The Vidette - Reporter.

IOWA CITY, IOWA, SATURDAY, MAY 6, 1882.

CHICAGO, April 28, 1882.

The lake rolls its blue waters in the distance to the east, while on the north, west, and south are monotonous piles of buildings as far as the eye can reach. Boats and drafts of all descriptions, with sail and wheel, plow through the water on this side the breakwater, and away out to the bar are fishing-boats, with their nets in the nets in the belts of mists, with color varying with distance and depths of water, we discern the largest houses, a place that was once a country, now a city.

It seems proper that some note should be soon made for the proper observance of Decoration Day. The setting apart of one day in each year for the purpose of honoring our dead heroes is a custom which it is well to perpetuate; not a day to stir up or keep alive sectional animosities, but to incalculate and keep alive the feelings of patriotism and love of country.

The challenge went forth, and the game, hallowed by the name of Ulysses and heralded down the ages in the song of Homer, was revived with renewed energy. After many praiseworthy exhibitions of amateurs, once again the arena of political contest resounded with hilarious cheers at the call of the dauntless "Esthetes," of the Dunlap house, to the confident "Dreadnaughts," of the Kenyon mansion, to maintain their much boasted reputation of superiority in the art of ball, and the quality of the royal beef of their table, in a match game of seven innings, with Duke Wellington Martin, of Her Majesty's service, as the umpire. The call met with the promptest response of acceptance, charged with defiance and terror at the presumption. 3 o'clock, of Thursday last, was the time set. The multitude assembled; the galleries, or fences, was lined with ladies, and the sturdy "Esthetes," without any display of ostentation, walked out with an intrepid boldness that conquers only after one defeat. The nickel was cast and the "Esthetes" took the bat. After four hard-won scores the "Dreadnaughts" came in and were satisfied with one. Intense excitement ensued throughout the game, waving first in favor of one and then the other, until the first half of the last inning, when the "Esthetes," conscious of there being a point in every contest, when the right bow at the right time ensures victory, made seven scores, when the "Dreadnaughts" came in and experienced their first whitewash, and virtually was revoked, by the water-carrier in the dress-circle, for "Esthetes"—22 to 18.

Are you truly the author of that poem? I think it would be too funny if one could only understand "Esthetes".

"Dear Sir:—We have received a copy of The Vidette-Reporter, and on due reflection have concluded to withdraw the invitation heretofore extended to you to deliver the oration at our celebration on Decoration Day.

By Order of Com.

"Hence these tears," the above is simply a portion of the troubles with which I am environed, and I still see breakers ahead, all on account of this Labour D'Amour of a literary fiend. Please place me right before the public.

THE CAUSE OF THE GRAECi.

BY ARTHUR J. GRAY.
State University of Iowa.

[Awarded Second Honors at the Inter-State
Contest, held at Indianapolis, Indiana, May 30.

Ideas, not swords, have filled the past with ruins. Rome was not destroyed by barbarians. True, they captured and destroyed a city whose name was Rome, but the fair mistress of the world, the pride of her children, had long been dead; and when the lands of the North stretched out their strong arms to show a bride, they embraced a corpse.

Ideas, not swords! And among the ideas that scourge mankind none is more potent than that of man's inequality,—asserting that men are not of the same blood, that we are not free and equal, that I shall be king and you shall be slave. It sounds the tocsin of war on the world's battle-fields. It is the great Goliath of history, striking through the central, over-turning kingdoms, obliterating empires, challenging republics; but no youthful David with sling and stone has yet stepped out from the ranks of the people who can slay and behead this giant of tyranny. As Americans we boast that the Declaration of Independe-cence was his death-warrant, and that our political fabric towers high above his grave. But whence comes this cry of monopoly and the warnings against centralization? Is it merely the walk of human discontent? Are not the rich becoming richer and the poor poorer? Does not monopoly dip its hands into every bushel of wheat—yes, even into the standing characteristics of the people, which are really hungry? In the dreary past, you say, cloud-crowned pyramids and moldering ruins of lofty cities whisper of slavery. In the battle-fields of yesterday, we see the victory of human rights. Yes; but this bloody monster of inequality rises from its very grave. Formally it was serfdom, now it is monopoly; yesterday it was slavery, to-day it is centralization. Take away its part from the long drama of history, and the play has lost its meaning. Exterminate this principle from the politics of to-day, and you relieve our states-cmen of half their cares.

Agrarian reformation derives its importance not merely from its theoretical side, but from the fact that it is strangely applicable to present politics. History, with all its ceaseless repetition, has resuscitated the buried past no problem of such continual importance as the use, rent, and ownership of land. The data of current history, the war of the rich and poor, the corporeal conflict, the spirit and soul, the industry and system of exploitation, the shocks and the avails, the labors and the leisure, the corn and the silver, the land and the wealth, the peace and the war, the profit and the loss, the man and the machine, the million and the tramp, the horse and the gun, the sword and the state—everything is the conflict of men over the earth. All men are not of the same blood, no; but the land is.

THE LIBRARY.

In the fine private library of Mr. Giudstone, which the Professor opened to us yesterday, the one injunction under which all is allowed, but conversation being allowed except when one is reading. "That," says Mr. Giudstone, "is necessary for the purposes of a library, and we insist upon it." The librarian of one of the great American Universities, he says, "Quiet is necessary for the purposes of a library, and we insist upon it." The noise of every book in the collection, one at a time, and questioning it as to its author, title, general and special bearing, and requiring for the proper entries a single volume from three to twenty carefully written cards. Besides the cataloguing of the books, there must be a constant indexing of periodicals as they come in, that all the latest and most subject matter may be accessible from the moment it is placed on file; and as many articles appear under the most arbitrary titles, it is often necessary to read, or at least to glance over, the article, in order to decide upon a proper heading. Now reading a magazine article at leisure, in the quiet of one's parlor, encomium, in an easy chair, is pleasant; but reading amid the constant interruptions of library work, with other duties crowding in upon one's attention, has quite another aspect. In the first place, one does not select what specially interests one, but crams away at whatever demands looking up, and time, time is always wanting. The pleasure of reading what he could best enjoy is seldom permitted the librarian; for while, to everyone else, the library is a place for study and reading and thought to him it is a field of labor, or, to quote Mr. Fisk, "In the midst of a great ocean of books, it is water, water everywhere, and not a drop to drink."

Oscar Wilde has come and gone, but you can still find handsome wall decorations at the One-Price Cash Bookstore. Thurston's, No. 5 Cigar, best 5-cent cigar in the market, at Whetstone's.

THE LAW DEPARTMENT.

Have you "the least conception of the English language?" Mr. Egbert, a former graduate, called on the class Friday. Mr. Clyde was called home on account of sickness in his family.

That was an extraordinary demurrer, but it would not stand.

Mr. Phillips has returned, after a two weeks' absence, much improved in health.

The boys will be a little more careful hereafter on whom they call for a speech.

Johnny White would be thankful for the return of his book containing notes on Washburn.

The members of the Law Society have more than passing interest in the subject of the "law." They met Wednesday afternoon to devise some plan to throw some of it off.

In the amended list of Laws of '81, Mr. W. J. Taff should have been located at Humboldt instead of Osage, Iowa; Mr. Gadsford should have been at Nappa, Cal., instead of Ann Arbor.

The reason given by one of the young attorneys why he didn't know whether he brought his case upon a writ of error or appeal was that he was "so riled" at the time he didn't know what he was doing.

Chancellor to bashful student—"Suppose your wife were to accept a bill of exchange drawn on you and sign her name, what would be the effect?" Student—"I hardly think that a supposable case."

To show how familiar and accurate some of the boys are in using Latin law phrases we print the following conversation, which took place between two of the knowing ones at a quiz club the other evening: Mr. C.—"Mr. A., if a principal, with implied powers, delegate to an administrator de bonis non, what is the effect idem constituens, and how is the final issue of non est factum controlled by the lex loci?" Mr. A. (hesitating)—"Yes, sir, I presume not."

The fat and lean men of the class played a match game of base ball Monday, in which it was demonstrated that a certain amount of flesh is a good thing, even in a game. That fairly side realized the importance of maintaining their present "standing" in society was evident from the manner in which they played. Captain Young, of the Corporalists, had his men under good discipline, and the way they handled both bat and ball would be a credit to any professional club. Captain McNerney's men—the "pipe-stems"—were well disciplined, especially his left fielder, Mr. Beem, who was the most cautious of the players, not allowing every ball that came near him, in a manner that showed he had an eye to self-preservation. At the end of the fifth inning the score stood 14 for the Corporalists to 12 for "pipe-stems."

A reasonable amount of cheek, it is said, is a necessary evil, but that an overdose is worse than none at all. This was thoroughly demonstrated on last Monday morning in the Law lecture room. Bookscornets (?) were sent up to the city for a week or so, and who was more familiarly known among the boys as "Mexico Bill," and what a fit this fellow would make of it from his general "make up"—a white slouch hat, red face, and what a countenance which could be imagined from his significant, if not envious, cognomen. He made it a special point to tell every one (the only evidence produced) that he was a graduate from one of the noted colleges, and made himself quite conspicuous around the college buildings. He came into the Law lecture room Monday morning, and that a speech was his chief desire was manifest from his every action. One of the boys desiring to "scrape up" a friendly acquaintance and ascertain his business, wrote him an innocent (?) note enquiring if he was a younger brother of Jesse James, and if his occupation was that of a thief or a gambler, and requesting a speech. This highly enraged the true moral gentleman and scholar, and when the opportunity came, he made good use of the time in giving vent to his feelings. Judging from his remarks, we do not think he entertained a very high regard for the ability of the class and their future success as lawyers. Intention cut his speech off rather abruptly—leaving him in Germany—and he sat down disgusted, and shortly left town in quest of "greener fields and pastures new."

We think the boys will less often try this trick, but we will remember the rest of the term.

MORAL.—Don't call on every one who enters the room for a speech.

Robert Egger, brother of the Professor, at one time instructor in the S. U. L, now editor of the Rockford Belote, is visiting old friends in this city.

H. S. Fairall returned from Chicago, Wednesday, and, of course, John P. Irish is expected henceforth. The city feels greatly refreshed from the much needed rest.

We would warn all persons owning a worthy umbrella against a certain lengthy Senior, who carries a clear case of False Pretense, "biz," which he wishes to trade.

The writing of a history seems such a herculean task as to daunt even the Senior. Four of these heroes have modestly asserted their unworthiness by successively resigning.

The light weight (1) of the Freshmen class had some difficulty on Monday last, in obtaining a belt sufficiently long, Uncle Sam having apparently made no calculation for military use of his size.

With anxious hearts and bated breath the Juniors wait the coming of Monday, which will be to them the day of fate. Fifteen to enter, and six to go. Purse $25.00. First money, $15.00; second, $10.00.

Mrs. S. A. Woodworth, general agent for Gallold's Compendium of Forms is at the Palace Hotel, where she will be pleased to meet all students desiring to engage in canvassing the coming summer.

What feelings are uppermost in a man's mind when he kindly offers a young lady a seat, and she, without noticing it, passes up the aisle, while the young man is left to look about, to see if any one saw his discomfiture? Brown will tell you all about it.

Would it not be a strange sight indeed to see a couple of girls taking molasses off the back of a young fellow's coat with a wet towel? One would suppose that such a sight would be included in the article. Yet all this is possible, and has happened. Ask Kennington about it.

In the game, Saturday last, between the Laws and City nine, the former came out victorious. At the end of the fourth inning the City nine refused to comply with the rules, when the umpire declared the game forfeited, with nine tallies for the Laws to nothing for the others.

May Day has come and gone, but without the traditional pole and dance. There seems to have been something of a celebration, however, as we heard much talking and laughing with the somewhat technical term "Bock" frequently interspersed. Will some kind brother rise and explain?

The Freshmen sport two base balls, a second team having been organized this week, which according to all reports is a strong one. There are not the usual arrangements made for a game today, but, as yet, we have not heard the result. Gale has been intrusted with the leadership of the new club.

Hon. John B. Finch, Nebraska's ablest Democrat, will address the people of Iowa City, in the Open House, Sunday evening, on the subject of constitutional prohibition. Mr. Finch is one of the ablest vocates of the Amendment. Let there be a general turn-out, and especially, let there be an effort made to get out those who have not yet fully decided to vote for the Amendment.

The young ladies of the M.E. Church entertained their friends at a Sunday evening in the church parlor. A pleasant time is reported. Our reporter heard that one of the young men there, in reply to the evangelist, "Oh! I have masted my kisses," frankly confessed that he kissed his "masahes," instead of making his kisses.

Robinson Club Court stowed and took by surprise, a few days ago, the office of Robinson & Peterson. Forbes was the mouth-piece of the club, and in a short speech presented Mr. Levi Robinson with Shakespeare's complete works, in ten volumes, bound in Russia leather, as a mark of esteem, and as a token to indicate the club appreciates it. It is a fine present worthy of its cost.

We clip the following from the Chicago News of April 21st:

"$10.00 reward, and no questions asked, if the young lady, whom I met at a certain eastern town yesterday morning, will return me $5.00 with which she secured a ride. The young man can be of no service to her and it is of great value to me; being a frequenter pin, it is highly prized. Address S. H. Palmer House."

Mashes are sometimes dangerous.

The following plainly indicate that some one has found himself out in the rain without the wherewithal to keep dry:

"An exchange remarks: "As an umbrella that keeps Lent all the year round is too religious for us."

"Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

Students should go to Townsend's for photograph; he is taking "portraits" and "cards at very reasonable rates."

ACADEMY COLUMN.

The enemy having been killed, turned their backs. Next.

The time for the election of officers of the society draws near. Who are the candidates?

Miss Abrams, a former member of the Society, was kindly welcomed at the meeting last week.

Mr. Wicks, a former student, now of Minneapolis, Minn., gave the Academy a short call last week.

Andrew Huber, a former student of the Academy, paid the school a short visit this week. He reports school-teaching a success.

Two base-ball clubs have been organized in the Academy, and are anxiously awaiting challenges. The members are spending all their spare time in practicing.

Botany is a pleasant study, but when it leads the anxious student to Corvalis for flowers, there must be some other attractions besides the love of scientific truths.

N. C. Young is at present at his home in Imogene, Iowa, but expects to start for the far West soon. He reports himself busy studying the vegetable kingdom. Mr. Young expects to enter the University next fall, and we predict for him a successful course.

The members of the Society should take more care in preparation. We have noticed a number of failures this past two weeks. This should not be, if it is expected that the exercises will be interesting. This is the time of year when the members should especially exert themselves.

J. B. McCurry left for home last Saturday. A hard student and an excellent scholar, Mr. McCurry will be much missed in the Academy, and especially in the Society, where he has been an earnest and a faithful worker. We understand that he will return, and enter the University tent in fall.

The Tufaonian is kind enough to compliment the Student Life very highly. Among other things it says: "It is for its success in shunning the above-mentioned evil ('filling up') that we praise the Student Life." We are glad to see that our reputation is such as is indicated in this direction. "Filling up" is a very dangerous process for papers; they often, in the act, imbibe very harmful material. And we might mention three or four papers (you needn't get scared; we aren't going to mention names) that are composed wholly of "filling up" material.

We would ask what kind of material the above is.

YOUNG MEN and LADIES
Wishing to procure a good business education, and a special training that will enable them to assume the duties of their calling, are respectfully invited to review our plan of instruction, which is conducted in connection with the Commercial College and the Commercial College of Washington, and which is designed to produce in the graduates an highest order of business men and business women. The Commercial College of Washington is one of the oldest and most prominent business schools in the country, its success being the result of the great care and pains that have been bestowed on its work. The course of instruction is divided into three parts: Book-keeping, Drawing, and Correspondence. The Commercial College of Washington, having the largest school throughout the country, and the largest number of students of any sort of business college, is the most sought after in the profession. We think it is an honor to teach, and we think it is a matter of pride to offer our pupils the best instruction that can be had.
