Ride, a new bicycling-theme restaurant in Iowa City, had a successful first week.

By STACEY MURRAY

One week ago today, Ride, currently Iowa City’s only bicycling-theme restaurant, opened its doors, and co-owner Tom “Roc” Kemmerer says that, so far, business is thriving.

“We’ve been very busy,” he said over the sounds of dishes, conversation, and a bustling kitchen. “It’s been well-received. We’ve also gotten some nice buzz on the Facebook page and Yelp.”

Located at 630 Iowa Ave., Ride was busy even before the noon rush, full of patrons enthusiastic about the atmosphere and food.

“We loved it here,” said patron Kerry Evans, along with her husband, John. “The menu’s great, the service’s great.”

“I watched the grocery store close — the one where I bought my Juicy Fruit gum for 25 cents. The bar salon two doors down that kept a crate of battered toys for kids patiently waiting for their mothers’ perms to set. The restaurant in which my brother served a brief stint as a waiter.

And every time I pack up my two-door Chevy Cobalt to come back to Iowa City after a holiday or a relaxing weekend at home, I feel a twinge of regret or guilt — it’s hard to discern.

It’s more than homesickness. Hopkinton and all of the 600 people who live there feel like a part of me. My personality was sculpted from the life I had there. It’s hard to verbalize my visceral affection for this village-sized town.

Hopkinton and small-town Iowa is more my heritage than my hometown.

By BEN MARKS

Bette Wilson saw the warning signs. The 88-year-old knew her tiny town was fading. The population of Hopkinton, Iowa — incorporated in 1875 by a Dubuque transplant — had been dwindling for years, and storefronts had been shutting their doors in tandem.

Lenox College closed in 1944. The shop where Bette bought the hat she wore to her own wedding closed. Three grocery stores closed.

She was born there. Her father, Clarence Hageman, moved to Hopkinton after World War I and married her mother. She has spent 88 of her 88 years living in this small town in northeastern Iowa.

The closings go on. A movie theater. A drug store. A bowling alley. All part memories.

Bette, my childhood neighbor, was 66 when I was born at the tailend of 1993. Our memories of our withering Main Street and the people who walked along it intersect for many years.

In the 16 dec. story, “Iowa city to passenger to Chicago.” The Daily Iowan incorrectly reported the Federal Railroad Administration and the Iowa Department of Transportation came to an agreement in west-central Iowa. The correction was made in a previous error correction.

In addition, the story referred to the new phase accomplishing 30 percent of the funding; it actually accomplishes 30 percent of the engineering. It also stated that $3 million of $72 estimated was granted, but in actuality, the Federal Railroad Administration granted $6.2 million of $125 million. The DBA regrets the errors.

Yoga for Finals

The annual “yoga for finals” event will continue this year. The event is held in the Main Library and is free. The event will take place on Tuesday, May 15, from 4-6 p.m.

Man charged with forgery fraud

Authorities have arrested an Iowa City man accused of义乌 place of employment. Zachary MacMillan, 19, of Coralville, was arrested on a charge of forgery and fraud.

The store’s last day open was June 29. Authorities say MacMillan allegedly redeemed an Iowa lottery ticket and then signed another to the ticket.

The restaurant Kemmerer has a Southern bent to it, which we haven't seen before. "We'll certainly be back to try the breakfast menu," Ride's owner, David Everson, said.

"We put a very, very big effort into the menu," Kemmerer said along with brothers Kevin and Derek Perez. "We're working out everything, and we're working out every single detail, and we're going to work to try to make it, which we haven't seen before."

The term of President, Pakistan suffered an atro- cious Tuesday morning. According to Reuters, 141 bodies were recovered from the wreckage of the plane crash. The crash is a terrible tragedy for the families of children. The total number of casualties is as yet unknown. The Taliban claimed responsibility for the attack, which is a typical attack by them, as they have been responsible for similar attacks in the past. The attack is a reminder of the ongoing conflict in the region and the challenges faced by the government.

I am very fortunate for a variety of reasons. I think that one of the best aspects of my background is that it is filled with strong women. My mother, grandmother, aunt, and many others influenced my life with their unswerving and diligent ethics, as well as their thoughtful and passionate view on issues. That's why it's impossible for me to think of myself as an istic evaluation of the situation, but I do have a problem est office in the land, but I have been well exposed to every- thing that is about time. The United States is the role of the broker of peace and of the international community. What can be said is mostly a reflection on the lessons learned from the recent conflicts. The region doesn't seem to have an end, especially with a persistent political, economic, and social instability. One could argue that the situation in the region is a result of the conflict between the Israelis and the Palestinians. The ongoing conflict has been a source of tension and has led to the loss of many lives. The United States has a significant role to play in resolving this conflict and promoting peace in the region.

Ernst names chief-of-staff, communications director

Sen.-elect Joni Ernst, R-Iowa, has begun the process of staffing her office, hiring a chief-of-staff and communications director to the last word.

Ernst’s office announced on Tuesday the hiring of Lisa Gray as chief-of-staff. Laura Pawlowski was named as communications director for the National Federation of Independent Business, according to his office.

Gray is not a stranger to the Senate — she previously served as deputy chief-of-staff to Tim Huelskamp of Arizona in the U.S. Senate for four years.

“I am thrilled to have the opportunity to serve Sen.-elect Ernst and the people of Iowa,” Gray said in a statement. “I look forward to making sure our voices, values, and beliefs are heard loud and clear in Washington.”

Ernst’s office also announced the hiring of Brenda Rosnov as communications director.

The Daily Iowan Ethics and Politics Initiative is funded by a private donor and sell appear solely in print this semester. The team’s mission is to understand, interpret, analyze and re-share on topics, trends and personalities that shape politics in Iowa and the United States, and to recognize the importance of a strong ethical foundation in its pursuits. gas tax discourse

Legislators say a gas-tax increase is dependent upon bipartisan support.

“I am honored to have the opportunity to lead various campaign operations for Reps. Gary Worthan, R-Storm Lake, and Stuart Anderson, the director of planning, pro-

Elizabeth Warren — and the governor says he will sign a gas tax increase unless he sees a way to perfect it,” said Sen.-elect Joni Ernst, R-Iowa, who has indicated that she will sign a gas tax increase.

The governor wants to look at a variety of options,” said Ernst, a member of the Senate Finance Committee. “I’ve already been in contact with leaders from both parties that would like to see it happen.”

Grayson and Ernst both emphasized the need for bipartisan support in any legislative proposal.

I’m not suggesting we’re on the forefront of a wave of ghost towns, but what I’m saying is that very small communities get older and without new residents coming in, without new jobs and available housing, those places will struggle to survive.

Bill Horn, state director of GBS

T here will come a time, after the ink dries on my diploma, when I’m no longer important to anyone — 25 percent of Hopkinton, the place where I was born — other than the town, the bank, the grocery store, the nursing home, and the library. It won’t be in Hopkinton, the place where I was raised, but rather, the place where I started my business, the librarian knew me by name and held my card, or the girl I met my junior year who now has a child, and an affection for June Bug that has lasted a lifetime.

Hopkinton, like dozens of small towns in the Midwest, is the lifeblood of hundreds of businesses and families who see it as their home. But there are serious doubts whether such a passion can be maintained — and if so, how long.

Small towns around the state and region are suffering from similar ills. Hopkinton is one of the many towns in Iowa continuing to shrink in size. According to a report from the Department of Economic at Iowa State University, more than 40 percent of cities in Iowa lost population in the past three years. It is the new normal for small towns, the government matters a lot.

The kind of people who move in and out of our town. Who we are, what we do isn’t connected to our pristine historical charm; it’s the people of Hopkinton that most matter.

Liesl Eathington, an assistant scientist at the Department of Economics at Iowa State University, said. “You’re still on the map when the younger set — but it’s a symbol of what they have lost.”

For towns in a metropolitan-status county, that makes up a majority of residents would slip laminated photos of family. Scheff named AP All-American Iowa left tackle Brandon Scherff was named the Associated Press All-American for the third straight season, allowing him to pick up a lot of awards this season.

Scherff is Kirk Ferentz’s sixth starter on his offensive line. With his win in the Associated Press’s first-team All-American honors under Ferentz’s tenure, Scherff is now on his way to making a name for himself with his teammates. Scherff was a recipient of the Outland Trophy for the nation’s best interior lineman this season.

By DANNY PAYNE

When Iowa played Iowa State last weekend, many fans in Carver-Hawkeye Arena were concerned about the possible loss of Gabe Olaseni. Iowa had a good amount of success against the Cyclones before the break, and head coach Fran McCaffery has shown a tendency to shorten his rotation in big games this season.

But still, as has become the theme over the past few seasons, some of those Hawk-eye fans rallied for more time for Olaseni. Through 11 games this season, Adam Woodbury has played 235 minutes, and Olaseni has only played 142 minutes.

One of the most basic metrics is points per game for Iowa, and the two are fairly similar, with Woodbury averaging 8.9 per game in Olaseni’s 4.5. They’re also similar in terms of fouls and team commitment, and Olaseni has the advantage in field-goal percentage, 59.3 to Woodbury’s 54.5.

Those use percentages, which estimate what percentage of plays each player is involved in when they’re on the floor, are fairly similar, too. According to College Basketball Reference, Olaseni is used in 25.1 percent of plays, while his teammate is at 24.1 percent.

One more thing to preface this with before diving into the data is the fact Woodbury has played 47 more minutes than Olaseni in Iowa’s 9-3 games (road Texas, BYU, Sycamores, North Carolina, and Iowa State) this season.

Defensive rating — Olaseni 79.7, Woodbury 85.4

As the 54 detailed in the Dec. 12, 2013, edition of The Box Score, “Iowa has a leg up in this statistic, which estimates the points the player allows per 100 possessions. Olaseni’s offensive efficiency is 123.9, and Woodbury’s rate is 111.3.”

That defensive rating in partially because of Olaseni’s ability to stop shots from getting to the rim.

Blocks — Olaseni 26, Woodbury 4

Unless he or someone else tops it, Olaseni’s monstrous block on Abdel Nader in the first half of the Iowa State game is going to go down as the block of the year for the Hawkeyes.

With the high number of shots the Lion- don native has earned this year, it’s not too far out of the question for that scenario to happen. The 26 shots attempted rank second in the Big Ten behind Purdue’s A.J. Hammons.

Woodbury, on the other hand, has only played for 54 minutes, scored 14 points on 4-of-12 shooting, with the high number of shots the London native has earned this year, it’s not too far out of the question for that scenario to happen. The 26 shots attempted rank second in the Big Ten behind Purdue’s A.J. Hammons.

Woodbury carries the momentum from his stand against the Cyclones to the floor at Madison Square Garden.

Iowa’s best big four games

As mentioned above, Iowa has played four big games this season. The Hawkeyes are 1-3 in those contests, with the only win coming on the road at North Carolina. Whether it was by McCaffery’s design or not, that was the most balanced game in terms of minutes each player has played this season. Woodbury got 23 minutes to Olaseni’s 11.

In those contests, Woodbury, the starter, has out-performed his counterpart. Wood has totaled 150 minutes, 17 points (14-of-29 from the floor), 20 rebounds, 1 block, 7 turnovers, and 2 fouls. Olaseni, on the other hand, has played for 54 minutes, scored 14 points, earned 14 rebounds, 7 points (6-of-29 from the floor), and 7 fouls.
