Student football-ticket sales lag

With approximately 3,000 student season tickets unsold for Hawkeye football, the Hawkeye Athletics Tickets Office is creating new promotions for single game ticket purchases.

By REBECCA MORIN
rebecca-morin@uiowa.edu

Kinnick Stadium may have some empty seats this football season — but low-price ticket deals may be the University of Iowa's solution.

The Hawkeye Athletics Tickets Office on Tuesday informed student season-ticket holders of a promotion for the upcoming game against Northern Illinois. According to the release, all student season-ticket holders will now be able to purchase a single game student-guest ticket for $40.

The promotion became available after student season-ticket sales did not sell. For the past five seasons, the Athletics Tickets Office has sold every student season ticket, which can be up to 10,371 season tickets.

As of 5 p.m. Tuesday, ticket manager Pam Finke said approximately 7,500 tickets have been sold, and there are up to 3,000 season tickets that are still available.

Steve Roe, the director of athletics communications, said student ticket sales were down by 1 to 2 percent from last season.

However, he said students continue to buy tickets each day.

"We are selling tickets to Saturday's game and the rest of the home games at a good pace," Roe said. "We are confident that they are going to get sold, and we are selling tickets and continue to sell every day."

Finke said that this promotion is available to any UI student regardless of whether he or she is a season-ticket holder.

"We are offering this to our student season-ticket holders or any UI students," Finke said. "They may buy a $40 ticket and bring a friend to the game with them, or if a UI student doesn't want to buy the full season but wants to come to Saturday's game, he or she can do so."

The student-guest ticket will allow guests and UI students to sit in the student section at Kinnick Stadium.

In the last five seasons, the cost of student season tickets has risen from $154 to $175.

The price of football tickets make some students wary about purchasing them.

"I wish I had gone [to a game], but it was very expensive, so I would just drop it," UI junior Zhuozhi Huang said. "I think if the price was acceptable — like if it's about $20, then I think it would be acceptable."

Regardless of the lower ticket sales, some students with season tickets are looking forward to the upcoming games.

"I'm excited because I've never been to an Iowa football game, and I'm excited to go to other sporting events with my friends," UI junior Samantha Mueller said.

Although there is no formative answer to why ticket sales have been down, Finke said, there could be a number of reasons.

"In the past, we've started the season with Iowa State, and the school year is starting a little later," she said. "Media coverage isn't as heavy as the last couple of years."

FilmScene rushes to raise money

With only 11 days left before their fundraising goal is expected to be accomplished, FilmScene has reached the halfway mark.

By DANIEL SIEDL
daniel-siedl@uiowa.edu

With the help of more than 300 donors, a soon-to-open year-round downtown Iowa City cinema — a first in more than five years — is inching closer to its opening night.

FilmScene, a local nonprofit organization founded in the fall of 2011, has worked over the past several months in developing a first of several movie theaters in the city's center.

Downtown Iowa City has been without true cinematic offerings since the 2007 closure of Old Capitol Town Center's Campus 3 cinema. When open, Scene 1, located in the Packing & Provision Co. Building, 118 E. College St., will be a roughly 85-seat art-house cinema dedicated to American and foreign independent films alongside first-run movies not regularly offered at traditional movie theaters.

But a lack of funding prompted the group to establish a final $75,000 crowd-funding campaign.

To date, FilmScene has raised $39,363, with 11 days remaining, by 362 donors.

FilmScene cofounder Andrew Sherburne said the current pledge is just one-third of the organization's complete funding needs.

"Our prior fundraising went directly into the cinema build-out to make sure work was started on time," he said in an email. "This money is needed to finish the job. It is the most urgent and direct way for community members to ensure that we can open our doors this fall.

Specifically, the current campaign will help with the theater's construction costs, including a planned second projector on the rooftop for outdoor showings

Change coming for Twain

In addition to many changes for the Iowa City School District currently being discussed, renovations for Twain Elementary are now among them.

By EMILY FRIESE
emily-friese@uiowa.edu

One of Iowa City's oldest elementary schools is about to get an extreme makeover.

On Tuesday evening, the Iowa City School Board's Directors Operations Committee began to move forward with plans for upcoming additions and renovations to be made at Twain Elementary, 1355 Deforest Ave.

Construction is expected to start in April 2014 and is estimated to cost $5.8 million.

Local schools utilize tablets

ILLUSTRATION/ JOSHUA HOUSING

From the 2012 school year, City High expanded its iPad collection by 90 devices.

By MEGAN SANCHEZ
megan-sanchez@uiowa.edu

As technology continues to advance throughout the country, a fairly new technological platform is aiding Iowa City high schools in working toward keeping up with the trend.

For the first trimester of the new academic year, City High, 1900 Morning-side Drive, has expanded its iPad collection by 90 devices.

School officials say plans are on pace to push tablet movement in the classroom setting for the coming years at the East Side school.

The initial launch resulted in the availability of 40 iPads through a grant from the Iowa School District Foundation.

While eight of the original 40 were distributed to individual teachers, the remaining served as a traveling set for classes to check out for a month at a time.

Students also have the opportunity to bring the iPads home with them to complete homework assignments.

This school year, with the addition of the new iPads, Terry Coleman, the former vice principal and now athletics director, said teachers can take advantage of expanded checkout periods of six to eight weeks at a time, a jump from the initial four.

During that period, students can also bring the devices home with them for academic purposes, Principal John Bacon said.

Each iPad cost the school $379, with funding deriving from Microsoft settlement dollars and building level funds.

For example, Bacon said the school's student newspaper, The Little Hawk, uses the iPads to increase its online website while posting updates to the publication's Twitter and Facebook accounts.

Last year, science teachers used a method called "crowdsourcing" in which a research question was posted on the Internet, before numerous people add to content, Coleman said.

For example in one class, students studied seashell size in relation to the sea temperature, he said.

In the school's business department, instructors also used the iPads to make marketing videos, while physics teachers used them to study motion.

"We will also add a set of iPads in the library for teachers who are not ready to commit to an entire unit but want to explore these devices," he said in an email.

Last year, the pilot program was designed to test what did and did not work, Coleman said.

For sophomore Autumn Moen, the tablets were utilized in her freshman biology class for a number of interactive learning modules during the last school year.

Across town, West High, 2901 Melrose Ave., is also pushing forth in the technology movement, but it has decided to take a slightly different route than City.

The school, located on Iowa City's far West Side, has a collection of 80 Barnes and Noble Nook tablets that are used in a similar fashion.

However, teachers have access to just 35 of the devices to check out for interactive modules, lab simulations, and current-event research for various social studies classes.

West High librarian Jill Hofmocker, said the school chose to use Nook tablets because it was able to purchase them at a much cheaper rate than iPads. Each Nook cost just $150.

The funding also came from a district grant.

The first set of tablets, purchased in early 2012, were used in aiding instruction for students who struggle with reading comprehension.

In all, 25 were placed in the reading-strategies classroom.

iPads

Iowa City high schools are expanding their tablet programs for the 2013-14 school year.

City High:
• 130 iPads
• $379 per device
• Implemented in 2012
• Added 90 this year

West High:
• 80 Nook Tablets total
• $150 per device
• Implemented in 2012
• Added 20 this year

Sources: City High Principal John Bacon; City High Athletic Director Terry Coleman; West High Librarian Jill Hofmocker

For the new school year, West ordered a third set of Nooks, specifically targeted for library use.

Hofmocker said they hope students will use this particular set of 20 to read eBooks. Because the mission is to have the tablets designed for book-like use, library staff are allowing students to check them out individually.

"As a teacher/librarian, I think it is important to realize where kids will live and what their lives will be like when they leave high school," Hofmocker said. "We're still accomplishing curriculum and traditional learning, but addressing it in a way that's more 21st-century."

UI receives gold 'star' for sustainability efforts

The University of Iowa has been recognized for its efforts in sustainability.

The UI has received a Sustainability Tracking, Assessment, and Rating System gold rating from the Association for Advancement of Sustainability in Higher Education.

UI President Sally Mason said in a press release that she is pleased the UI has been recognized.

"Completing STARS is an important step in validating our sustainability achievements and charting the course toward new efforts," she said. "It is the most comprehensive report of campus sustainability progress we've produced to date. We are honored that [the association] has recognized our excellent progress."

In 2010 the UI adopted seven targets for the university to focus on to increase sustainability by the year 2020. These targets address energy conservation, renewable energy, waste diversion, carbon-efficient transportation, student success in sustainability, research, and partnerships to promote sustainability for all Iowans.

Mason also signed an agreement with the Environmental Protection Agency to formalize the school's commitment to these goals.

To receive a gold rating from the association, the UI had to turn in information about the university's achievements in 135 categories relating to sustainability. The rating system is open to all higher education institutions in the United States and Canada.

"STARS was developed by the campus sustainability community to provide high standards for recognizing campus sustainability efforts," said sustainability association Executive Director Wendy Scott in the press release. "The University of Iowa has demonstrated a substantial commitment to sustainability by achieving a STARS Gold Rating and is to be congratulated for its efforts."

Man charged with harassment

An Iowa City man has been accused of pulling a gun on a woman and threatening to kill her.

Derrill Jones, 31, was charged Monday with first-degree harassment.

According to an Iowa City police complaint, officers responded to a report of a man pulling a gun on a woman.

The woman told officials the two had been in an argument, and the suspect pulled a handgun on her. The woman, who is five months pregnant said the defendant pulled the gun on her before saying, "I will kill you and your baby."

Jones has a history of several felony convictions. His most recent was July 13, 2011, for third-degree burglary.

First-degree harassment is an aggravated misdemeanor.

Heat postpones 'Taste of Market'

The Iowa City Farmers' Market has postponed "Taste of Market" because of the current heat wave.

Taste of Market was originally scheduled for today. It has been rescheduled for Sep. 18 from 5-7 p.m.

The event will offer free samples of in-season fruits, vegetables, and baked goods provided by Farmers' Market vendors.

Kol Shira, a music group that performs a fusion of music and rhythms from around the world, has also been rescheduled for Sep. 18.

The National Weather Service has put Iowa City and Johnson County under a heat advisory until 7 p.m. today.

Iowa City was also listed under a heat advisory Monday, when the district released early as well.

Schools to dismiss early again

For the third-consecutive day, students, faculty, and staff in the state's fifth-largest school district will receive a break from the current unreasonably high temperatures.

All 25 schools in the district will dismiss two hours early today because of the heat.

Several buildings in the district lack complete air conditioning.

The National Weather Service predicts a high temperature around 93 degrees today. Heat index values are anticipated to be as high as 102.

Iowa farmers get funds to be eco-friendly

By GRETA MEYLE
greta-meyle@uiowa.edu

The Iowa Department of Agriculture is working with farmers to protect Iowa waterways.

The Legislature originally allocated $1.8 million for the farming community to practice water conservation efforts. As a result of such a high response to the program, Iowa Secretary of Agriculture Bill Northey announced on Aug. 8 that an additional $1 million in funds will be provided to help farmers exercise nitrate-reduction practices.

Officials and farmers alike agree the program will positively affect agriculture in Iowa but said there are questions yet to be answered.

"We are extremely pleased by the response from farmers," said Dustin Vande Hoef, the communication director for the Iowa Department of Agriculture.

While these funds are just now becoming available, they are part of a nutrient-reduction strategy the department has been working on since last fall. But the state isn't the only one putting funds forth. In order to partake from the funds the state is making available, farmers have to be willing to match the amount they take with their own money.

"All were willing to match it — meaning $5.5 million worth of funds will go into the ground this fall — which is exciting," Vande Hoef said.

The money farmers are eligible to apply for is intended for farmers to implement no-till and strip-till farming. The money can also be used for growing cover crops and the use of nitrification inhibitors in fertilizers.

Legislators on both sides of the political spectrum said the program is a positive step forward.

"I'm very encouraged that this is going to be a good program for Iowa and the environment," said Rep. Chip Baltimore, R-Boone.

A Democratic counterpart says farming isn't the only practice threatening the environment.

"Farms are not the only source of pollution for Iowa's lakes and streams," said Sen. Dennis Black, D-Grinnell.

Black cited urban development as a major contributor to water pollution but maintained the demand for the project is high — a satisfactory sign.

Despite the positive feedback this program is getting, one University of Iowa expert said the program could lead to other concerns.

"The idea of reducing pollutants is a good one, but the question is what is the burden on the farmers — will it potentially increase food prices down the line and what are the other details of the program," said Tim Hagle, a UI associate professor of political science. "This will determine how effective the program is."

Keith Summerville, the chairman of the advisory board for the Leopold Center of Sustainable Agriculture at Iowa State University, said it remains to be seen how the funding will affect the high level of nitrates in the water.

"If we can identify the watersheds that are most significantly affecting the problem and direct those funds there, I think we will be better off," he said.

One area farmer said the practices are ideal for farmers but are not always a logical option.

"A lot of times these programs are great, but if the funding is not actually available, they're only great in theory," Steve Swenka said.

But with funding now

The water plant is seen on the Iowa River bank on Tuesday. (The Daily Iowan/Emily Burds) becoming available and in light of recent concerns over environmental concerns connected to farming practices, Swenka said farmers have been keeping conservation on their minds and will continue to do so.

"I believe farmers have been doing a great job, and we have progressed forward," he said.

Escape from the heat

- Iowa City residents and University of Iowa students can escape the high temperatures this week by checking in at any of the following Iowa City facilities:
- Robert A. Lee Recreation Center, 220 S. Gilbert St., and Scanlon Gymnasium/Mercer Park Aquatic Center, 2701 Bradford Drive, offer indoor recreational activities.
 - The city's pool and splash pads are open for swim hours throughout the week. Lee Pool and City Park Pool are open from 1-4:30 p.m. and 1-5 p.m., respectively. Splash pads in Wetherby Park and Fairmeadows Park are open daily until 8 p.m. for no fee.
 - The Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., is open 10 a.m.-9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m.-8 p.m. on Friday.
 - The Senior Center, 28 S. Linn St., is open between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The trouble with voter ID

Kellen Gracey
kellengraceydi@gmail.com

On Aug. 12, North Carolina passed one of the most egregious voting-rights bills in American history, a bill that has prominent members of the Republican Party chastising North Carolina legislators for damaging the party's reputation.

In addition to eliminating a variety of policy measures aimed at reducing the state's ability to disenfranchise voters, the bill also requires people to have universal photographic IDs in order to vote. The debate over voter-ID laws is not limited to North Carolina, however. In fact, more than 1,000 voter-ID bills have been considered in 46 states (including Iowa) since 2001.

Still, many people don't seem to think requiring voters to show IDs is a big deal. The underlying numbers tell a much different story.

A national survey by the Brennan Center for Justice in 2006 found that roughly 11 percent of the electorate lacks government-issued photographic identification of the type required by such laws. In addition, after Pennsylvania considered a similar law, state officials estimated that more than 758,000 citizens lacked acceptable photo IDs in that state alone — a state President Obama won by only 605,820 votes in 2008.

Despite the potential for disenfranchisement, proponents of these laws claim they are necessary to curb the voting fraud they say is endemic in modern American elections. But when proponents of such laws are unable to provide proof of the widespread voter fraud necessitating draconian measures, I can't help but wonder if there is perhaps an ulterior motive aside from protecting the integrity of the ballot box.

Indeed, how important is requiring IDs at the polls when the majority of electoral fraud occurs either via absentee ballot or by election judges — two problems unaddressed by voter-ID legislation?

As a society of free and equal people, it is important to cool down the rhetoric and look at the underlying facts: People who lack the necessary IDs fit a certain demographic profile. They are largely economically marginalized, either very young or very old, and usually belong to non-white minority groups. A quick glance at survey research and exit polls reveals these groups tend to vote Democratic on Election Day.

No surprise, then, that it's the Republican Party pushing voter-ID bills across the country.

As if all this weren't enough, I'd like to point out one particularly striking measure in the North Carolina bill that may hit home with University of Iowa students, where the Legislature has attempted to pass voter-ID legislation as recently as this spring. College students will no longer be able to use student IDs to vote in North Carolina.

In 1979, the Supreme Court upheld the right for college students to vote where they reside and go to school. Now, this right is being denied to students who live in and attend school in North Carolina but don't have state-issued ID cards.

Nationwide, voter-ID bills have pervaded statehouses in spite of the fact that evidence of widespread fraudulent voting at the country's polling places hasn't manifested itself to justify disenfranchising millions of people.

I grant that it occurs on a small-scale, but even evidence of that is hard to come by. Voter-ID laws seem more of a solution in search of problem than something our elected representatives should be wasting time and money on.

Spying strains trust in gov't

Since its inception, the United States has tried to set a shining example for the rest of the world. The virtues of freedom and democracy were broadcast across the globe through the spread of our culture. For those coming from oppressive, dictatorial regimes, the United States promised something more: a government they could trust.

But through its recent actions, our government and its agencies have been sending a different message: Do as I say, not as I do.

The Daily Iowan Editorial Board believes the U.S. government has, over the past few months, strained the trust of its allies and citizens, and serious efforts must be made to improve transparency.

The most prominent abuse of the public's trust by the government is the continued misleading statements from officials regarding the extent of the NSA's domestic and foreign surveillance programs.

On Aug. 15, a declassified internal audit surfaced that showed the NSA had frequently overstepped its legal limits in surveillance. Since 2008, the agency has broken privacy rules thousands of times every year. The organization characterized most of the violations as "unintended mistakes."

The agency also engaged in illegal surveillance, abusing its power and the lack of oversight given to it by a trusting public. The NSA collected thousands of emails from American citizens without warrants. The email collection was found unconstitutional in a 2011 FISA court opinion.

The NSA even hacked into internal U.N. communication networks, and it operates covert eavesdropping posts in dozens of U.S. embassies and consulates across the globe, according to leaked documents obtained by the German magazine Der Spiegel. In the wake of these revelations, the United Nations will "reach out" to the United States in regards to surveillance. One U.N. spokesman cited international treaties such as the Vienna Convention that, in addition to other things, guards against the seizure of diplomatic documents and property.

One has to wonder what spying on our own allies would do to international relations, some of which are already strained in the wake of the Obama administration's hypocritical approach to watchdogs in government, urging that foreign countries protect whistleblowers while simultaneously prosecuting twice as many leak cases under the Espionage Act than all other administrations combined.

In fact, in 2008, information documents on Obama's campaign website included a paragraph on the imporance of protecting whistleblowers, saying such "acts of courage and patriotism, which can sometimes save lives and often taxpayer dollars, should be encouraged rather than stifled." Mysteriously, the paragraph has disappeared from Obama's website.

The American people have given their elected officials some leeway in establishing oversight for the surveillance programs that now monitor the country's communications. But for many, the surveillance programs have crossed a line.

Martha Hampel, the cofounder of the Iowa City based StopBigBrother.org, which successfully petitioned the Iowa City City Council to ban traffic cameras and surveillance drones this spring, says Iowans are fed up with being spied on.

"We're definitely hearing Iowa City and Iowa citizens in general saying enough is enough," she said. "And people in Congress are realizing that this is not what the American people want."

On July 24, the House defeated an amendment designed to stop the NSA's mass collection of phone records by a 217-205 vote.

Hampel said recent shifts in public opinion, as well as the close House vote, has the group feeling optimistic.

"We're not alone," she said. "A lot of people are becoming aware of the violations of their Fourth Amendment rights and are taking action."

Indeed, it seems that the American public has started to turn against the idea of a government with powerful surveillance programs at the cost of privacy. In a poll of American citizens released in late July, the Pew Research Center found that "47 percent say their greater concern about government antiterrorism policies is that they have gone too far in restricting the average person's civil liberties, while 35 percent say they are more concerned that policies have not gone far enough to protect the country ... the first time in Pew Research polling that more have expressed concern over civil liberties than protection from terrorism since the question was first asked in 2004."

Though some may argue that the NSA needs limited oversight and powerful surveillance tools in order to catch terrorists, the blatant misrepresentation of facts and repeated abuses of its legal power show that the agency cannot be trusted with its mandate unless major changes are made.

Take a more serious tone on rape

Moira Jorgensen
moira-jorgensen@uiowa.edu

Rape is never a funny subject.

But, while watching the anti-rape section of the College Expectations class (an online class for incoming students that includes videos and a test on anything and everything involving rape, sexual assault, and the like), I caught myself laughing. Laughing at an anti-rape video.

I like to think that I am not the kind of person who finds pleasure in such things.

However, in the case of the College Expectations course, I couldn't help but laugh. The video was cheesy, fake, and at times so awkward it was embarrassing.

What I learned most from this course is a variety of terms used for sex that I had never heard of before (for example: "punish her").

For something so serious and so common (according to the course, 25 percent of college women are either raped or subjected to an attempted rape) the videos should be something that sticks with freshmen and actually makes them think about the seriousness of rape and sexual assault, instead of how one would use the term "punish her" in a sentence.

I'm not saying UI should get rid of the course entirely. Even though the course feels as if it takes around 40 hours and tends to crash my browser, I applaud the university for trying something to prevent and fight against rape.

At the University of Iowa, and many of the nation's universities, rape and sexual assault are major problems. According to the American College Health Association's National College Health Assessment for the UI, in the past 12 months, 9.4 percent of women have been involved in sexual touching without consent, 6 percent have been involved in attempted sexual penetration without consent, and 3.5 percent have been sexually penetrated without consent.

However, the tone of the videos they're showing don't match the seriousness of this problem. The characters that walk the viewers through the lessons are little more than stereotypical goofballs.

There's the impossibly meat-headed guy who doesn't understand why he needs to learn about rape because rape is like, such a rare thing, bro. There's the girl who is constantly shocked and amazed by the facts she's learning, and then there are the two people patiently explaining the facts of rape to these ignorant young whippersnappers. It's like watching an after-school special on something trivial, like why you should eat your veggies or ask your parents before you go on the computer.

But the whole video need not be scrapped. One component of the videos that really affected me was when real rape survivors shared their experiences. Unfortunately, these brief segments were continually overshadowed by the long "let's talk about what rape means" sections and the awkward, repetitive pre-rape scenes that belie how traumatic rape really is.

If rape survivors were made a bigger part of the program, maybe sharing the warning signs they missed and how they recovered from it, the program as a whole would be much more effective. Freshmen would think more about the serious emotional and physical consequences that come from rape, as well as how they can prevent and stop it, if the lessons were coming from real women with real experiences instead of actors behaving like cartoon characters.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR/ ONLINE

Scofflaws, not homeless, should be targets

I agree with many statements in the editorial "Proposed rules only hide homelessness" (D/I, Aug. 26) but feel the need to add more comments:

As far as people being comfortable downtown, we who behave ourselves have to put up with smokers puffing away beside no smoking signs, careless skateboarders, careless bike riders (unlawful), litterers (unlawful), and "screamers." This group is much more plentiful than the current population under risk of removal because of their looks and poverty.

If any group needs to suffer consequences of their actions, it is the scofflaws described above, primarily young, who feel above the law and act above the law with impunity because they are not ticketed at the same rate and have no fear of serious consequences in Iowa City.

If the daily blotter reflects the actual arrests or ticketing of that group, it is an incredibly smaller rate of police action relative to the size of that population compared with the homeless.

I'd love to see the City Council take a real look at that and do something about it.

Thank you, Walk It Out

The HIV Program and Virology Clinic at the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics would like to thank Walk It Out for its generous donation toward patient care in our clinic. Walk It Out is a UI student organization that brings various cultures together annually to showcase their cultures through a multicultural fashion show held at the IMU. For the second-straight year, Walk It Out sought to raise HIV awareness and raise money for an HIV/AIDS-related organization. We are extremely pleased that the donations raised at this year's event were given to our HIV Patient Fund, housed in the Department of Social Services at the UIHC. More than $3,000 was raised to help support patients in need of assistance for travel to UIHC for their appointments and for other services.

University official to run for Coralville mayor

By MEGAN DEPPE
megan-deppe@uiowa.edu

Following the announcement by the city of Coralville's long-term mayor Monday that he will not seek re-election, another city official has come forward with hopes of landing the seat.

Coralville resident and Mayor Pro-Tem John Lundell will throw his hat in the city government ring once again.

John Lundell
mayor pro-tem

The 33-year-old Lundell made the announcement official in a Tuesday press release.

Lundell's term on the council is set to end this year.

Coralville Mayor Jim Fausett, who has been involved in the city government for the past 50 years and has been in his current position since 1996, said he is very pleased that Lundell will run.

In fact, he said, he had hoped that Lundell would.

"John has been on the council for 10 years and has always proven to be a person who keeps the citizens of Coralville first in his mind," Fausett said. "Both he and his wife are well respected in the community and to me he is the type of person who would do a great job."

Lundell, a graduate of the University of Iowa, said if elected, he plans to focus on flood-mitigation projects and attracting more businesses to the city.

For nearly two decades, he has held the post of deputy director of the UI Injury Prevention Research Center in the College of Public Health, and he is an active member in several organizations in Johnson County such as the Johnson County Emergency Communications Center Policy Board.

Lundell's wife, Diane, served on Coralville's city council before retiring in 2001. She is currently an assistant vice president for marketing and communication for UI Health Care. They couple has two children.

"In the next year or two we will have finished all of our protection projects to protect Coralville from future floods," Lundell said.

Lundell said he is proud of city staff for taking accurate measurement of the floodwater levels in 2008 so that the city was able to make very accurate plans to prevent a flood of the same magnitude.

City Administrator Kelly Hayworth echoed Fausett's support of Lundell's decision to run.

"John has been a very good resource as a councilor, and he's shown that he's very interested in the community," he said.

Hayworth said whoever the new mayor of Coralville might be, the biggest issue for her or him to focus on is the city's Community Plan Initiative that is currently in effect.

The plan will address many issues that Coralville faces, including land use and development, transportation and circulation, community facilities, environmental features, and parks and open space. It will also provide more detailed plans for several key areas in the community.

Hayworth said this plan could be in effect for the next 10 to 20 years, and the future mayor will need to lead the council and community involvement in the plan.

"I think it's great that John is considering running for office," Hayworth said. "He's a good candidate."

Lundell was first elected to the Coralville City Council in 2003 for a two-year term after Dave Jacoby was elected to the Iowa House of Representatives.

Lundell has served in two additional four-year teams in 2005 and 2009, and has served as mayor pro tem since 2009.

"I am proud of the work we have accomplished to establish Coralville as one of the finest cities in the state," he said. "Like Mayor Fausett, I have dedicated myself to serving the community and hope to continue doing so as mayor."

Through Sept. 19, pro-

John Lundell

John Lundell said in a press release he has accomplished many things during his tenure on the Coralville City Council. Some that he is most proud of include:

- Numerous economic-development initiatives, such as the success of the Iowa River Landing.
- Working with the mayor and council to help the city recover from the 2008 flood.
- Ensuring that Coralville has the finest police and fire protection of any city of its size in the country.

spective City Council and mayor candidates can file to be apart of the city's governing body. Lundell is the first to announce his intent to run for mayor.

and a community area on the main floor with a café and seating area.

Additionally, the dollars raised will mostly go toward covering previous and future expenses, including construction and the day-to-day operation of the theater.

Sherburne said the campaign is “all or nothing,” meaning that if the establishment doesn’t meet its goal, it will give back to the donors all of the money that had been raised.

Sherburne and co-founder Andy Brodie hope to open the cinema near the campaign end date of Sept. 8.

If they don’t meet the goal of the campaign, the opening could be pushed back months and might even go into next year, Sherburne said.

Members of the Iowa City business community included in the Founders Circle — donors of $1,000 or more, include Buzz Salon, Hands Jewelers, and MidWestOne bank.

Several programs have been organized for the upcoming months, with the first showing during September being a special Friday the 13th event for individuals who have donated $40 or more.

A public grand opening with a showing of the 1924 film He Who Gets Slapped, followed by an Alloy Orchestra performance for 75 guests are slated for Oct. 3.

The main cinema space will seat roughly 80, including two rows of couches.

In addition to this main watching area,

The seats in FilmScene’s Scene 1 cinema are shown on Tuesday. The theatre is expected to be open to the public on Oct. 3, 2013. The seats were salvaged from Hancher Auditorium. (The Daily Iowan/Joshua Housing) seating and event space will be available on the rooftop patio, where the planned second projector will be used to show outdoor films.

At least two films will be shown each night, with a few late-night and matinee options available on the weekends.

While new releases will be shown, particularly independent films, Sherburne said the group is also planning on playing a number of classics and family-oriented series.

He maintained that the organization has a full-time staff dedicated to keeping the new theater open 365 days a year.

The new facility is a part of a more than $1.6 million in historic restorations to the two-story building under the direction of Moen Group developer Marc Moen.

Moen declined to comment for this story.

While FilmScene is not working alone on this project — a partnership with the University of Iowa’s longtime Bijou Cinema was made official in July — few organizational adjustments have come to pass in the recent months.

“In some ways, it’s business as usual,” Bijou Executive Director Jesse Kreitzer said.

Kreitzer said despite the new location, all of the traditional business done by the Bijou will remain the same.

The more than 40-year-old independent and student-run cinema announced the closing of its on-campus location in the IMU in July.

Under the new partnership, Bijou staff will also serve a liaison between FilmScene theater and the UI. Because the Bijou no longer has to directly run the day-to-day operations of the theater, Kreitzer said, it will have lower overhead costs, open up opening up new opportunities for the organization, such as collaborating with other university programs.

“It’s a good time to be bringing on new members,” he said.

But despite the cinematic investment, several UI students who spoke with The Daily Iowan on Tuesday said they were unaware of the new movie-going offering.

“I would go to that,” UI junior Keaton Williams said, referring specifically to the rooftop viewing area and café.

Administration tilting toward Syrian strike

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration tried to bolster its case Tuesday for possible military action against Syria within days, with intelligence agencies preparing to release intercepted communications aimed at proving Bashar Assad perpetrated a large-scale chemical-weapons attack on civilians. “There’s no doubt who is responsible for this heinous use of chemical weapons in Syria: the Syrian regime,” Vice President Joe Biden said.

The U.S. and international partners were unlikely to undertake military action before Thursday. That’s when British Prime Minister David Cameron will convene an emergency meeting of Parliament in which lawmakers are expected to vote on a motion clearing the way for a British response to the alleged chemical weapons attack.

President Obama and Cameron conferred on response plans Tuesday, their second known conversation in recent days.

Administration officials argued that Assad’s actions posed a direct threat to U.S.

national security, providing Obama with a potential legal justification for launching a strike without authorization from the United Nations or Congress. However, officials did not detail how the U.S. was directly threatened by an attack contained within Syria’s borders. Nor did they present concrete proof that Assad was responsible.

“Allowing the use of chemical weapons on a significant scale to take place without a response would present a significant challenge to, threat to the United States’ national security,” White House spokesman Jay Carney said.

Assad has denied using chemical weapons, calling the allegations “preposterous.”

Obama is weighing a response focused narrowly on punishing Assad for violating international agreements that ban the use of chemical weapons, an act the president repeatedly has said would cross a “red line.” Officials said the goal was not to drive the Syrian leader from power or affect the broader trajectory of Syria’s bloody civil war, which is now in its third year.

“The options we are considering are not about regime change,” Carney told reporters.

According to U.S. officials, the most likely operation would be largely sea-based, with the strikes coming primarily from Navy warships in the Mediterranean Sea. Fighter jets often are deployed to monitor the area and protect the ships, but Syria’s robust air-defense system makes air strikes more difficult and risky.

Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel said military forces stand ready to strike Syria immediately if the commander in chief gives the order. The Navy has four destroyers in the eastern Mediterranean within range of targets inside Syria and also has warplanes in the region.

“We are ready to go,” Hagel said during a television interview while traveling in Asia.

Ahead of any strike, the U.S. also plans to release additional intelligence it says will directly link Assad to the Aug. 21 attack in the Damascus suburbs. Syrian activists say hundreds of people were killed in the attack. A U.S. official said the intelligence report is expected to include “signals intelligence” — information gathered from intercepted communications.

All of the officials insisted on anonymity because they were not authorized to publicly discuss the internal deliberations.

Even before releasing that information, U.S. officials said they had very little doubt that Assad was culpable in the attack based on witness reports, information on the number of victims and the symptoms of those killed or injured, and intelligence showing the Syrian government has not lost control of its chemical-weapons stockpiles.

Other administration officials echoed Biden’s comments, which marked a subtle shift in the administration’s rhetoric on who bears responsibility for the attack. Earlier in the week officials would say only that there was “very little doubt” Assad was responsible.

Obama, Biden, and other senior administration officials have spent much of the week seeking to rally international support for an aggressive response to the chemical weapons attack. The president spoke Tuesday with Prime Minis-

Vice President Joe Biden speaks during the American Legion’s annual convention at the George R. Brown Convention Center in Houston on Tuesday. ter Stephen Harper of Canada, a NATO ally, and has also talked to French President François Hollande and Australian Prime Minister Kevin Rudd.

Along with Britain, France appears poised to back the U.S. response. In Paris, Hollande said on Tuesday that France was “ready to punish those who took the heinous decision to gas innocents.” The Arab League, a 22-member body dominated by Saudi Arabia and Qatar, also called for justice, laying blame for the attack on the Syrian government. Italy, meanwhile, insisted that any strike should be authorized by the U.N. Security Council.

The flurry of action was in stark contrast to Obama’s previously restrained approach to Syria’s civil war, which has left more than 100,000 people dead, according to U.N. estimates. He has resisted calls for a more robust U.S. response, underscoring the scant appetite among the American public for a long involvement in another Middle East war.

METRO

Also at the Tuesday’s School Board meeting

David Dude, the Iowa City School District’s director of information, discussed the state of technology in the School District and its needs for the future.

To date, there are approximately 6,200 computers in the district, he said. The district averages a little over two students per student computer, which has doubled from last year, he said.

Multimedia projectors, document cameras, and interactive whiteboards are being implemented in all classrooms, and close to 100 percent of teaching stations have a projector, document camera, and interactive whiteboard.

High-speed bandwidth has been implemented at 23 out of 25 schools in the district. The three schools without high-speed bandwidth are Lincoln, Hills, and Longfellow.

Dude said it is still in the district’s plans to implement the technology in these schools sometime in the future.

A plan has also been developed to improve Wi-Fi in the district by the end of the 2013-14 school year, he said.

Discussions to improve technology in the classrooms to include technology mentors helping teaching staff understand how to use it was also mull-

Sewage break

Duane Van Hemert, the district’s physical plant director, said West High School’s main sewer trunk has been cut and compromised due to a mistake made by an AT&T installation crew.

While AT&T was installing a cell phone tower at Kinnick Stadium, the company hit a sewer trunk. Assuming they hit groundwater, they filled the hole up with concrete. Hitting and filling the trunk caused it to back up with sewage the day before the first day of school, on Aug. 21

Van Hemert said district officials are working on removing the excess sewage and hope to have most of it removed by this weekend.

Erosion under bleachers

West High is teaming up with engineers to work on a solution to fix erosion occurring under the bleachers of the school.

Hemert said officials plan on breaking the project into two halves. One-half will occur during the middle of the high-school football season when there are no scheduled games.

Van Hemert said this project will be discussed further at the next meeting. — by Emily Friese

SCHOOLS

The original project scope includes new heating and air conditioning, new windows and wall systems, and replacement of the gym lighting.

Twain Principal Mary Bontrager said they often teach in difficult conditions because of some of the school's outdated systems.

"There are teachers who taught in 100-degree classrooms today, and we did not have one person complain," she said. "These staff members work their tails off for these kids and they want the best for them."

Superintendent Steve Murley agreed that the teaching staff at Twain is working hard to fight the heat and that issue needs to be addressed.

"With that kind of the heat, it's really hard for the kids to stay focused without air conditioning," he said. "The kids start to wilt throughout the day. We want to make sure we give the students the proper conditions to learn and grow. This is the first step in the process."

Shive-Hattery, an Iowa City architecture and engineering design firm, furnished the plans for renovations.

Tandi Dausener, an architect for Shive Hattery, said there were various problem areas in the school that need to be addressed, and it makes more sense to tie the plans into one project versus creating many smaller projects.

Additional ideas for the project include replacement of outdated floorings and ceilings, replacement of deteriorated millwork, and alternative electrical and piping, which would stand in place to the current obsolete systems.

"Lighting doesn't meet current codes for efficiency, and the water piping in this building tends to clog up," she said.

Along with the original project scope, plans for restroom upgrades, additional classrooms, a gymnasium, and safety and security upgrades are included in the renovations.

Approximately 12,000 square-feet are expected to be added the roughly 250-student, 23-classroom school.

The proposed layout for the building is designed to create a loop in the courtyard of the school, Dausener said. This allows for the addition of a new small classroom, gymnasium, three restrooms and two kindergarten classrooms.

Twain kindergarten teacher Megan Beuning said having restrooms close to the classroom is important.

"As an outsider, you may not know how important it is to have a bathroom for kindergarteners," she said. "At the beginning of the year, we're often teaching the kids how to use the bathrooms, and we can take up to 20 minutes with the bathrooms, because we have to take whole classroom breaks. When you have one near your classroom, I can have one kid use the bathroom while I'm still teaching."

The loop will also allow for the art room, music room, and gymnasium to all be focused in one area.

School music teacher Becky Fields-Moffitt, who has been teaching her classes in a portable classroom, said she is very excited to have a classroom at the building.

"When [the students] are with me, they don't go to the bathroom," she said. "This would be amazing that these kids would be able to use the restroom. This is just a great way to improve the education of our kids."

Twain reading teacher Chris DeNeice said it would be nice to have specialized classrooms in the same area of the school.

"Students will have to go from one end of the building to the other," she said. "Saving the educational time is crucial."

Bontrager said she was pleased with the plans and excited to complete the project.

"We want to develop an environment for optimal learning," she said. "I think our kids deserve a great facility, and that's what it comes down to. They need a facility that shows them they are important and valued in the community, and that's what this plan shows."

Brewers squeeze past slumping Pirates

Milwaukee Brewers' Scooter Gennett (left) evades the tag of Pittsburgh Pirate catcher Russell Martin to score from second on an RBI single by Jonathan Lucroy in the fifth inning on Tuesday in Pittsburgh. (Associated Press/Keith Srakocic)

By JOHN PERROTTO
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Aramis Ramirez had 3 hits, including his 350th career home run, and he drove in 4 runs as the Milwaukee Brewers edged the Pittsburgh Pirates, 7-6, on Tuesday night.

The 16-year veteran third baseman helped stake the Brewers to a 5-0 in the fifth inning, but the Pirates rallied to tie it in the sixth. But Milwaukee pulled out the win when rookie pinch-hitter Caleb Gindl hit a tiebreaking sacrifice fly in the eighth inning.

With the game tied 6-6, Rafael Betancourt hit a one-out double off Bryan Morris (5-7) and took third on Scooter Gennett's single. Gindl then lifted a fly to right that scored Betancourt and gave the Brewers their third victory in four games.

Pittsburgh, which entered the day one-half game behind St. Louis in the NL Central, lost its third in a row.

Milwaukee's Norichika Aoki reached base in all five plate appearances, with two singles and three walks. Jonathan Lucroy added three hits, and Gennett had two.

Pedro Alvarez went 4-for-4 with a walk, and hit his NL-leading 32nd home run for the Pirates. Neil Walker had a 3-run homer among his 2 hits. Andrew McCutchen, Andrew Lambo and Felix Pie also had 2 hits.

Earlier Tuesday, the Pirates acquired right fielder Marlon Byrd and catcher John Buck from the New York Mets to bolster an offense that ranks 24th in the major leagues in runs. Both players are expected to join the team on Wednesday.

With the Pirates down by a run, McCutchen doubled and Alvarez walked with one out in the ninth, but Jim Henderson held on for his 22nd save in 25 opportunities.

Rob Wooten (3-0) allowed Alvarez's homer but pitched 1.1 innings for the win.

Both starting pitchers had rough outings. The Brewers' Kyle Lohse gave up 5 runs and 13 hits in 5.1 innings. Pirates All-Star left-hander Jeff Locke was tagged for 5 runs and 8 hits in 4.2 innings.

Lohse had been 4-1 with a 2.05 ERA in seven starts since the All-Star break.

Locke's struggles continued — he has allowed 16 runs and 23 hits in 11.1 innings in his last three starts. Over his last seven outings, he is 0-2 with a 7.02 ERA.

Alvarez tied it at 6-6 by lining a solo home run off the right-field foul pole, snapping a tie with Arizona's Paul Goldschmidt for the league lead.

Milwaukee had gone ahead by a run in top of the inning when Ramirez lined a two-out RBI double to center that scored Lucroy, who had singled.

A first-inning run scored when Ramirez grounded into a double play. He hit a solo home run, his eighth of the season, with one out in the fourth. After Lucroy hit a two-out RBI single in the fourth, Ramirez followed with a two-run double that put the Brewers up 5-0.

The Pirates came back to tie it with 4 runs in the fifth and 1 in the sixth.

Pie drove in the first run with a pinch-hit double and, one batter later, Walker hit his ninth home run, a 3-run shot that carried over the right-field stands.

Pie, who remained in the game to play left field, made it 5-5 in the sixth with a run-scoring single.

Head coach Tracey Griesbaum's Iowa field-hockey squad will start the 2013 season ranked No. 13 in the National Field Hockey Coaches' Association poll.

The Hawkeyes have been ranked for 22-straight weeks in the polls dating back to Sept. 6, 2011.

Other Big Ten teams in the Top 20 include Penn State (6), Michigan (9), and Northwestern (11).

After a 2-0 preseason, the Hawks will begin the season on the road at Bucknell on Friday. The first games at Grant Field will be Sept. 7-8, when Iowa hosts the annual Big Ten/ACC Challenge.

Sox rally late

BRIAN SANDALOW
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Jordan Danks hit a clutch two-run single in Chicago's 3-run eighth inning, leading the White Sox to a 4-3 win over the Houston Astros on Tuesday night.

Danks finished with a career-high 3 hits as the White Sox won for the ninth time in 11 games, bouncing back from a difficult loss in the series opener. Paul Konerko, Alexei Ramirez, and Avisail Garcia had two hits apiece.

Matt Dominguez had 3 hits and 2 RBIs for the Astros, who had won three of four. Dominguez and Chris Carter hit consecutive two-out homers off closer Addison Reed to give Houston a 10-8 victory on Monday night.

The Astros appeared to be headed to their second-straight victory over the White Sox before the rally in the eighth.

With two outs and runners on first, Konerko singled in Jeff Keppinger to cut Houston's lead to 3-2. Garcia's infield hit then loaded the bases for Danks, who put the White Sox in front with a single to center.

Reed then came in and worked the ninth for his 36th save in 41 tries. Robbie Grossman had a two-out double for his third hit, but Reed got L.J. Hoes to bounce out to shortstop to end the game.

Donnie Veal (2-3) got one out for the win.

White Sox left-hander Jose Quintana allowed 3 runs and 8 hits over 7.2 innings in his 16th no-decision, tops in the major leagues.

Dominguez had an RBI double in the fourth and a run-scoring single in the sixth. Carter hit an RBI single off Jake Pitricka in the eighth, making it 3-1.

Freshman Advice (1/3):

- Coralville and North Liberty are “the suburbs” and should only be referred to as such.
- Need to make new friends? Just lounge around the Ped Mall all day panhandling money for American Spirit cigarettes. Suddenly, everyone’s on your side.
- College can be an intense time, spiritually. Avail yourself of any one of same-sounding and predominantly white churches in the area.
- When it comes to textbooks, instead of buying new ones, try just winging it.
- It’s important to know your limits; only try one new drug each week. I mean, seriously, you wouldn’t do an entire semester’s worth of homework in the first month, right? Same principle.
- Make money whenever and wherever you can. Do you enroll for next semester earlier than most? Just sign up for the most popular courses, then sell your spots on Craigslist for $50/seat.
- Keep in mind that people from all cultures and walks of life come to Iowa to be bored to death. Be respectful.
- College is half about education and half about networking, so only sleep with the TAs you absolutely know are in good standing with their departments (and don’t let the sense of entitlement most grad students have get you down; the vast majority of us are only here because we couldn’t find jobs).
- For every minute of class you miss, burn a $10 bill. Seriously.

horoscopes

- Wednesday, August 28, 2013 by Eugenia Last
- ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get out and enjoy your friends and new activities. Visiting a destination you have never been to before will open up all sorts of new possibilities. Compromise, but don't overcompensate for someone else. Romance will enhance your life.
 - TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't allow anger to come between you and a workable solution. Stubbornness is not going to help you get what you want. Reverse psychology will help you gain approval with someone who can persuade others to see things your way.
 - GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Hold back; allow others to voice opinions. Once you know where everyone stands, you will be in a better position to make suggestions that will have a positive influence and bring about interesting options. Love is in the stars.
 - CANCER (June 21-July 22): Networking will result in suggestions that can lead to travel or experience that will enable you to move in a better direction. Ask questions; share thoughts. A partnership will bring you closer to your goals. Don't make personal changes.
 - LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Compromise to avoid a rift with someone who can cause personal problems. Strive to free up time to make directional alterations. Pick up knowledge that will make it easier to deal with those set in their ways and likely to cause problems.
 - VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep your feelings and your emotions under control. Emotional deception is apparent and must be considered before you make a move that may have a negative effect on your financial future. Practical choices will far outweigh an impulsive short-term fix.
 - LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your emotions will not lead you astray. Take note of your feelings, but don't take action. Someone you are dealing with will overreact, giving you the opportunity to make a move that will put you in a positive position.
 - SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't let anyone bait you into an argument. Listen to what's being said, and take time to absorb what has happened and what works best for you. You are sitting in a much better position than you realize. Bide your time.
 - SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stick close to home. Dealing with institutions or people who are quick to manipulate or twist your words will create problems when you travel or try to take care of paperwork. Domestic changes will bring good results.
 - CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Look over deals, contracts, and investments or research a health issue that concerns you, and you will find a way to address it. A problem with a friend, relative, or neighbor can affect your relationship with someone you love.
 - AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Talks will not help you solve a problem you have with someone. Do your own thing, and follow a path that will ensure your happiness and satisfaction. It's best to be honest if you want to put an end to a difficult situation.
 - PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emotions will escalate, and confusion will set in with regard to a partnership you thought you could count on. Look over your finances, and make sure you have protected your possessions and assets. Expand your interests and friendships.

returning back combos among the other Big Ten schools.

"Both [Bullock] and Mark Weisman, I don't know if we had any guys work harder than those two in the spring," head coach Kirk Ferentz said at the team's media day on Aug. 8. "They're much better football players than they were last November. It's a credit to both those guys. They've got great attitudes. They work hard. They're two different style backs and different style players."

Running-back coach Chris White said that he believes there are many ways that the running backs on his roster can affect the games, if they're put into the right situation, speaking specifically about finding the proper placement for Bullock.

"We're trying to get Damon in the right situation in terms of how he's carrying the ball, how we can get him the ball through throwing the football," White said. "Whether we'll spread him out, or out of the backfield. We're trying to really hone in on the packages that we want to have for the guys on the field."

With Weisman now the established first team running back, followed by Bullock and Canzeri, the junior excited to begin the season as a starter. He and the other running backs feel prepared one of the most experienced positions on the team, and they're okay with it.

"I just think if you prepare, you shouldn't feel pressure," Weisman said. "You should just go out there and have fun — that's what we're doing here: preparing, trying to get better. If you feel prepared for something, you shouldn't be pressured."

Premier.

Norlander uses a combination of speed, power, and knowledge of the game to perform at a high level.

Iowa senior Kelsey Mitchell described Norlander as having a "rocket of a shot," and head coach Tracey Griesbaum has repeatedly touted her speed and athleticism.

"She does moves that I'm just like, wow, for a freshman that's awesome," Mitchell said. "So I'm really happy to have her alongside and be coming along as quickly as she is."

The praise doesn't stop there for Norland-er; sophomore forward Natalie Cafone, who the freshman played on the same forward line with during much of the Hawkeyes Aug. 25 exhibition against Missouri State, praised her teammate's work ethic and reliability.

"I really like working with her, she's a really hard worker and she would do anything for her teammates," Cafone said. "I can always count on her and I know everyone else can count on her too."

Griesbaum knows there is a long way to go for Norlander, but is ecstatic about what she has seen so far throughout her short career as a Hawkeye.

"I don't want her to get too far ahead of herself; I think she has to get ready for each day and that week presents, and incrementally learn and take each responsibility on," Griesbaum said. "She hasn't disappointed at all. Really everything we expected she would bring from the recruiting process she has and more."

While Norlander has drawn attention thus far, she is looking forward to improving and excelling once the season officially begins on Aug. 30 at Bucknell.

When asked about the tradition from her high school in British Columbia, she had one more thing to say, showing her Canadian pride.

"Yeah, Canada is where it's at," she said. "Keep the tradition alive."

Iowa lost six games in a row to conclude 2012's nightmare of a season. Having not won a game after Oct. 13, when they defeated Michigan State in double overtime, Hawkeye players say they crave to take the field again.

"We're hungry, we've been working our tails off in camp the whole summer," cornerback Jordan Lomax said. "We're ready and eager to face another opponent ... We don't dwell on last season, it's all about this upcoming season and what we can do to better ourselves."

Coming off a shoulder injury that derailed his second season as a Hawkeye, Lomax said he is as eager as anyone to kick off the 2013 season.

"I've probably had this game circled since I found out I wasn't going to be able to play last year," the sophomore said. "It's going to be a tremendous experience Saturday. I can't wait to run out there with my teammates on my side in Kinnick and my family in the stands."

Heat to be a factor on Saturday

With temperatures expected to be in the mid-90s this weekend, endurance and conditioning will ultimately play a large role in the outcome of Saturday's game.

The Hawkeyes have the looming conditions in mind and are putting an emphasis on the weather in the preparation for Saturday.

"I'm not so much worried about conditioning as I am in our ability to recover," senior linebacker James Morris said. "Cramping is going to be an issue when people are losing a lot of fluids. And with the field turf we have, it's much hotter on the field than it is if you were to just stand on grass or on concrete."

"You just try to hydrate and plan throughout the week and during the game."

Head coach Kirk Ferentz recognized the heat as being a large factor this weekend but won't view it as an excuse if his squad cannot handle the inflated temperatures, seeing as both teams will have to deal with it.

Iowa quarterback Jake Rudock looks for a receiver in Kinnick Stadium during the spring scrimmage on April 27. (The Daily Iowan/Tessa Hursh)

"Our guys have trained in heat, and they've played in heat,"

Ferentz said. "It's a factor, but it's a little bit like rain or snow.

It's going to be equal for us as it is for them. It's just one of those things you deal with."

Cards beat Reds, extend lead

By STEVE OVERBEY

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Joe Kelly tossed 6 strong innings, and Matt Holliday drove in a run for a seventh straight game, lifting the St. Louis Cardinals to a 6-1 win over the Cincinnati Reds on Tuesday night.

St. Louis has won six of its last seven, including the first two games of this three-game set. The first-place Cardinals have won eight of their last 10 against the third-place Reds and lead them by 4.5 games in the NL Central.

The Cards also moved 1.5 games ahead of second-place Pittsburgh, which lost to Milwaukee.

Shin-soo Choo homered for Cincinnati, which lost for the fourth time in five games. The Cardinals retired the last 13 Cincinnati batters, dropping the Reds to 4-10 against St. Louis this season.

Kelly (6-3), who allowed 1 run on 9 hits, improved to 6-0 in nine starts since rejoining the starting rotation on July 6. The Cardinals have won the last six games he has started. Kelly began the season in the bullpen.

Holliday, who went 2-for-3, keyed a 2-run outburst in the first against Mat Latos (13-5), who gave up 4 runs on 9 hits over 6 innings. He struck out 4 and did not walk a batter.

The Cardinals needed just 14 pitches to take a 2-0 lead. Matt Carpenter and Carlos Beltran began the opening frame with singles. Holliday followed with a hit to right to bring in Carpenter, who scored his major league-leading 100th run. Allen Craig then hit into a double play, allowing Beltran to score from third.

Choo brought the Reds to 2-1 with a leadoff homer in the fifth, the 100th round-tripper of his career and 17th of the season.

The Cardinals answered with single runs in the sixth and seventh and scored twice in the eighth.

Craig pushed the lead to 3-1 with his team-leading 96th RBI on a run-scoring double in the sixth. Carpenter brought in Jon Jay with a sacrifice fly in the seventh. Jay and Daniel Descalso singled to start the inning.

Notes: Adam Wainwright (15-7, 2.58 ERA) will face Homer Bailey (8-10, 3.71) in the final of the three-game series Wednesday.

TEAM PREVIEW

Indiana expects to be better this time around

By RYAN PROBASCO
ryan-probasco@uiowa.edu

Indiana head coach Kevin Wilson envisioned a much more successful start to his tenure than the 5-19 record the Hoosiers posted in his first two seasons at the helm. But with 19 returning starters and possibly the most talented receiving corps in the Big Ten, the Hoosiers are poised to become a competitive team in 2013.

"Thought we had a really good winter," Wilson said at Big Ten media day on July 24 in Chicago. "Everybody always says that, but just the energy, leadership. We've worked very hard with the group to kind of cultivate some internal leaders with our football team to take some ownership."

The Hoosiers return three receivers who recorded at least 40 catches and 630 yards in 2012. Cody Latimer, Kofi Hughes, and Shane Wynn combined for 15 receiving touchdowns last year, and all three also had a catch of at least 70 yards.

Senior safety Greg Heban has a firsthand experience his teammates' playmaking ability in practice every day. And the former walk-on showed no hesitation in labeling the group as the most talented in the conference.

"I go against them every day, and they have four or five of the best receivers in the Big Ten," Heban told The Daily Iowan on July 25 at Big Ten media day. "It definitely makes us a better secondary and a better defense going against guys like Kofi, Cody Latimer, and Shane Wynn."

Heban received second team All-Big Ten recognition in 2012, and the Hoosiers will count on him to anchor the secondary again this season. But if the team is to compete like it hopes to, it will have to be better than the 104th-ranked defense in points allowed per game, as was the case a season ago.

"I think some of those young D-linemen are going to give us competition and depth," Wilson said during Big Ten media day. "And I think the linebackers, which we need to be significantly better at linebacker, are going to give us some competition, and I'm really excited about the corner and safety guys."

The Hoosiers do not lack confidence in their abilities heading into the upcoming season. And with an experienced squad, opponents would be wise to view a matchup with Indiana with as much seriousness as any other Big Ten foe.

Having lost four games by fewer than 4 points in 2012, the Hoosiers believed they would have fared much better than their 4-8 record if more luck had been on their side.

"Coming out of last year, not the season we wanted," Wilson said. "Maybe made some strides on paper. Maybe a little bit better record. But we got a great school, and we want to build a winning product and start getting the victories that we need."

Despite the lack of tangible team success during his time at Indiana, Hughes doesn't believe Indiana's potential has a true ceiling. In fact, the senior believes his team's season could conclude in Pasadena, Calif.

"I think it could be as big as the Rose Bowl," the senior said at Big Ten media days. "I think the possibilities are endless ... We are so much better than last year."

TEAM PREVIEW

Michigan poised for a big year on the gridiron

Devin Gardner is primed to lead the 2013 Michigan football team to the Big Ten championship game.

By CODY GOODWIN
cody-goodwin@uiowa.edu

Devin Gardner almost left Michigan. He thought about it when he was behind then-starter Denard Robinson for two seasons. Gardner hadn't ever been a backup in his life. Being one made him bitter.

Near the end of last season, Robinson went down with an injury. Gardner stepped in to start four of the final five games, and Michigan went 3-2. It was a small glimpse of what Maize and Blue fans will see this season with Gardner now the man behind center.

"He really showed a lot of unselfishness by moving to wide receiver, and it really became part of his DNA and what he wanted to do to help the football team," Michigan football coach Brady Hoke said about Gardner at Big Ten media days last month. "With Denard obviously getting hurt, the opportunity for Devin to get experience and move back to quarterback meant a lot. And it meant a lot for his experience and how he learned from those things, good and bad in spring ball."

Gardner is now the leader of a Michigan team that is favored to win the Legends Division. With him returns a slew of impact playmakers that will make the Wolverine offense a huge threat.

Jeremy Gallon is in his final season and will likely be Michigan's most lethal receiver. He enters his final campaign having caught a pass in 26-straight games.

Fitzgerald Toussaint is the most experienced running back on the team after suffering a season-ending injury last year against Iowa. During a healthy 2011, Toussaint eclipsed the 1,000-yard mark. He's just the 31st Michigan football player to reach that feat.

The lone offensive worry for Michigan resides on the line — particularly, the interior line. Seniors Taylor Lewan, likely an All-American and future NFL draft pick, and Michael Schofield will man the exterior lines while inexperience fills in the middle.

"The inside three spots are totally up for grabs right now," Schofield said at Michigan's media day on Aug. 11 in a release. "... definitely the most competition. It's exciting because we've never had that competition on the offensive line, and everyone's working as hard as he can to get that spot."

The Michigan defense returns as one of the nations best. The Wolverines ranked 13th in total defense at the end of the 2012 season — much of that being credited to the fifth-ranked pass defense.

Leading that unit is safety Thomas Gordon. He's appeared in 35 games over his career with 27 starts. He's picked off 3 passes and broken up 4 more in his career.

The versatile Jake Ryan also returns to the defense. A team captain, Ryan has played in 26 games — 24 of them starts — both linebacker and defensive end. (The most recent Michigan depth chart marked Ryan as injured; he's set to return by mid-October after recovering from an ACL tear.)

For Michigan, there is another big source of motivation for this coming season: It is the last before next year's division switch, which places Michigan and Ohio State in the same division. This means 2013 is Michigan's last chance to play Ohio State in the Big Ten championship game (at least until the conference realigns again).

"I think it's great, for either team, to make history," Gardner said at Big Ten media days. "If we can beat those guys twice, or if they can beat us twice ... it's an opportunity. It's another opportunity to make history."

POSITION PREVIEW

Backbone of the defense

By BEN ROSS
benjamin-d-ross@uiowa.edu

Iowa's football game against Northern Illinois on Saturday marks the beginning of something new in many ways for the Hawkeye football team.

The contest marks the commencement of a potential Jake Rudock era at quarterback. He follows Ricky Stanzi and James Vandenberg — each of whom started two seasons under center for the Black and Gold.

This season also marks one full year under offensive coordinator Greg Davis, who came to Iowa from Texas in 2012.

But to starting middle linebacker James Morris, the 2013 football season marks the beginning of the end.

"It's the beginning of the end in a good way," he said. "I want to make it a good end if I can. We're just excited to start the season and turn the page."

Iowa's linebacking unit is by far its most experienced position group. Morris, alongside fellow seniors Anthony Hitchens and Christian Kirksey, combine for 65 starts over the course of their careers. Morris is the most battle-tested of the trio, getting six starts his freshman year and gaining a full-starting role the following season. Kirksey became a full-time starter his sophomore year, and Hitchens followed his peers his junior year, when he started every game but one because injury in 2012.

But just because Hitchens came into a starting role later than the other two doesn't mean there's a chink in the chain. The weak-side linebacker led the nation in tackles for players who appeared in 11 games or fewer, recording 124 total stops.

Despite the effort Hitchens put into racking up all those tackles a year ago, Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz said that the numbers put up by Hitchens in 2012 are more a reflection of the position rather than the player, citing Kirksey, who played the weak-side backer in 2011 and recorded 110 stops on the year.

"I don't mean this in any disrespectful way to Anthony, but if Chris played that position, he'd have a lot of tackles, too," Ferentz said. "It's just kind of the nature of that position. [Iowa linebacker coach LeVar Woods] played it, Grant Steen — you go right down the row there. By nature, that position doesn't get involved as much with tackling, what have you, but it's a really critical position for us to play good defense."

The linebackers will have their work cut out for them in their first contest, when they take on Jordan Lynch at quarterback for Northern Illinois for the second-straight year. Lynch torched Iowa on the ground, rushing for 119 yards and a score, but he was held ineffective through the air, tossing for just 54 yards.

But while the upcoming season is the beginning of the end in many aspects for this Iowa football team, Kirksey said he doesn't see it as the beginning of anything. Rather, he sees each game as being the definitive end to his playing career.

"Every time I step on the field, I think of it as my last," said Kirksey, who will celebrate his 21st birthday on Saturday. "You never know what happens — injuries or anything. I just try to take that approach — every game could be my last opportunity. I know in the back of my head it is my last year, but I try to take it one day at a time and play like it's the last time with my team."

Big Ten women's hoops schedule released

The Big Ten announced its 2014 women's basketball schedule Tuesday, and the Iowa women's basketball team is set to play 16 conference games, eight in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"Our conference schedule is demanding every year, and 2014 is no exception," Hawkeye head coach Lisa Bluder said in a release. "The Big Ten is one of the toughest conferences in women's basketball. Every night we step on the court, we will face quality opponents."

"We have the opportunity to play against great teams in some very tough environments. We are also challenging our team with a difficult nonconference schedule, facing numerous teams that were in postseason play a year ago. We are excited about the 2013-14 season."

Indiana is the Hawks' first conference opponent on Jan. 2, and the schedule concludes with the Big Ten Tournament on March 6-9.

Women's golf releases schedule

The Iowa women's golf program released its 2013-14 schedule Tuesday, featuring a home event in Iowa City on Oct. 12-13.

"Our fall season provides a lot of comfort and familiarity, because we have seen three of the courses in the last couple of years," head coach Megan Menzel said in a release. "The strength of our schedule continues to get better and provides great opportunities for us to compete against some very solid competition."

The Hawkeyes will travel to Lincoln, Neb., on Sept. 9 and 10 to kick off the fall season at the Chip-N-Club Invitational. Iowa took fifth out of 13 teams in last year's contest.

The team will travel to Albuquerque, N.M., and Austin, Texas, before returning to Iowa to host the Diane Thomason Invitational on Oct. 12-13.

The Hawkeyes will conclude their fall season in Bruins Creek, N.C., at the Fighting Camel Classic on Nov. 21-22.

The Big Ten championships will be held March 25-27 in French Lick, Ind.

It's been a troubled past few years for running backs on the Iowa football team, one plagued with numerous injuries, departures, and suspensions.

But as the beginning of the 2013 season draws near, the running-back position — barring injury — is one of the team's deepest positions. Fullback converted running back Mark Weisman sits at the top of the depth chart, followed by Damon Bullock and Jordan Canzeri. The team also has redshirt freshmen Barkley Hill and Michael Malloy, who can make contributions.

"It makes everyone comfortable knowing that there's a running back there that will get the job done," Canzeri said. "If he goes down, there's a running back behind him that will do the same job and get it done just as well. It just makes us a group closer, and you as an individual better, seeing and working against competition."

Last year, injuries to Canzeri, Hill, and Bullock and lack of production from now departed halfback Greg Garmon led to the rise of Weisman, the walk-on fullback who switched to running back. Weisman became an overnight sensation before getting injured scoring an overtime-forcing touchdown against Michigan State, but he still managed to rush for 815 yards.

"You can dream about it, but you don't think it's going to happen that way," Weisman said about his quick rise to prominence. "You always have to be ready for it, because you never know when your opportunity is going to come."

Because of the injuries, the team was never able to utilize a combination of Bullock and Weisman in the backfield. But with depth and health, both could become potent threats in the backfield. The duo combined to rush for 1,585 yards and 12 touchdowns in 2012, the second most of

B.C. connection continues

Freshman Stephanie Norlander comes into Iowa as a talented recruit looking to do big things for Iowa Field Hockey.

Stephanie Norlander is well aware of the tradition established by former Hawkeye Jessica Barnett and current senior Karli Johansen — who graduated from Handsworth Secondary in North Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada — the same high school Norlander attended.

And the most evident similarity between the Iowa freshman and Barnett is the 8 on the front and back of their jersey.

"[Jess and I] went to the same high school, and now we both have come here, so that's really awesome," Norlander said.

Barnett graduated last spring as one of the most decorated field-hockey student-athletes in Hawk history, with All-American honors as a junior and senior highlighting her résumé.

Johansen and Norlander played together last summer on the Canadian Junior World Cup Team in Germany.

Even though Norlander has yet to play in a regular-season game, she is off to a hot start as a Hawkeye, recording 4 goals in the team's exhibition at Ball State on Aug. 22.

Norlander is no stranger to scoring goals. During her time playing in the Vancouver Women's Field Hockey Association from 2010-13; she scored 58 goals in 51 games. And during the 2012-13 campaign, she scored 26 times in 17 contests (an average of 1.5 per game) with West Vancouver

Hawks back Rudock

The much anticipated quarterback debate was finally settled this week as redshirt sophomore Jake Rudock was named the starter for Iowa's opening matchup against Northern Illinois.

Rudock has yet to take a snap as a college football player, but that hasn't stopped teammates from exuding supreme confidence in the Weston, Fla., native's ability behind center.

"He's a smart, detail oriented guy," halfback Mark Weisman said about Rudock. "He's very focused, very even-keeled, too. That's really what you want to be as a quarterback."

The Iowa defense, which has lined up against Rudock all off-season, has seen serious progression from the quarterback lately and believes their teammates on offense have the ability to prove doubters wrong this season.

"I'm confident in Jake," junior defensive tackle Carl Davis said. "This camp, [the offense] did some great things and blew my mind with some of the plays they ran. They're going to be a nice group, I think."

Team's urgency evident as new season arrives

With the opening game of the 2013 campaign rapidly approaching, several players and coaches have expressed the importance of
