Holtkamp said she and fellow staff members weren't aware of them and referred further questions to Joan Kjaer, the International Programs strategic communications officer.

"One thing everybody needs when they land in a new place is a table, chair, desk ... basic things," she said. "International students will be exposed to many things in the States that may be new to them or unfamiliar, but that's part of the joy of an international experience. It is certainly up to each individual to take part or not, as he or she sees fit."

Kjaer allowed that a religious message might not be for everybody. Students who don't want to go are not obligated to, she said.

UI graduate student Sang Kyun "Danny" Kang, a Ph.D. candidate in linguistics from South Korea, said in addition to giving the furniture, an added benefit is the church's free delivery service.

Kang said he arrived late to the giveaway in 2007 and was only able to take away a few frying pans and silverware, but that didn't stop him from joining the congregation and later volunteering to help make the deliveries.

"We get there, and we see their faces — so happy," he said. "... I think it's one of the reasons we volunteer."

Of the 15-minute sermon, Kang said church leaders tell international students what they are going to do, how, and why.

"And the why part is the message part," he said.

Although Kang was baptized in 2004 after reading the Bible to learn English, he and Mangold both said that the vast majority of people participating in the Giveaway program — many of whom hail from India or China — are not Christians.

Church members offer to serve students as conversation partners, Kang said, adding that he himself started going to church in 2003 for exactly that reason — conversation partners, in addition to the free food.

Between seven and 15 international students now attend the church during the school year, he said.

The congregation starts collecting furniture in May, Mangold said. The members post fliers in local apartment complexes during moving season to get furniture that might otherwise end up in the Dumpster, and they can count on some students who received furniture in the past to give back when they leave the country.

Also, the church uses a portion of the donations to purchase furniture at auctions and garage sales, before storing it in a garage behind the building.

Today, all manner of chairs, desks, dressers, and beds are piled nearly to the ceiling.

UI junior Huimeng Yang, a native of China, said the giveaway provided a benefit to international students. "I already bought furniture myself, so I won't go there, but I will tell other people who need this," she said.

She has never heard anybody talk about Christianity before, she said, noting that in China, they are not allowed to talk about religious beliefs in public.

She said she isn't sure if she would be interested in hearing the religious message, but she said the thought does not make her uncomfortable.

cess of being sold. Rose said the new store makes a "perfect fit for the area," noting that the new building will sit far back from the highway and have strong visibility next to existing businesses, notably the Carousel Motors dealership and Walmart. He said Aldi executives in Chicago chose the site because of its proximity to Walmart. The current low interest rates, he said, have only encouraged new and existing businesses to invest. "They were a horrible rats nest of buildings," he said about the former businesses that had occupied the site. "There were even a couple of people living in some of them." Among the businesses that once occupied the site were the Grooming Den, Gallery One, Superior Detailing and Reconditioning, and Crown Electric.

The Grooming Den is in the process of relocating to the former location of Giardiniera Chicago Kitchen, 227 E. First St. Jeff Davidson, the city director of planning and development, said the years following the 2010 opening of the new Walmart have pushed significant investment into the highway corridor once largely dominated by more industrial-like businesses. "Thirty years ago, there wasn't that traffic [count]," he said. "Commercial intensive use really don't need the highway visibility, and as the traffic count goes up on the highway, things like a grocery store, they become more appropriate uses than backstreet type uses." Brandon Hofeldt, the store manager at the Waterfront Hy-Vee, 1720 Waterfront Drive, said he expects a small increase in sales and revenue with the shuttering of the nearby Aldi. "Anytime a competitor closes nearby, there's going to be something [of benefit]," he said. [Current Aldi shoppers] might be willing to stop in [here], because it's a little trek because a lot of people in this neighborhood take the bus or walk to the store." Javier Gonzalez, a manager at the current Aldi, 1534 S. Gilbert St., said details are still being discussed for what the new store will include, but the company principles and store selection will remain. He said he was unsure on why the company had decided to close its existing store rather than be served by two. For one longtime Aldi shopper who makes the more than one-hour trip to Iowa City once a month, the change in location will not change her purchasing habits. "I've always liked the prices, and it was the milk [prices] that were really great years ago," Oskaloosa resident Erma Edwards said. "This [move] will make no difference to me."

Collaboration opens new options for health insurance

Two Iowa health organizations have announced a collaboration that will bring about two new options for Iowans when they seek health-insurance plans. CoOpportunity Health, a multistate health insurance co-op, and the University of Iowa Health Alliance have submitted plans to the Iowa Insurance Division for approval. Those plans would feature provider networks that involve all member organizations of the Health Alliance, which includes more than 50 hospitals and 160 clinics across the state, a joint press release on Monday said. Additional hospitals, physicians, and providers across the state have expressed an interest in CoOpportunity Health in participating in the new insurance-plan offerings. Dan Kueter, the executive director of the Health Alliance, said that the two plans are expected to cover approximately 50,000 Iowans over the course of three years. One of the new options, called CoOpportunity Choice UI Health Alliance, will be an open-access, tiered-benefit plan that provides significant consumer savings when Health Alliance facilities and clinicians are used for services, the release said. The release said the second, called CoOpportunity Preferred UI Health Alliance, will be a select-network plan that provides the most cost-effective choice for purchasers interested in using Health Alliance providers exclusively. With new options for insurance plans, Kueter said, he expects Iowans will be pleased with their choices. "I would certainly expect that the public will be happy with having additional choices... and I would expect that they will be happy with having choices that provide incentives to them to have a stronger relationship with their physicians," he said. Additionally, Kueter said, the new plans will have features in place that provide economic incentives for individuals to seek health-care services, such as follow-up care, preventive care, and prescription medication. CoOpportunity Health and the Health Alliance hope to offer the plans on the new Iowa Health Insurance Marketplace, the Iowa SHOP Exchange, and in the open market. The two groups hope to attract both individuals and employer groups of all sizes, the release said.

Keeping it Iowa Real, not Nice

By ZACH TILLY
Zachary-tilly@uiowa.edu

Much to the dismay of Iowa's seventh-grade girls and their eminently accommodating parents, notorious prima donna Justin Bieber was very late for his concert at the Wells Fargo Arena in Des Moines on Sunday night.

Bieber descended from the rafters in a white suit and angel wings like the D-bag messiah just after 10 p.m. — damn near bedtime — more than an hour and a half after the crowd had been brutally assaulted by the music of Hot Chelle Rae and Mike Posner.

Bieber was reportedly greeted by a smattering of boos that almost certainly faded away as 13,000 spectators melted like so many candles into a churning puddle of tears and pubescent sweat four bars into "All Around the World."

Des Moines was only the latest stop on Bieber's international quest to frustrate and underwhelm the people of Earth. He's spent the last few months systematically screwing people from London to Dubai, showing up late and discarding monkeys that no longer please him all over mainland Europe. And, of course, smoking reefer and sending late-night frowny-face texts to Selena Gomez ("I wnt u bak") from the bathroom of his tour bus.

Considering that Bieber — the current captain of my 2023 VH1 Where Are They Now? All-Star Team — is well on his way to becoming a full-on social pariah, I'd say he got off a little too easily in Iowa.

I know our state has an image to uphold as a bastion of unflappable Midwestern niceness, where the people are willing to suffer any indignity and forgive any transgression in the name of being inoffensive, but there comes a time when enough must finally be enough. We have to do away with Iowa Nice and start keeping it Iowa Real, or guys such as Justin Bieber are going to keep walking all over us.

Iowa Nice stays for the 10 p.m. concert; Iowa Real boos the time-wasting punk off stage and hits the road.

If you're interested in keeping it Iowa Real in the coming months, you'll have plenty of chances. Our fair state will host many more jerks before the summer is through.

In a few weeks, Lance Armstrong will stop by for his first RAGBRAI since he came out as a doper to Oprah.

Iowa Nice says, "Well, everybody else was doping, and Lance has done so much for cycling and cancer research that we should welcome him with open arms."

Iowa Real says, "Lance Armstrong lied for years and selfishly sold out his friends and the media just so he could perpetuate his image as a hero for a little while longer. He can ride, but don't expect another adoring crowd."

If biking isn't your thing, a few weeks after that, the Harlem Globetrotters of social conservatism will roll in for a high-flying exhibition at the Family Leadership Summit. We're talking confirmed appearances from Ted Cruz, Donald Trump, and Rick Santorum, the Meadowlark Lemon of telling gay people they shouldn't be allowed to get married.

Iowa Nice says, "Everyone's entitled to their own opinion. Welcome to Iowa, fellas."

Iowa Real says, "Gay marriage has been legal here for four years, and I have yet to see any part of society collapse into polygamy or general debauchery. Why don't you take this sideshow someplace where the fear of social progress is still relevant? We'll see you guys in 2016, when you're all here stumping for Marco Rubio."

UI audit finds problems

The Iowa Auditor's Office, which serves the citizens of Iowa as the "Taxpayer's Watchdog" and helps ensure that public institutions are open and accountable to the citizens, released a report on the University of Iowa last week that found a few problems with the school's finances and its data-protection systems.

The audit offered potential solutions for these issues, and the university's planned response to each problem, though the Office of the Auditor did not accept all of the university's responses. Although the university has hastened to heed recommendations from previous reports, the university still needs to do more in order to fully address the concerns raised in this year's report.

According to the report, the university incorrectly made 309 payroll overpayments totaling $805,095 during the fiscal year that ended June 30, 2012. This was an increase of $159,354 over fiscal 2011. Overpayments usually occur when electronic forms reflecting changes in employment status are not filed in a timely manner.

The report suggested that the university work with employing departments to ensure the proper electronic forms are submitted on a timely basis to help monitor the correct payment of salaries and wages and reduce overpayments.

The university responded to the audit by stating that most of its overpayments are "promptly collected" and that the report's recommendations for fiscal 2010 — the first report in which overpayments came up as an issue — were received too late for the university to implement corrective measures that could have affected fiscal 2011. The university reports that overpayments have been reduced by 60 percent since fiscal 2011.

The UI has undertaken major initiatives such as the creation of an Overpayment Task Force Committee to develop and vet a list of possible action items to reduce the number of overpayments.

The audit also found that not all of the school's accounts were reviewed according to university policy, which requires monthly review of all transactions. Additionally, not all journal entries made by Accounting and Financial Reporting during the financial-reporting process were sufficiently reviewed by an independent person.

The report suggested that the university should ensure transactions are reviewed in accordance with university policy. The university responded to this recommendation saying that the Controller's Office regularly communicates with college and departmental staff and emphasizes the importance of reconciling and reviewing transactions in a timely manner.

According to the university, budget officers are reminded in person and via email throughout the year to work with their department administrators, account owners, and account reviewers to reconcile their accounts. Training courses are also offered by central administration to reinforce the importance of reconciling accounts.

The State Auditor's Office accepted the university's responses to both of the above issues. However, the office did not accept the response to the final recommendation for stronger data encryption, which helps to protect sensitive information by making data unintelligible to unauthorized users.

According to the report, encryption software has not been installed on all laptop computers and portable storage devices that could store sensitive information. The university has had policies since 2006 requiring encryption on of high sensitivity data, but the report strongly suggests that the university policies be strengthened to ensure all portable devices are encrypted rather than rely on individual users to protect their information.

The university should take the appropriate steps to remedy the few problems identified in the audit.

The NSA knows; it just does

By BEAU ELLIOT
beauelliott@gmail.com

So, is Kirk Ferentz one of the worst five coaches in college football?

Stewart Mandel of si.com thinks so. Yes, yes, I know — there are many things in life far more important than college football, though that point would get lost in the hubbub of any game day in Iowa City in the fall.

So, yes; Egypt appears to be collapsing into chaos, what with a military coup tossing out the Muslim Brotherhood with what you might call a pharaoh-thee-well (or you might not, depending on how your day is going).

And yes, conservative Republicans appear to be upping their war on women, though they would stoutly deny that. (Yo, Republicans — there's a reason Barack Obama stomped the GOP presidential nominees twice in the women's vote, and it's not because women are unreasonable. At least not more unreasonable than men, anyway.)

And yes, the semi-secret drone war drones on, much as the not-so-secret climate change drones on (though some still deny that, when they're not making war on women), and Edward Snowden (he of the NSA leaks, in case you've forgotten) reportedly continues to hunker down in a Moscow airport.

Meanwhile, the NSA is reading your grocery list, and big government, Iowa City version, is invading our privacy by busting underage imbibers of alcohol.

No, really. A person interviewed in The Daily Iowan last week seriously (I think) proposed that the Iowa City government is invading privacy by policing underage drinkers.

Now, I am not in favor of the 21-ordinance or even in favor of 21 age limit for drinking alcohol. I believe that if you're old enough to vote and old enough to sign a contract and old enough to put your life on the line in combat in the military, you're probably old enough to have a drink or two.

But. The drinking age is 21. That's the law, and I don't think it's going to change anytime soon. Frankly, the way this society is going, one of these days the drinking age will be 31. Which won't solve any of the problems involved with alcohol but will make some people happy, because then they can go back to stomping on women's rights as human beings.

In any case, police officers enforcing the law is not invading anyone's privacy. Neither, for that matter, are traffic-light cameras. You're in public, you've given up a measure of your privacy. You want to dream about running red lights in the privacy (there's that word again) of your residence, fine. (Although the NSA is probably listening to your dreams.)

But meanwhile, back at the story line (sportswriters' favorite two words, though they usually write it as one), is Kirk Ferentz one of the worst five coaches in college football?

(This would be in what we used to call Division I college football but no longer do because we don't want to hurt the tender feelings of UNI fans.)

(I first typed that as "collage" football, which I think I prefer. But then, I read literature, too.)

Seriously. Ferentz one of the worst? Sure, last season was a bummer (to use a word that's been out of style since nearly the advent of the Edsel), but you have to remember what Ferentz walked into when he came here: The football program was in the deep freeze of irrelevancy. He brought Iowa football back. It might not have been quite what Hayden Fry did in bringing Hawkeye football back from the Antarctica of the Frank Lauterbur years, but it was close.

Besides, Ferentz's name never belongs on any list that also contains Charlie Weis. Unless it's a list of people who like Ben & Jerry's ice creams.

But NSA knows what you think about them.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR/ ONLINE

Re: A lesson from Adams and Jefferson

Have you actually read the opinion the court handed down? I was at the U.S. Supreme Court the day it was released. I happened to be there on vacation. If you read it, it pretty much says that when the original ruling was made, there was blatant evidence that voter discrimination was happening. At the time, they had to go against the Constitution to correct a wrong that the state government could not or would not enforce. So, to preserve everyone's right to vote, federal law was made to trump the state law. Now, many years later, the same evidence for discrimination does not exist. There is a lot of data that the justices waded through to substantiate their opinion. I invite you to read the entire opinion.

Many things struck me during my visit to the Supreme Court, but the one that stood out the most was how seriously justices take their jobs. They do not make their rulings based on whim. How that court operates gives me renewed faith in the structure of our government. It's not perfect, but it's pretty good.

Re: IC a model midsize town

I agree that the open spaces in most areas of Iowa City are wonderful. The major problem regarding open space is that there will not be any available downtown when "Moenville" is completed.

horoscopes

Tuesday, July 9, 2013 by Eugenia Last

- ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are best to focus on what you do best and forget about trying to please everyone around you. Social events should include some form of physical activities that will keep you out of trouble or help you make self-improvements.
- TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Mingle with friends, relatives, or neighbors. What you learn from interacting with others will help you make an important decision regarding your home, family, and your future. Don't let your stubbornness stand between you and a good time.
- GEMINI (May 21-June 20): When it comes to earning a living or making donations, you are best not to make snap decisions that might jeopardize your financial future. Use your experience and know-how to find solutions to any work-related problem you face. Greater security is apparent.
- CANCER (June 21-July 22): Revisit the obstacles that stand in your way, and consider what it will take to work your way around whatever is holding you back. Making a subtle but strategic move will far exceed the results you get if you are impulsive.
- LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Personal changes will make you feel good and raise your confidence. A change in the way you are treated will alter the way you treat others. Improving your surroundings or investments will result in greater accomplishments and satisfaction.
- VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You'll impress new acquaintances with your intellect and knowledge. You can make financial gains, but you mustn't be too quick to extend a helping hand. Offer suggestions, not cash, if someone is looking for a handout. Protect a good idea.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Observe and listen to what's being said. Approach difficult situations graciously and with the intent to please. Expect others to overreact. Having your facts correct will help you redirect any notion or assumption that you are to blame. Romance is highlighted.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Improve or use your space at home better. The changes you make will inspire you to take on a project that can help you expand your skills, knowledge, or capability to earn more cash. A contract or proposal shows great potential.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may have to twist things around to fit your schedule, but once you have everything in place, you should be able to make the alterations required to make your life happier. Love and romance are on the rise.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Settle differences with partners or people you work with. Discussing plans will allow you to persuade others to see things your way. An unusual change may be questioned, but once the results come in, it will be easy to keep moving forward.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Physical activity, challenges, and working toward a better relationship with someone you care about will help improve your life and the way you do things. A change in your beliefs is apparent but must be considered carefully before you make a commitment.
- PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Investments will be prosperous, and expanding your interests, surroundings, or friendships will help you reach your goals. Don't be afraid to do things differently. It's your uniqueness that will attract the support you need.

there, be aggressive and continue to take shots," Iowa teammate Mike Gesell said. "He's one of the hardest workers on our team, and that's why I love workouts with him: He's always pushing you to be your best. He's one of those guys that makes everyone around him better."

Along with his participation in the World University Games tryouts in Colorado Springs, summer workouts with the coaching staff and the Prime Time League, Marble and his teammates have also put in extra work on the Carver-Hawkeye Arena practice courts this summer — sometimes as late as midnight or 1 a.m.

Marble and guard Anthony Clemmons sometimes take up to 1,000 shots during these nightly sessions. Other members of the team join in and improve on the individual and team aspects of their game.

"The thing I like about this group of guys is that we're all self-motivated," Marble said. "Guys get into the gym and do their own thing — you don't have to get on guys about not going to the gym. As a team, we're pretty self-motivated — we know what needs to be done."

But it hasn't been all fun and games for Marble.

He went through a slump midway through his junior season after missing a game against Michigan State. During the slump, Marble endured a course of games where he scored under 10 points — including a goose egg in a heartbreaking loss at Minnesota.

Slump or not, Marble still knew how to push his teammates to be at their best. His experience, along with his family name, allows — nay, demands — it.

"There's times when he's whispered in my ear [saying that] I'm better than what I'm playing," Clemmons said. "He's seen me in action before, when I was at my best, he knows what I'm capable of doing, he knows what other people are capable of doing. He'll tell you on the side if he doesn't see the best out of you."

But Marble knows he can still improve his game, despite all the confidence — flying back to Iowa City while teammate Aaron White later flew to Russia proved it. His confidence has increased after the trip, and now it'll come down to bringing his on-court intensity to its maximum potential.

"It's not going to come down to me needing to take more or fewer shots, pass the ball more, nothing like that — I'll continue to do what I was doing as far as that," Marble said. "Just increasing my intensity and energy on the court and getting the most out of it."

GAME TIME

Ever since I was little, I've always been a physical player," she said. "To get better, I have to go against the best, and that's what I try to do every day."

This confidence is apparent to everyone who watches, and none more than Iowa guard Sam Logic. Following a Week 3 loss, Logic praised Kastanek for what she brings to the team.

"She's tough; I like that," Logic said. "She never backs down from anyone. I think she's going to be someone who's going to come in and work hard and do whatever the coaches want her to do."

The transition to the college game has not been easy, though. Both freshmen have frequently adjusted on the fly. Disterhoft and Kastanek noted the quicker pace and the increased physical play.

They said the improved competition has forced them to work harder and improve their game.

"Everyone's bigger, faster, and stronger than they were in high school," Disterhoft said. "You have to come into each workout with the mindset of working your hardest and getting better every day."

Neither is alone in this process. Quite the opposite, actually — Kastanek and Disterhoft have been side by side for the duration of their transition.

The two work out together and eat together, and they have lived together in a dorm during the summer.

"It's nice to have someone going through the same things that you are," Disterhoft said. "Someone you can come back and talk about your day with."

The two players have also taken advantage of the Game Time season to not only hone their skills but also to build chemistry with their teammates. This experience has helped them learn what their teammates do in certain situations — simple things, such as when a teammate will cut.

As with every upcoming Iowa women's basketball season, the expectations are high. But also with every season, Iowa women's basketball coach Lisa Bluder brings in freshmen to fill the roles of those who have left.

Those "newbies," as their teammates often call them, are expected to perform from the opening tip.

"They both work really hard, and they're fit in really well so far," Dixon said. "I think we have big things coming from both of our freshmen."

TEAM USA

baskets, along with a put-back from McDermott, powered the team to a 9-0 run right before the end of the second quarter. Team USA held a 19-point advantage going into halftime.

Team USA held Czech Republic to a 31-percent shooting percentage throughout the game — something McDermott said the team has been working hard to improve.

"I think we did improve on defense," he said in the release. "We're all starting to trust each other, and we're hearing each other's voices a lot better out there, and that's big on defense to communicate."

Team USA players maintained their energy in the second half and never gave the Czechs a chance to make a comeback. They outscored the Czechs 25-16 in the third quarter, 30-15 in the fourth quarter.

At one point, USA held a 44-point lead — at the 1:09 mark in the fourth quarter when BYU's Tyler Haws threw down an alley-oop dunk from Indiana's Yogi Ferrell — the largest gap in the game.

"All we need to do is keep improving, getting better every game, and we're going to be fine," Louisville's Luke Hancock said in the release.

Hancock was Team USA's second-leading scorer with 15 points, and he went 5-of-10 from the 3-point line.

In addition to McDermott and Hancock, two other players reached double-digit points. Indiana's Will Sheehy had 10 points, and Baylor's Cory Jefferson recorded a double-double with 10 points and 15 rebounds.

The Red, White, and Blue have the day off today; on Wednesday, the squad will play Sweden, which is still looking for its first win in the Games. USA will conclude its preliminary play against Australia on Thursday and Canada on Friday.

"We've got to get through these next three games, and we want to be at the top," Hancock said. "We want to go 5-0 in pool play and set ourselves up for a great finish. That's our goal, to win three more; now, we have to get it done."

Ex-Iowa AD Grant selected for Hall of Fame

Christine H.B. Grant, the former Iowa women's athletic director, was selected to the National Field-Hockey Coaches Association Hall of Fame on Monday.

Grant joins Virginia head coach Michele Madison, a former Iowa assistant (1982-89), and Ursinus College head coach Laura Moliken in the Class of 2013.

The coaches' association will welcome the Class of 2013 during its annual convention on Nov. 20-22, in Virginia Beach, Va.

Grant, seen by many as a pioneer in U.S. intercollegiate athletics, became the first and only women's athletics director at Iowa in 1973. She helped coaches develop highly competitive teams at the national level and at the conference level, where Hawkeye teams won 27 Big Ten titles in Grant's 27 years at the helm.

The native of Scotland earned national acclaim for her dedication to gender equity in athletics. Grant has testified on Title IX and Gender Equity before several U.S. House of Representatives subcommittees and served as an expert witness in many Title IX lawsuits.

She served as president of both the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women and the National Association of Collegiate Women Athletics Administrators.

Grant was given an honorary doctorate of humane letters by Luther College and was named one of the 100 Most Influential Sports Educators in America by the Institute of International Sport.

In 2006, Grant was inducted into the state of Iowa Women's Hall of Fame, and two years later, she was inducted into the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics' Hall of Fame.

In 2007, Grant received the NCAA President's Gerald R. Ford Award, which honors an individual who has provided significant leadership as an advocate for college athletics on a continuous basis over the course of her or his career.

More recently, the ballroom in the new NCAA building addition in Indianapolis was named in Grant's honor in June 2012.

MORRIS ON BEDNARIK LIST

Iowa's senior linebacker James Morris was recently named to the 2013 Bednarik Award Watch List. The Bednarik Award has been presented to the College Defensive Player of the Year since 1995. Chuck Bednarik, who played at Penn and with the Philadelphia Eagles, is a member of both the College Football Hall of Fame and the NFL Hall of Fame. Morris has been a starting linebacker for the Hawkeyes since his freshman season in 2010. Last season, he ranked third in the Big Ten, 31st nationally, with 9.4 tackles per game. His 293 tackles ranks 16th at Iowa. Semifinalists for the Bednarik Award will be announced on Oct. 29. The three finalists will be unveiled Nov. 25. The winners of the 2013 Bednarik Award will be announced as part of the Home Depot College Football Awards Show on Dec. 12. The formal presentations of the award will be made at the Maxwell Football Club Awards Gala, hosted by Harrah's Entertainment Atlantic City on March 7, 2014.

MEN'S HOOPS TO PLAY IN EUROPE

The Iowa men's basketball team will play six exhibition games in Europe in mid-August. Iowa will play two games against the London Lions at the Copper Box Arena in London on Aug. 13 and 14. The Aug. 13 exhibition is closed to the public, and the next day's game is open to fans. The contests will mark the Lions' first basketball game in the Olympic Park since last year's games. After the first two games in London, Iowa will travel to Paris to take on the AMW All-Stars on Aug. 16 and St. Quentin on Aug. 17. Iowa will conclude its trip in southern France against Hyeres-Toulon on Aug. 19 and Fos Ouest on Aug. 20. Iowa has 12 letterwinners back from last year's 25-13 squad, and it adds incoming freshman guard Peter Jok and sophomore transfer Jarrod Uthoff — both of whom will travel with the team to Europe. The NCAA granted the team 10 days to prepare for the exhibition games. The trip will be special for Iowa center Gabe Olaseni, who hails from London. Olaseni's parents will be able to see their son play in an Iowa uniform for the first time.

PRIME TIME

Marble being Marble

Taylor Olson drives past Devyn Marble during a Prime Time game in the North Liberty Community Center on Sunday. Marble's team won the game, 134-98. (The Daily Iowan/Jake Stanbro)

For Devyn Marble, being himself on the court is one of the most important aspects of his senior season.

By MATT CABEL
matthew-cabel@uiowa.edu

A lot has changed in Iowa City since Devyn Marble first wore "Iowa" across his chest in Carver Hawkeye-Arena. The school he represents is quickly transitioning into a basketball school. He led his team to the NIT championship game in Madison Square Garden last season. And he's transformed from an inconsistent freshman into the team's bona fide senior leader. But one thing hasn't — and won't — change for the 6-6 guard as he prepares to lead his team through his final Black and Gold season: being himself on the court. "Just doing everything, getting everybody involved, scoring when I need to, playing defense, being a pest — just doing the things I do best," Marble said. "Just be me. I don't have to do anything more than I normally do and just be more of a vocal leader."

Everything is exactly what Marble did Sunday in his Prime Time League matchup. He posted a triple double in the game, tallying 35 points, 10 assists, and 10 rebounds in his team's 134-98 blowout win. It was a performance reminiscent of March, when Marble scored more than 20 points in each of his team's postseason wins. "That's what we need him to do: go out

Freshman guards Alexa Kastanek and Ally Disterhoft lined up against each other for their Game Time League opener in North Liberty three weeks ago. It was the first opportunity for Hawkeye fans to see the two heralded recruits and the future of Iowa women's basketball in action. Since then, the two freshmen have done nothing but impress those around them — especially their teammates. Disterhoft, an Iowa City native who attended all of the Hawkeye games as a kid, has the complete offensive package. In her three summer league games, she's averaged 18 points, 6 rebounds, and 5.3 assists per game. "She's just a really hard worker. In scrimmages, she's playing hard the entire time," said Iowa teammate Melissa Dixon. "She obviously has a great shot, and she has some height on her." Disterhoft has showcased her offensive versatility during Game Time action. That versatility should allow her to make an immediate impact for the Hawkeyes.

She has the ability to put the ball on the floor and shoot from the perimeter. Disterhoft occasionally posts up smaller opponents, too, using her 6-foot frame to her advantage. On the other hand, Kastanek has impressed her teammates on the defensive side of the court. The Lincoln, Neb., native has shown no hesitation or fear in guarding any opponent, no matter their age or skill level. "Defense has always been one of my strong suits and something I pride myself in.

Aaron White and Team USA steamrolled its second World University Games opponent on Monday, improving to 2-0 in the preliminary round in Kazan, Russia. Creighton's Doug McDermott led the team with 23 points and 10 rebounds in the 96-53 win over the Czech Republic. White, who scored 16 in the first game, was held to just 2 points and 3 rebounds. "I'm very pleased," Team USA head coach Bob McKillop said in a release from USA Basketball. "I see the development of the players trusting the system, the coaches understanding the talents of the players and the evolving teamwork that is a result of that. There are great opportunities for leadership out there for individuals; I think this is a very profitable experience every time they step on the floor with us." USA shot 42.7 percent from the field and missed just three shots from the line, 14-of-17. The team also held a 62-29 rebounding advantage. USA jumped to an early 12-4 lead early in the first quarter and never relinquished the lead. Virginia Commonwealth's Trevon Graham and Cincinnati's Sean Kilpatrick knocked down key 3-point
