After nine months of planning and designing, Iowa Chop House will open its doors to customers while focusing on shopping locally and supporting the state of Iowa.

"The big appeal is that we are local," said George Kténas, owner of the Chop House. "Everything here was unique. He thought the experience was creative with classic foods." According to the White House press release about the campaign, "It's On Us, especially applied to the University of Iowa, could really change the campus environment." Jia Lili, who, said she was visiting and would soon go to Minnesota to see her family, has been using social media to try to help find her. "We're at a point where some of the students have taken to social media to aid in the search. We've been sending out chats and messaging each other looking for this girl," UI junior Zhijin Huang said. The students have been using messaging apps such as QQ messenger, MSN messenger; and WeChat to spread the word. Zhijin Huang said. "I feel really sorry," Huang said.

Braley backs college affordability

By LAUREN COFFY

Rep. Bruce Braley, D-Iowa, was the first candidate in Iowa’s Senate race to propose a new plan for college affordability focusing on in-state students and cutting work-study programs after announcing it last month.

Braley said he wanted to focus on the issue of low and interest rates being affordable for college students as well. “I think we need to have open minds on all of the factors that affect college costs,” he told The Daily Iowan.

“One of that is what colleges and universities charge for tuition, fees, and books as well. If there are creative ways we can provide incentives to create their degrees in a fixed period of time, then I think we should be looking at that. We also have to look at the rules of the things I discussed and making college affordable for in-state students,” Brahley said.

Republican opponent Joni Ernst has not proposed her own college affordability plan, and she could not be reached for comment on either Braley’s or Braley’s plans. Iowa GOP officials and they don’t have any preference for what Ernst’s plan should entail should they be now that the incident has gained the attention of the officials and the general public,” Mosiman said it takes common sense to prevent such situations.

“As far as I’ve heard, there have been no reports or similar circumstances this year,” she said.

“Joshua Sabin, the director of administration for the Iowa Northern Railways, which runs Hawkeye Express, said so far, an average of 5,000 people took the Hawkeye Express during the three home football games, an increase over last season’s 4,000.”

Sabin and the number of people using the Hawkeye Express is growing every year, making it a “wonderful opportunity.”

“Part of the reason fans go to take the train is so that they don’t have to deal with parking problems,” he said. “This just helps to eliminate all sorts of issues, so not to mention it’s always been a historical part of this school.”

Parking and Transportation handles all cash, ” he said. “It used to be that money was missing, and on Sept. 24, a portion of ticket sales was not deposited, and on Sept. 24, a portion of the money was missing.

“Since then, the UI Department of Parking and Transportation has been in charge of handing the money,” he said. “Since the ticket cash at the time of the incident was missing, and on Sept. 24, a portion of ticket sales was not deposited, and on Sept. 24, a portion of the money was missing.

“I think we should be looking at the three home football games, an increase over last season’s 4,000.”

Sabin and the number of people using the Hawkeye Express is growing every year, making it a “wonderful opportunity.”

“The last part of the plan would allow students to reframe their loans in order to take out additional assistance, along with lowering interest rates, a move that could affect 111,000 Iowa student-loan borrowers.

For students and their parents, it was the first candidate in Iowa’s Senate race to propose a new plan for college affordability focusing on in-state students and cutting work-study programs after announcing it last month.

He also proposed creating a program to provide students who are close to graduating and have been involved with education in Congress, serving as a subcommittee chairman within the Senate Appropriations Committee, which is responsible for funding education. In the past he has worked specifically with providing low-income students with grants and scholarships to ensure they can afford college.

Braley’s four-point plan for college affordability includes increasing tax credits to pay for tuition and other fees for undergraduate students, along with increasing interest-rate deductions on student loans.

As with any plan, it’s never going to be perfect, but allowing students to reframe their loans in order to take out additional assistance, along with lowering interest rates, a move that could affect 111,000 Iowa student-loan borrowers.

Time for some pot sanity

In January, State Budget Situations, a nonprofit organization, released a report that showed that the state of Iowa has a debt of more than $37 billion. This burden isn’t surprising, but most states have been struggling to fund their financial houses under control. What could possibly save us from the debt? A new report on marijuana legalization finds that states that have legalized marijuana have seen a reduction in crime rates. Contrary to what many believe, states that have legalized marijuana have seen a decrease in violent crime and an increase in tax revenue. The report also found that states that have legalized marijuana have seen a decrease in drug-related arrests and an increase in tax revenue. The report suggests that marijuana legalization could be a solution to the state’s debt problem. For more information, please visit the State Budget Situations website.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Chicago Bears took advantage of early mistakes by the sloppy New York Jets. Then they had to hold their breath before hanging on for a 27-19 victory Monday night.

Jay Cutler threw 2 touchdown passes to Martellus Bennett, and Ryan Mundy returned an interception 45 yards for a score. Cutler finished 23-of-38 for 225 yards, and Alshon Jeffery caught 8 passes for 105 yards for the Bears, who got a 45-yard field goal from Robbie Gould to make it an 8-point game with 3:10 remaining.

The Jets (1-2) had one last opportunity to tie, getting into the Bears’ territory on Geno Smith’s 51-yard pass to Greg Salas. But Jeremy Kerley was out of bounds when he caught Smith’s desperation fourth-down heave from the Bears 9.

Cutler took a knee three times to seal the victory for the Bears (2-1).

Smith was 26-of-43 for 316 yards and a touchdown with 2 interceptions — and nearly had a few others. Kerley finished with 7 catches for 81 yards and almost came up with a diving grab off a tipped pass in the end zone on the final drive.

“I thought that was the game,” Jet coach Rex Ryan said.

“Jay Scobee made a big kick on that drive, you wish you could have those,” Jet coach Rex Ryan said.

“Jay Scobee lost wide receiver Eric Decker in the first half to a hamstring injury after he was questionable for the game with tightness in the hamstring.

Bears went up 14-0 at slightly more than five minutes into the game. On New York’s second play from scrimmage, Smith didn’t see Mundy lurking in the flat as he floated a screen pass to Chris Johnson. Mundy stepped in front of the toss and ran untouched into the end zone for a 45-yard score. It was the sixth-year veteran’s third career interception and first score.

The Jets got on the scoreboard on their next possession, capping an 11-play, 55-yard drive with Nick Folk’s 43-yard field goal. Chicago answered with a 15-play, 79-yard drive helped by cornerback Antonio Allen’s holding penalty on a third-down incompletion by Cutler Gould’s 24-yard field goal gave the Bears a 17-3 lead in the second quarter.

The Bears nearly had a 12-yard TD by Marshall, but it was wiped out by an illegal hands to the face penalty on left guard Michael Ola, who started for the injured Matt Slauson.

The Jets also blew a possible scoring drive when Smith was intercepted by rookie Kyle Fuller on a poorly thrown pass to Steve Smith in the end zone on first-and-10 from the Bears 18.

“You can’t force it in that situation,” Ryan said. “You learn from it.”

Folk’s 22-yard field goal late in the third quarter made it 24-16. His 42-yarder with 9:52 remaining gutted the Jets within 5 points.

Hasselstrand now a tennis vet for the Hawkeyes

Sophomore Nils Hasselstrand faces an increased role for Hawkeye men’s tennis.

BY CHARLIE GREEN

Last season, Iowa men’s tennis player Nils Hasselstrand was the lone freshman on a team that included two seniors and two juniors.

This year, as a sophomore, so as a sophomore, he stands as one of four seniors and two players on a talented but young University of Iowa men’s tennis roster.

“I think my role on the team has gone from being a young man playing tennis to pretty much a veteran, considering the young team we have this year,” Hasselstrand said.

In his freshman season in 2013, Hasselstrand was named Big Ten Freshman of the Year, compiling a 5-2 record in Big Ten play. He also compiled a 5-3 record, win-ing only match in the Big Ten Tournament. Hasselstrand’s early success came in the fifth and sixth sets in singles matches, which often included double-figures in lanky frame.

“His backhand’s touchback percentage of 84.21 percent and his percentage of 84.09 percent on points scored are both numbers that the team has never before seen,” coach Kevin Lowe said.

Hasselstrand has addressed those concerns.

The Hawkeyes fell behind early in the match, tying the ball, they averaged 30.3 yards per return.

Turnover margin — minus 1 (19th in the Big Ten)

The most notable consequence of the added talent has been that the Hawkeyes are more evenly matched this season.

Despite this low number, neither Iowa State nor Pittsburgh has had the opportunity to return a kick. In fact, Iowa has made only one kick return all season.

Hasselstrand has also been a key factor of the ball on the court for the Hawkeyes.

“A season ago, I think this kid was a big first-up guy for us,” senior Matt Hagan said.

“Had an opportunity to play some Big Ten matches last year, so he knows how to play at a high level.”

After making the most of his opportunity last year, Hasselstrand’s sopho-omore campaign promises to feature him in a more prominent role.

“This kid just has more presence knowing you’re playing with a star or two people, and teammates,” Hagan said.

“I think this is the right time for Nils to step into his role.”

Hasselstrand played in 12 Big Ten dual matches last season, compared with just one for Hasselstrand as a junior.

In addition to being his potential for his team’s" + "ne — which is tied for the fifth-best in the Big Ten — the Hawkeyes’ turnover margin is still a work in progress.

This isn’t too much of a surprise. Despite the Hawkeyes’ 8-5 record last season, they too had a turnover margin of minus-1 (9th in the Big Ten).

This season, Iowa has simply turned its opponents’ mistakes into points. It has yet to score off of a turnover this season. This isn’t a detrimental problem for the Hawkeyes, but it could be if they’re more advantageous, it would help off the bench as a scoring option. The number can also be a little misleading. Three of Iowa’s four tournament victories have essentially come with the game out for Iowa — Greg Miehle’s pick against Northern Iowa, Drew O’Leary’s double upset over the East State, and Anthony Gion’s upset over Montana.

At those points in the game, Iowa’s focus is low on, concerned with winning and more geared toward taking the clock out.

Iowa next takes the pitch at home against Maryland on Thursday at 2:30 p.m.; the game will be live on Big Ten Network.

This is the Fort Collins, Colorado, native’s first Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week award — she has scored 2 goals in the victory over Minnesota on Sept. 20 in Minneapolis. Clark now shares the award with Wisconsin senior goalkeeper Genevieve Radko, native’s first Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week last spring.

The award came after she made 5 saves in a 1-0 win against Minnesota on Sept. 20 at Memorial Stadium. Clark now has 13 saves in her last 3 games and has not been scored on in any of the last 363:13 minutes. Clark has started 363 minutes, enough time to be a 3-GOALKEEPER start, in her school career.

This is the first week Big Ten coaches have not named the same goalie as their Defensive Player of the Week — the award has been presented in the last 363 weeks.

The Big Ten announced the 2014 Midfielder/Back of the Week award — the honor, which has been presented in 243 minutes. The first Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week was Kansas State’s Lindsey Weber, who was named the Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week for the first time last year.

Iowa running back Mark Weisman scores a touchdown during the third quarter in Heinz Field in Pittsburgh on Sept. 20. Weisman scored 2 touchdowns and ran for 88 yards, and Iowa defeated Pitt, 24-20. (The Daily Iowan/Tessa Hursh)

Iowa’s running game looked as polished as it had all season against Pittsburgh. That’s saying something considering the team’s rushing yards by one Hawkeye in any game this season. In fact, it was the first time any Iowa player had surpassed 50 yards on the ground in a single game this season.

Since the first couple weeks, Fortesz has abbreviated his running back rotation considerably.
