El Cactus may lose license

The Iowa City City Council will consider revoking El Cactus’ liquor license at its next meeting.

Margaretta Happy Hour might end a little sooner than expected for one local restaurant.

Iowa City Police Chief Sam Magdeline requested that the Iowa City Council deny the liquor-license renewal of El Cactus Restaurant, 1932 Kossuth St.

“Typically, we uphold city recommendations,” Councilor Rick Dobyns said.

“That is our pattern,” Dobyns said.

There are specific thresholds that city officials look at, Dobyns said. Usually, there are a couple per year.

Magdeline said in an email to sen-tors Ivan Armendariz and Jose Lopez that he recommended that the council deny their application for a liquor-license renewal.

The letter stated that two civil lawsuits were filed against Armendariz earlier this year, regarding their financial standing in the business.

Chauncey may be cut back

The new high rise development may not be as tall as originally planned.

The scheme of the Iowa City Downtown District might not change as dramatically as originally thought.

The Chauncey, a high-rise building that will be built at the intersection of Gilbert and College Streets, could be cut from the originally proposed 20 stories to 15 stories.

City Councilor Rick Dobyns said that they have been interested in decreasing the size of the building for three months.

“We didn’t make the idea to decrease the number of floors publicly,” Dobyns said.

Iowa River expected to rise

Iowa River expected to rise 24.9 feet by Aug. 3. The Iowa City warning will stay in effect until July 20.

This past weekend, approximately 4 inches of rain fell on July 12. Two weeks ago, Gov. Terry Branstad issued a proclamation of disaster for Johnson County and Iowa City in response to the initial flooding and severe weather.

With the river being higher this year than it was last year, Mason said she is anxious to see how the Beckwith Boathouse took on water. The building was built to flood, Mason said.

“For me, the anticipation is that all of the projects, all of the flood-mitigation projects that are currently underway should be completed by next summer,” Mason said. “I think moderate flooding is occurring on a more regular basis than any of us would like.”

On July 12, the National Weather Service in Coralville issued a flood-flash warning for Johnson County and Iowa City A tornado warning was also issued.

On Sunday, the National Weather Service issued a flood warning for both Johnson and Washington Counties.

Officials expect river availability. “I have to say last week at a press conference, President Sally Mason said, “I don’t think we’re going to rise to 24.9 feet by Aug. 3. Dear Daily Iowan:

As Tom Harkin, the long-serving Democratic senator for Iowa and a national hero for liberals, has watched something on one side of a river (with Harkin stepping down at the end of the Senate term next January), the Democratic Congress, including many liberal presidents, have had their chance to demonstrate why they should always back the people who actually build the things that make the country a better place.

Harkin stumbles on dietary supplements

When I was young, I was told that the “Dietary Supplement Health and Education Act” meant I could buy something that claimed to be “effective” and “safe.” I now know that I have been swindled, and so has every other consumer who has been taken in by the promises of dietary supplements.

I know that the regulations governing dietary supplements have been lax for decades, and that the lack of regulation has led to the proliferation of products that are ineffective and, in some cases, dangerous. I believe that the time has come for a much-needed overhaul of the dietary supplement industry, and I urge the FDA to take action to ensure that consumers are protected from the dangers of dietary supplements.

Harkin has been a champion of consumer protection and has long advocated for stronger regulations on dietary supplements. I hope that he will continue to use his position in the Senate to fight for the rights of consumers and to ensure that dietary supplements are safe and effective.

Iowa may ultimately see the construction of a major pipeline underground, dug diagonally across the heart of the state and allowing for the transportation of Iowa's corn and ethanol. This pipeline is not only a threat to the environmental and social fabric of the state, but it also poses a serious risk to the health and safety of Iowa City residents.

Timm O'Malley

Editorial

There is a great deal of controversy surrounding the potential for a pipeline to be constructed underground, and it is important that we have a conversation about the risks and benefits of such a project. However, it is clear that the pipeline would have a significant impact on the residents of Iowa City, and we must ensure that their voices are heard in the decision-making process.

I believe that the pipeline should be built with the safety and well-being of Iowa City residents in mind. It is essential that we understand the potential risks and benefits of the pipeline before making a final decision. Only then can we make an informed decision that is in the best interest of the community.

Stronger Hawkeye Peter Jok sets higher bar

By ERIN ERICKSON
erin-erickson@uiowa.edu

With high expectations for the upcoming 2014-15 Iowa women’s basketball season, the team looks to incoming freshman Chase Coley to step up and make her mark for the Hawkeyes this season.

And Coley is preparing by working with and against her Hawkeye teammates.

The future Hawkeye already has a mentor in senior forward Bre Knox-Unkrich’s team. "Last year, I felt like I was far away from people. But this year, Iowa seniors Ally Disterhoft and Kayla Malsam have led Unkrich’s team, lighting up the court by scoring 30-plus points in all three of her Iowa Women’s Basketball appearances and averaging 38 points per game.

Coley’s opportunities to score may have been somewhat overshadowed by Disterhoft’s, but her numerous contributions on the defensive side of the ball, including her ability to shut down the team’s success thus far.

Disterhoft’s absence hasn’t hurt Coley, leading to Coley taking control of the ball and helping to drive her team to a 40-record, good enough for a No. 1 seed heading into this weekend.

And this summer wasn’t even as busy as the majority of Hawkeye fans had to catch a glimpse of what to expect from Coley in the upcoming season.

Coley demonstrated great promise for Iowa

Stronger Hawkeye Peter Jok sets higher bar

By WILL MCCORD

To face familiar with Peter Jok, one thing is abundantly clear—the man can shoot.

In last season’s devastating season-opening loss to Tennessee, Jok was the Hawkeyes’ lone perimeter threat, shooting 67 percent from the 3-point range and 80 percent from the field.

After four games of Prime Time basketball, Jok’s long-range marksmanship has proven to be even better than advertised, making him perhaps Prime Time’s Most Valuable Distance Shooter.

"When he’s on, he has just a guttural perfect jump shot," Prime Time coach Ray Swetalla said. "He’s our go-to guy. He’s got a lot of height, and he’s got a good rhythm."

But when Jok isn’t hitting three pointers, that means Hawkeye fans have to be patient, as Jok is currently averaging 23 points per game.

"I’ve been shooting against my teammates because I can tell they are making me better, " Jok said. "I feel like we are really working on getting to the basket."

"It’s not surprising," Uihl said. "That’s what he’s capable of doing.

So, the future Hawkeye has long possessed the size and shooting ability for his position, a combination that made him the state’s top recruit in the nation, and we are learning our weaknesses, which is making us better," he said. "No longer the skinny kid who could be pushed around in conference play, Jok finally has the physique to complement his considerable skills.

"I feel like I improved by just being in the weight room a lot, working on my body," he said. "Having my lower body strength now helps me jump higher, so it makes it easier for me to shoot."
players, creates a better ranking,” Iowa golf coach Mark Hankins said. “As this is his first professional event, he's going to have a ranking. You have to use those as résumé builder to get into the next Web.com.”

Even thought this tournament will fade in the rear-view mirror, and he won't have as big of a following, Ihm still has to appreciate what the Deere did to kick off his career. Not many people his age can say they shot 10-strokes under par at a PGA Tour event, and not many people his age can say they had as big of a following as a former Masters champion. “It was an awesome coming-out party,” Ihm said. “I couldn't have asked for a better week, and I’m really excited about going forward with my career.”

love playing with them. I feel way more comfortable out there in the ball in my hands, just trying to make things happen.”

Uthoff didn't shoot as well from the outside as Hawkeye fans saw him capable of last season, but he was able to find buckets shooting 50 percent on 2-pointers because of a more developed game this summer. “I’m feeling stronger,” Uthoff said. “I’m incorporating stuff that I’ve worked on in the past in practice and want to do in games, like the Dirk [Nowitzki] shot and the step-back.”

Despite Uthoff’s stellar performance, Ahrens’ squad was upset for the first time this year by the likely other top two MVP candidates; Woodbury and Northern Iowa scoring guru Matt Bohannon.

Despite only scoring 12 points in the 98-76 upset, Bohannon finished the regular season as the league’s leading scorer.

With Hawkeyes guard Anthony Clemmons missing time, Bohannon shot 46 percent overall, 42 percent from 3-point land, as well as 82 percent at the free-throw line. “I think I played pretty well in Prime Time,” Bohannon said. “I think I showed I’m not just a shooter, but I can do a little of the floor and get to the line as well. I had an opportunity to make a lot of plays, that’s what I tried to do.”

Larson’s team’s big win was fueled by Woodbury, who has looked like the most dominate big man this summer. His 22 points, 17 rebounds, and 4 assists were crucial in the upset and remained on par with his season averages. Second behind only Bohannon, Woodbury scored 24 points per game on 60 percent shooting and was second behind only Uthoff with 12 rebounds per game. Woodbury has looked stronger and more confident operating in the post, and his numbers have reflected that. “I've put on some weight and gotten stronger in my upper and lower body,” he said. “I’ve worked a lot on my stroke from midrange and at the free-throw line, so my game is getting better every day. I've just played my game, and the MVP would be nice, but I want to win the championship.”
