The farm bill, passed every five years, on a 68-32 vote Tuesday — creating mixed reactions from both Iowa farmers and senators.

The farm bill, passed every five years, provides a structure for federal agricultural spending and policy and includes the regulations of the government’s food assistance program, school food operations, and rural housing assistance.

The new farm bill has supporters and detractors in the state.

Students in the University of Iowa Carver College of Medicine are just looking for a place to between shifts.

In order to have their concerns heard, the students are taking the first step — they have put their requests to the Executive Council of Graduate and Professional Students, which has voted to bring the concerns to college dean.

The Executive Council heard from the two medical-school representation at its Tuesday meeting. Mirtama Weiner and Josh Schoenfeld explained the students’ requests — a designated space in the UI Hospital and Clinic for students and for fourth-year medical students to be excused from duties on Match Day, the day on which students are placed in residency programs.

Schoenfeld said this has been an ongoing conversation for several years.

“...but with the new expansion and renovations of the UI Hospital and Clinic she felt it was a “good opportunity” to situate with student concerns.

During the presentation, she requested that the medical school provide designated workspaces for medical students in the UIHC, noting that students don’t have a place to sit and do their work or rest lay down throughout the day when they are not working.

“On our third and fourth year, we spent a lot of time in the hospital,” Weiner said, noting that the lack of student amenity space is concerning.

Schoenfeld pointed out that pharmacy students have their own space, and medical students would like the same.

“...in the winter, it is particularly frustrating,” Weiner said. “...there’s no else to put your coat, and you have to carry your stuff around with you all day.”

Both Weiner and Schoenfeld said the medical school is great space for students, but third- and fourth-year students spend most of their time in the hospital and therefore can’t take advantage of the space.

“They do a lot for us, but this would be really great for us,” Weiner said.

Schoenfeld said the students do not necessarily want an extra room just to rest in a couple of sofas, a refrigerator, and a refrigerator, which is what some nurses and medical students use.

“There’s nowhere to put your lunch,” Schoenfeld said, noting this is what many students have said.

“The students have asked us to do this, and where they will do is for the next seven years of their lives.”

Most sections in UIHC give their students the day off, but the request to cover all sections, Weiner said.

“We just want it to be made official,” Weiner said. “Almost every other medical school gets Match Day off.”

Weiner said thus far the medical-school dean has been very supportive of the request and she thinks getting Match Day off has “very good chances.

Executive Council Chair Corinne Seruya has put forward the recommendations to the Student Affairs Administration and to Barry Barry, the UI Hospitals and Clinics, he will be forward to the appropriate people.

Gillig said he hopes students will be helpful for the council’s future official.

“We just want it to be made official,” she said. “Hopefully, this will serve as a roadmap for future years.”

Johnson County Social Services officials hope a new trial program, starting Feb. 10, will assist struggling families to prevent future problems. Social Services has allocated $2,000 of state funding to create support sessions under the Family Team Meetings Program. These meetings will offer a combination of advice, as well as planning, for families in need in order to lower the use for foster care or juvenile correction.

Lynette Jacoby, the director of Johnson County Social Services, outlined the goal of the meetings and allowing for more public access.

“We want to offer families a chance to work out problems without getting involved with state agencies, or a preventative measure to avoid foster care or other failures,” she said.

Larry Sailor, a farmer near Iowa Falls, had mixed feelings about the bill. “I’m happy it passed; I’m not as happy with what’s in it,” said Sailor. Sailors and Anderson are pleased with the bill and believes it will be a useful planning tool.

“ar. This is nice to have some predictability,” he said.

Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, who was on the committee that worked on the bill, said in a press release that the bill had its share of speed bumps in the law-making process. “This agreement is not perfect, and each side had to give a little,” Harkin said in the press release. Anderson said he was aware of the challenges. “With good legislation, neither side is happy,” Anderson said. “So, I guess this might be good legislation.”

fact," Grooms said. Anderson and the bill took direct and indirect criticisms that they would have added around $200 in payouts per acre for corn and soybeans. "The removal of these payouts is the Midwest farmers' way of helping to reduce the federal budget deficit," Anderson said. He said they realized the federal government does not have the funds to make these payouts.

Larry Sailor, a farmer near Iowa Falls, had mixed feelings about the bill. "I'm happy it passed, I'm not as happy with what's in it," said Sailor. Sailor and Anderson are pleased with the bill and believes it will be a useful planning tool. Overall, though, both Sailor and Swenka are pleased with the bill. "They agreed the crop insurance subsidies are very important for the industry," Sailor said. "They are extremely important to even out the highs and lows for farmers," said Sailor.

Why we still need to change Obamacare

L.C. Geif

This is not about my being from Texas. It is about my being from Texas. Even though I was a student at a Texas school, my family moved back to Iowa every summer. My father works two part-time jobs in the summer; my stepfather can only work part-time because of a recent cancer surgery. They don’t receive any benefits, and while myymmetric expenses are covered under Children’s Health Insurance Program, my father, stepfather, and I are out of luck.

In the past two years, we have experienced an emergency every three to four months. To me, that sounds like the government is contracted for scarier emergencies and not to fear the cost of medication. We have had to go to the emergency room for allergies, and I have been prescribed ER results in costlier bills, and allergies had me prescribed an allergy shot for a year.

Even though using the ER results in co-pays, it is not appropriate to apply for financial assistance through the emergency room to make an appointment to see a doctor when you don’t have insurance. We have a sick cat, and I was told to bring her in to the ER, but I was told by the vet that the ER only makes $1,000 a year annually from SNAP, which makes up about 80 percent of the food-stamp bill. I think people should get medical care for free because the government allows them to get medical care.

There are a few differences in health care, but there are a few differences in the way you pay for the health care. The Affordable Care Act (ACA) is still not working for the people that Obama said it was going to help. I’m in the process of trying to sign up through IowaCare now, but there’s no one to talk with anyone and we need the people to help us.

If you don’t want your health care to be a right — not a privilege

The failure of the farm bill

T he Senate voted 68-32 on Tuesday to approve a new farm bill that will allocate nearly $1 trillion in tax dollars over the next 10 years.

This is not the first time the House has faced its $1 trillion price tag and will undoubtedly be outraged by the many bi- interest details of the bill, but to pay for catfish inspectors, perhaps — we’re not quite sure what good they do — are unimportant.

The new farm bill will put about $860 million annually from SNAP, which makes up about 80 percent of the farm-stamp bill. In total, SNAP costs approximately $80 billion per year, up from only $26 billion a decade ago.

According to data from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, about 55 million people in the U.S., or one in four people, receive SNAP benefits. The program has grown over the past decade, but the rationale behind any cost reductions remains suspect, particularly as the federal budget deficit has shrunk substantially.

The cuts to food stamps are more gall- ing by the deference Congress pays to corporate subsidies as it cuts SNAP. The U.S. Public Inter- est Research Groups found that three-quarters of the farm subsidies provided for in the last farm bill went to approximately 4 percent of the agricultural industry. These corporate com- panies such as Tyson’s Food.

Arctic arch shooting dooms Hawkeyes

Iowa shot just 3-of-20 from 3-point range against Ohio State, a main contributor to the Hawkeyes’ second-straight loss in Carver-Hawkeye.

By RYAN PROBASCO
ryan-probasco@uiowa.edu

Iowa senior Devyn Marble said after the game, "It’s a couple of guys missing one here, one there, a couple guys missing two.

"We made them Saturday. Didn’t make them tonight," McCaffery said.

Iowa hasn’t lost two games in a row this season, which is a good sign — Big Ten leader Michigan will come to town this weekend.

"They’re a couple of guys missing two," Iowa coach Fran McCaffery said.

Iowa senior Devyn Marble said he thinks all the Wolverines on Saturday.

"You have to be respectful of who this team is," Iowa coach Fran McCaffery said after the game. "They were ranked third a minute ago in the country. I mean, they came into the season expecting to win a national championship. They were in the final four last year. We don’t want to get cut down early. We lost to a real good team and didn’t feel like we were a couple of guys missing two.

"I’m not upset," Marble said. "Sometimes they just made them Saturday; we made them Sunday. It’s a couple of guys making them.

"You have to be respectful of who this team is," Iowa head coach Fran McCaffery said after the game. "They were ranked third a minute ago in the country. I mean, they came into the season expecting to win a national championship. They were in the final four last year. We don’t want to get cut down early. We lost to a real good team and didn’t feel like we were... We played our best. Give them enough credit for having a good game plan with that.

The first year National Signing Day was the first in five years that Iowa didn’t land a four-star recruit. This didn’t come as much of a surprise, seeing as the Hawkeyes finished that year’s football season with an abysmal 4-8 record.

Fast forward a year, and Kirk Ferentz and Company are expected to sign 21 new recruits today — two of which are pegged as four-star guys — during college football’s National Signing Day.

Many recruiting pundits have graded Iowa’s 2014 recruiting class as solid — Rivals.com ranks the class at 47th nationally, eighth in the Big Ten — but Ferentz and Co. are expected to flip him later on in the process. … They didn’t land a four-star recruit.

But things went awry. Not even a dramatic fashion.

From there, most recruiting experts claimed that Iowa had missed on a big recruiting class.

Hawkeye football may ink its future QB

Detroit Country Day’s Tyler Wiegers is positioned to contend for the spot as Iowa’s signal caller in the coming years.

Tyler Wiegers, along with many of his recruiting classmates, decommitted from Rutgers for good. It was made official on Nov. 17. “And I might take another visit, maybe one or two more,” he told NJ.com

It was largely assumed that he would be head coach Kyle Flood’s future signal-caller. He was to be the leader of what was, at the time, a recruiting class that planned to bring the Scarlet Knights back to national prominence.

But things went very, very wrong. Not even a year after Mike Rice was fired from his post as Rutgers’ men’s basketball head coach, allegations surfaced that former Rutgers defensive coordinator Dave Coshern had bullied and verbally abused his players.
