“… The Russian proposal to force Assad to turn over chemical weapons to international monitors presents a possible alternative,” he said in a statement. “Military action should be the last resort, so this diplomatic offer, if credible and enforceable, needs to be considered.”

One political science expert said the “diplomatic pause” gives the administration a chance to complete a plan for military attacks as well as avoid a potentially embarrassing vote — due to complete a plan for military attacks as well as avoid a potentially embarrassing vote — due to the lack of support from members of both parties.

“At least up until today or yesterday, it didn’t look like Obama was going to get the support he wanted,” said Tim Hagle, a University of Iowa associate professor of political science. “Now, you expect members of the president’s party to support him on most issues, maybe grumble a little bit or roll your eyes for something you and to be in a position to respond if diplomacy fails,” he said.

UI eyes new pharmacy facility

University of Iowa offi-

A request to fund a new pharmacy facility was portionately funded for the

Eberhart said the UI also supported the lack of the bypassed facility.

12 years later, a somber day of reflection

Mayor Matt Hayek

“We shouldn’t forget what happened,” he said. “We shouldn’t forget who did it. And we shouldn’t forget all those that we lost.”

Michael Weinstock, NY volunteer firefighter on 9/11

“When I hear politicians use the expression ‘the lessons we learn on 9/11,’ I cringe,” he said. “It’s obnoxious to paint with a wide brush and use an expression like that when we all have different experiences and learn different lessons. I convinced myself that no one was so evil that they would destroy an entire continent, an entire city. That day I told myself, ‘Looks like you were wrong.’ It’s not just a day on the calendar. A lot of good people were killed, and the destruction resonates. It still hurts for me and a lot of other people.”

Milesahn Basabe, Iowa basketball forward

“It was scary for me because my grandma, who worked for the government, was right down the street when it happened,” he said. “I was in school, across the water, when it happened. We’re not considered part of the city, but we’re connected to it. I remember seeing the towers burning, which firefighters were fighting for days after.”

Emma Husar, UI sophomore

“I remember I was in the second grade, and I heard about 9/11 at school, and I remember going home and seeing my mom and dad watching TV and saying the whole of America — breathing collectively and weeping for their loss,” she said. “It’s something I’ve never forgot. At the time my sister was living in New York. She wasn’t near the site, but I remember crying for her life, wondering if she was OK and hoping that everyone there was all right.”

Ron McMullen, UI professor and former U.S. ambassador

“Every student at the University of Iowa will remember all of their lives where they were on Sept. 11, 2001,” he said. “I was at school, and it united America, and the U.S. had the entire world’s sympathy. We had a memorial service in Fiji, and when we came out of the church, every fire truck in the capital was lined up for our brothers and sisters in New York who had died trying to save others.”

Lindsay Cox, UI junior

“I was driving in the middle of a clean class, and I remember all of the teachers started to freak out and screamed ‘turn off all of our TVs and turn the floor around to go down,’” she said. “We sat back in the back of the room, silently going through the names of people who wanted to attack us.”

Ray McAllister, UI professor and former UI ambassador

“Every student at the University of Iowa was affected by 9/11 when they were on Sept. 11, 2001,” he said. “We sat in our offices, and the U.S. had the entire world’s sympathy. We had a memorial service in Fiji, and when we came out of the church, every fire truck in the capital was lined up for our brothers and sisters in New York who had died trying to save others.”

Michelle Knirr, UI freshman

“I went to a Catholic school, and all the teachers gathered us on the floor and turned on the TV, and I think we said a prayer for the families,” she said. “Remember the victims, and remember that even though we’re a country that’s strong, we are growing strong still.”

CONFESIONES DE UNA VIUDA

Por: Ruth Lapointe

El Día de los Muertos es una celebración en la que los mexicanos honran a sus seres queridos que se han ido. Es un día para recordar a aquellos que nos han fallecido y recordar su presencia en nuestras vidas.

En México, es una tradición dejar flores, velas y ofrendas en las casas de los difuntos. También se preparan comidas tradicionales como el pan de muerto, que consiste en pan dulce relleno de frutas y especias. En algunas comunidades se realizan danzas y música tradicional.

La celebración del Día de Muertos se extiende a todo el mundo hispanohablante, pero cada región tiene su propio estilo y tradiciones. En el caso de México, es una ocasión para reunir a toda la familia y recordar a sus antepasados.

Desde que fui joven, este día era especial para mí. Mi abuela era la encargada de preparar la ofrenda en nuestra casa, y siempre era un placer ver cómo traía flores frescas y velas para adornar el altar de muertos.

Otra tradición es la de visitar la tumba de nuestros seres queridos y dejarles nuestras recuerdos. En México, es una tradición dejar ofrendas con flores y velas, que se encienden para recordar a los difuntos.

En tiempo de la vida, mi abuela siempre decía: “Dedícales un recuerdo y un par de velas”. Y así lo hice cada año.

Hoy, muchos de nosotros celebramos el Día de Muertos en el extranjero, separados de nuestros seres queridos. Sin embargo, no importa la distancia, podemos llevar consigo el recuerdo de aquellos que nos han acompañado en nuestras vidas.

En esta ocasión, quisiera recordar a mis abuelos y a todos aquellos que me han dejado. Les extraño y les echo de menos, pero sé que están ahí, en el cielo, guiándome con su amor y su sabiduría.

Feliz Día de Muertos a todos. Que en este tiempo de celebración, podamos encontrar la paz y el amor que tanto necesitamos.

Student leaders back green fund

BY LAZY ABROMEIT

Despite a relatively low-attended Tuesday agenda, the UI Student Government Association approved a $10,000 pool fund for students and University of Iowa Student Government initiatives to advance campus-wide sustainability during its first Senate of Iowa Student Government meeting of the fall semester.

UISG President Ben Gillig said, “The committee will be eager to be able to move forward in a number of ways at a future date. For now, members of UISG such as Vice President Jack Cumming are dedicated to sustainability [with a] mission to forward with plans to come up with a more sustainable UI.”

UISG Sen. and Sustainability Committee Chair Steve Mather presented Senate with a three-year plan for identifying sustainability projects on campus.

Gillig said, “We started identifying these groups that are doing sustainability projects, and that there’s going to be a lot of good, just on campus.”

For UISG President Gillig, it is really important to take the students’ perceptions of sustainability seriously. The students “are really high-impact projects that will have an effect and the students will be the ones who will want to continue the program, next year,” he said.

In addition, Valde said that the program will help to bring services with things such as bike training for programs and sustainability groups that Deal with sustainability, including those that exist in LaundryView, while it will also be able to come up with a better strategy for University of Iowa Counseling and Psychological Services.

Marshall, was a two-year letterman at Iowa from 2013-14 and will play in the game, but as we all know a little earlier. If it’s a road game, we usually know a little more flexibly. Hopefully, we know things to five days ahead.

There are 23 wom- en on the cross-country roster, and NCAA rules state schools may only run eight women in a dual meet. This number is fewer depending on the number of schools competing. The only exception to this is that the list of com- petitors for the Hawkeyes is always in flux. The team will have its second and final home meet next Friday, Sept. 13, at the Cross- Country Course.

“I think it can be frustrat- ing sometimes,” said Vorderbruggen. “Sometimes, they’ll have a limit to how many people we can take, so it can be difficult. Field hockey jumps up in poll

The Iowa field hockey team moved up to No. 3 in the latest national poll after an impressive performance in its first two games of the season. The Hawkeyes have scored 10 goals in their first two games, leading them to their highest ranking in the polls since 2018.

Track and Field hires Jones

Larry Wieczorek, director of Iowa’s track and field program, announced the hiring of Alex Jones as the team’s volunteer coach. Jones, a former Iowa gymnast, brings a wealth of experience to the program and will help with short sprints, jumps, and multi-events, including the pole vault, high jump, and long jump.

B EAT STATE HEATS UP

The Iowa-Iowa State rivalry isn’t completely tuned out of the Hawkeye football team.

The Redlinger twins spend more together than just on the soccer field.

BY JACOB SHREDY

The chance of having twins is roughly 3 percent. And the likelihood of both playing soccer at Iowa is even smaller. That’s what makes Katie Redlinger and Meghan Redlinger such a rare sight. The extent of their similarities is much more than that, too.

The two have grown up with a shared love of soccer, and they started playing the game together at the age of 5. This love of soccer led both of them to the UI.

“They have a lot of really positive energy,” head coach Ron Rainey said. “They work extremely hard. And they’ve done that for us this year, which has been fun.”

While at Mid-Prairie High in Kalona, Iowa, they wanted to play together at the college level. So, it was also their top priority to be discussed when the Hawkeyes hired head coach, Phil Vettel.

“When (Iowa) started talking to us, we knew that’s where we wanted to go,” Katie Redlinger said.

“It was really an easy choice,” Meghan Redlinger said.

For most student-athletes, transition from high school to college isn’t smooth sailing. But for the Redlinger twins, college wasn’t unfamiliar territory — particularly with their sibling of another Hawkeye.

Their day is almost over. By the time Iowans can simmer down and get ready for the California game, it will be the final time in the foreseeable future that this week — hailed by many Hawkeye fans as “Beat State Week” — is just like every other week during the football season.

Nearly every member of the Iowa football team was adamant on Tuesday that this week was different. But, as Alvis shared, there are still those moments when the rivalry can’t be tuned out completely — even when it’s just friendly banter.

“I think there’s always going to be a little bit of it,” Iowa’s Alvis said. “That’s just who we are.”

Big Ten Field Hockey fans collectively held their breath when Iowa-State quarterback Brian Mardier was forced to leave Ohio State’s backfield during the Buckeyes’ victory over San Diego State due to a sprain of his ankle.

Senior Kenny Gouton profitably filled in for Mardier, throwing for two scores and running in another. Head coach Urban Meyer said he was very pleased with his backup’s ability to step up.

“I think he did a very admirable job,” Meyer said during Tuesday’s Big Ten Tour. “He’s such a good player and he knows what to do. He distributed the ball all around, he distributed the ball extremely well.”

Meyer said he was optimistic about Iowa State’s game against California this weekend, but noted that he’ll have to showcase significant improvement in practice if he is to play.

Meyer praised on a tremendously limited basis Tuesday. He said that the right play planting and mobility is all he would advise anyone to do to win a game.

“I’m fairly optimistic I’ve been told, but the improvement made between (Day 1) and 5 is very important and usually substantial,” Meyer said. “We’ll see more in tour.”

Michigan gets ‘huge win’ against Notre Dame, expectations rise for the Big Ten

The Wolverines defeated Notre Dame 43-11 in a thrilling affair under the lights in Ann Arbor on Sept. 1. It was the last time Michigan State would play Notre Dame, but not a single moment was lost.

The loss, however, could not get in the way of last weekend’s win in the Big Ten. By playing a very
