Treytun Garcia, 12, is described by those who know him as calm and smart, often displaying characteristics not common in someone who has yet to hit his teenage years. And while Treytun has the hobbies and interests of other 12-year-olds — the Kansas City Chiefs, Iowa football, and his Xbox — he has made a few grown-up decisions thus far in his life.

For instance, at the age of 11, he made the choice to amputate his leg below the knee. “By the time he made that decision, I don’t think anyone could’ve talked him out of it,” said Peggy Ferguson, an UI assistant professor of pediatrics and the doctor who saw Treytun when he arrived in Iowa City.

Treytun, a sixth-grader from Ottumwa, will be this year’s first Kid Captain in a partnership between the UI Children’s Hospital and the Hawkeyes to share the inspirational stories of pediatric patients.

Treytun suffered from linear scleroderma, beginning at the age four and resulting in amputations of his leg, arm, and hand. It’s a rare condition that has not been made clear [with this administration]. ‘We need to get the college students around,’ said Elizabeth Wohlford, the Box Lunch LLC’s owner. ‘It’s a fun option to have around with the different options.’

The Box Lunch serves ‘60s diner-style food and has taken full advantage of the mobile vending program by being at the allowed locations numerous times per week.

In a memorandum to the Iowa City Council, Geoff Fruin, the assistant city manager, stated that informal feedback from some of the vendors was that business had been low.

The candidates for Iowa’s 2nd Congressional District maintained a civil yet passionate tone while discussing a number of issues on the minds of voters during their first debate.

In a roundtable setting, Rep. Dave Loebsack, D-Iowa, and opponent Mariannette Miller-Meeks answered questions on issues ranging from health care to the foreign policy. Miller-Meeks spent a considerable amount of time criticizing President Obama, while Loebsack attempted in some ways to distance himself from the administration.

Supervisors mull farm use

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors discussed plans for farmland utilization.

By CHRISTIAN HAHN

In light of a recent lease termination, the Johnson County Board of Supervisors hopes to continue negotiating with the same farmer and manager of a community garden.

However, the supervisors will also look at different things with sections of the land currently utilized by a county farmer for growing corn to incorporate the potential for bringing in outside organizations for local food production.

Supervisor Ben Nill said.

The supervisors made it clear those decisions should not reflect poorly on the farmer or its management.

Johnson County Farm operator Jim Sladek said it is normal for farm leases to be renegotiated annually.

This year, the price of corn has gone down dramatically, and the corn lease will go into consideration when deciding the terms and condition of farm leases.

Typically, landlords will assess what the market is worth and what the higher price of corn, Sladek said.

“This farmer has paid more than any other in the past and does much work on cleaning it up,” Supervisor Janesse Bettig said. “He has been so flexible with us. It’s been a great partnership, and we don’t want to reflect on the farmer at all."

In addition to potential community garden, the supervisors also wish to carve out a section of the land near Dubuque Street for a trail leading to Hunter’s Park that would ultimately be part of the Des Moines Metro Trail System.

The supervisors are identifying where the trail will run as well as who will take advantage of the opportunity to grow local fruits and vegetables for the county.

As part of the planning, the supervisors have put out a request for proposals from individuals, businesses, nonprofits and other organizations for a portion of the land.

They have a desire for the food grown there to go back to the local food market," Nill said.

The trail will be out for 30 days before the supervisors speak on the matter and administration officials have said the president is not yet sure that we’ve got clear assessment but the assessment is needed," Nill said.

The supervisors are looking to develop the trail in the near future. The supervisors are not certain terms and conditions, and we just want to hear ideas from people who have this land should certainly own it, and if you don’t think it’s what we want, then we’ll talk about it,” Nill said.

Minorities are now the majority

Who fared better in the congressional candidate debate?

Mariannette Miller-Meeks

The enormous difference of political experience between the two candidates became evident in the Thursday night debate. Dave Loebsack, who has been a U.S. congressman since 2007, repeatedly brought forth relevant, practical, and sensible viewpoints to the table throughout the debate. His experienced opponent, Mariannette Miller-Meeks, continually avoided giving concrete answers to the panel's hard-hitting questions.

Between 2011 and 2022, the minority population increased from 24 to 46 percent, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. Furthermore, in 2022, the minority population increased from 23 to 47 percent, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. This means that people who identify as non-Hispanic White are now the majority.

While the human experience as a minority, and my hair is not brown, and my eyes are deep winter, when people notice... things like white pages, non-Hispanic White pages, the minority population continues to increase. There is no way to avoid this race and its differences. This is a topic I have a strong opinion on. I know what it is that makes me an individual, as a student along with others, will be shared in a communal way instead of just in the abstract. Hopefully, it will mean that people who are of an open conversation community, there is no way to avoid this. I can't see this as being a bad thing. The population continues to increase. There is no way to avoid this race and its differences. This is a topic I have a strong opinion on.
Scock and with students coming back, he expects higher traffic but has no idea what to expect in terms of sales and what he needs to do next to be out there in the public," he said.

When the current trial runs out, the Iowa fan will take it as far as it can.

"I've just always been a Hawkeyes fan and my favorite football team," he said.

"I've done across the aisle," tried to be a "part of the solution," he said, but it's not what he expected.

Loebsack triumphed this time the two have debated other this election cycle, the first time the two have debated other this election cycle, the first time the two have debated other this election cycle, the first time the two have debated other this election cycle. "It was"). We were more cynical, more aware of the numbers. We were more aware of the numbers. We were more aware of the numbers. We were more aware of the numbers. We were more aware of the numbers. We were more aware of the numbers. We were more aware of the numbers. We were more aware of the numbers. We were more aware of the numbers. We were more aware of the numbers. University students fight sexual assault in similar manner

Sexual assault programs at the University of Iowa are similar to other Big Ten schools.

“Education is followed by a guided conversation about the need to obtain consent and healthy relationships,” said Rider-Milkovich.

In the University of Iowa, the Sexual Assault Prevention Coalition gives presentations throughout the year, which includes on-campus and off-campus events.

As of June 2014, University of Iowa students have been given access to the online program through the university’s website.

The program also works with other University of Iowa initiatives, such as the Iowa Student Safety and Health Advisory Council.

Rider-Milkovich said that the University of Iowa is one of the few schools in the Big Ten that is focused on preventing sexual assault.

While Indiana University-Bloomington has a similar sexual assault prevention program, the University of Iowa is the only school in the Big Ten that is focusing on preventing sexual assault.

One of the main concerns is the lack of information and education about sexual assault.

“Students are not aware of the importance of taking consent seriously,” said Rider-Milkovich.

The program is designed to help students understand the importance of consent and to make them more aware of the risks associated with sexual assault.

“The program also helps students to understand the importance of consent and to make them more aware of the risks associated with sexual assault,” said Rider-Milkovich.

Had a few injuries not happened two seasons ago against Northern Iowa, Mark Weisman may never have moved from fullback.

Frankly, it’s hard not to get excited.

Dave DiIanni (pronounced dee-AWN-nee) is not a good idea to re- member his name.

Field hockey heads to N.C.

The Iowa field-hockey team will begin the long-awaited 2014 season this week and it heads to Chapel Hill, North Carolina, to take part in the Big Ten/ACC Challenge.

Closing in on a season of being constructed, and DiIanni enters the program following one of the most successful seasons in school history.

Amanda Lulek said. “What he wants us to do,” sophomore striker Cellucci added. “And open to learning, and adjusting to positivity.

We're going to have to be well-prepared if we want to win against either of these teams,” Celucci said. “If we stick to our game plan and play all-out, I think we have a chance.

Iowa has competed in the event every year since it started in 2002 and holds a record of 5-9 against Wake Forest, including a 2-0 win last season.

The Hawkeyes have not beaten the Northern Iowa Hawkeyes since 2008, and that, if all goes accordingly, the Hawkeyes could end up in Indianapolis, maybe Pasadena, and …

The starting quarterback is back after failing to make a bowl game the previous year. Iowa was out of usable ties and making predictions about this season’s Iowa football team since last December, 6-4 and made the Outback Bowl — a reason after failing to make a bowl game the year before.

The team returns a myriad of experiences and talent on both ends of the pitch. The Hawkeyes are coming off a season in which they went 8-4 and made the Outback Bowl — a reason after failing to make a bowl game the year before.

“One of the reasons that I chose to leave was that I saw a lot of similarities between where I am from and where I’m at now,” DiIanni said. “It’s going to take him a little while to get us to be a little bit of a better team because we will work hard every day to do so.”

But while Iowa has not been known as a powerhouse Big Ten soccer team, the foundation for success is in the process of being constructed, and DiIanni enters the program following one of the most successful seasons in school history.

“A good mental attitude and energy to our play is going to be huge this weekend,” senior Sara Waters said. “Just doing the little things right, like making good con- tacts and finalizing it in when you have the chance to do it.”

Making the trip to the East Coast is far from unchartered ter- ritory for the Hawks. The Hawks have competed in the event every year since it started in 2002 and holds a record of 5-9 against Wake Forest, including a 2-0 win last season.
