PROFESSOR CALVIN DESCRIBES LAND FORMS IN IOWA.

Land forms were defined as topographic features, ups and downs, water sheds, ridges and plains which are characteristics of the region. Iowa is a part of the plain of the Mississippi, with an elevation above tide ranging from 477 feet at Keokuk, to 1655 feet on Ocheyedon Mound, Osceola county. The surface of the state is included in two divisions—the driftless a small area in the northeast part of the state; and the drift-covered area, comprising the larger portion of the state.

Northeastern Iowa was an ancient peneplane, where the streams had eroded the country to base-level, and meandered sluggishly through a level plain, the whole of Iowa being then near sea level. Just before the Glacial period, or Tertiary an uplifting of the land occurred, and the streams rapidly cut deep ravines and gorges, some 600 feet deep, through the rocks, following the meandering of the old streams of the peneplane. Lateral ravines and gullies branch from these, so that a quarter section of level land would be a curiosity. This region has the most picturesque scenery in the state, as the streams cutting through rocks of varying hardness, erode them into various fantastic shapes, castles, mural cliffs, and the like.

The drift-covered area was likewise eroded, but the river-gorges were filled and the uneven surface covered with a superficial layer of glacial detritus. An evidence of this is the fact that a well dug in this area may strike solid rock close to the surface, while another close by may go down 400 or 500 feet before reaching rock. In some places the rock shows through the drift.

The drifts were not at all laid down at once, but overlap each other, differing much in composition. The oldest is the Kansan drift in the south and west; then the Illinoian in the southeast, the Iowan in the north-central, and the latest was the Wisconsin in the north and north-west. The Iowan drift is generally level, with drainage imperfect, and formerly covered with abundant sloughs; the rivers have no deep valleys, but flow almost level with the surrounding country. The Wisconsin drift plain is the youngest, and has thousands of acres without a sign of a stream. Much of the country west of Clear Lake has not yet been eroded at all, and the water flows off in sheets. In southwestern Iowa, valleys have been cut 200 feet deep wholly in Kansan drift, and the hillsides are cut with dendritic streams.

Among the peculiar features of the drift may be mentioned drumlins, rounded hills or ridges of drift parallel with front of ice-flow; kames, ridges of sand and gravel deposited by streams of water parallel with the front of ice-flow and eskers, rounded ridges supposed to have been deposited by water in tunnels underneath the glacial flow; the finest example is Ocheyedon Mound, the highest point in Iowa, 75 feet above the surrounding plane. The name of paha has been given by Professor McGee to a peculiar formation near the edge of the Iowan drift; the core being Kansan drumlins, surrounded by Iowan drift around base, and the summit covered with loess, or fine clay. Along the edges of the Wisconsin drift, the glacial materials were heaped up in ridges and hills called moraines, with undrained spaces—as at Pilot Mound, Clear Lake, Spirit Lake and Okoboji. The various phases of the above forms were illustrated by a fine series of photographs.

After intermission, a discussion was elicited as to the origin of the geologic names, and in regard to the highest point in Iowa, that honor being claimed by several different localities. Anent river erosion. Professor Winchell of Wisconsin University has calculated, from the rate at which the Falls of St. Anthony have receded since first observed, that the gorge has been cut from Fort Snelling to the present location, since the close of the Wisconsin drift period, estimated from 7,000 to 10,000 years.

Professor Veblen exhibited a camera table of his own device for scientific photography. The article to be photographed is placed upon a sliding back-ground for focusing. The camera can be elevated by a screw, or turned upon the axis of the lens if the subject is not properly oriented. Several new features and mechanical devices were employed in the construction.

Dr. Seashore reported that students in psychological laboratory, experimenting with the tuning fork, have noticed a rudimentary motion of the ear, that organ exhibiting an involuntary tendency to become more funnel shaped, in order to detect faint sounds. A discussion followed, regarding voluntary movement of the human ear.

Professor Nutting told of Dr. Thorndike's experiment in education of fishes. Fishes in a tank were compelled to pass through holes in three screens in order to reach their food. At first they took a long time to find the way, but soon learned to pass straight through. After twenty days absence they passed straight through at once with the same rapidity as before, showing that they possessed a degree of memory.

Dr. Andrews exhibited a table of figures showing the accuracy in determination of the atomic weight of hydrogen in regard to oxygen, a fundamental factor in chemistry. Ascertaining the mean error of the calculations of several authorities by method of least squares, the results agree with Morley's figures. The error would amount to one part in 150,000; applied to distance, approximately eleven inches in thirty miles; to weight, one silver quarter as compared to a ton.

It is rather remarkable that the Drake paper fails to mention the Kansas game at all.—K. U. Weekly.

We are glad too see that Cornell college is acting the good Samaritan, in playing football with Drake, when bullies (?) like S. U. I., Ames, and Grinnell abuse her. How much do you get out of it, anyhow, Cornell?—The Iowa Wesleyan.

Medical Notes.

Nearly all of the boys of the department went home to vote. Those staying put in their time working.

Doctors Whiteis, Dean and McClintock were out of town the first of the week.

The Freshies who did not go home spent the forenoons of Monday and Tuesday in the laboratory learning to identify their preparations so as to be ready for examinations which began Wednesday.

The Sophs began dissection Wednesday night. They will probably finish just before Xmas vacation.

Dr. Dean is giving experiments in physiology.

The second division in Pathology had the laboratory examination Friday.

Wescot, '01 is enjoying a visit from his father.

Young and Vincent, '02, the prosectors, are kept busy these days.

Dr. Grant with several of the boys from Riverside were up to the game.

Notes on Saturdays Game.

And still Iowa's goal line has not been crossed. Nor has any opponent, with the single exception of the Maroon eleven been able to score on us!

The game Saturday was an illustration of team work versus individual playing, and the former won as it always will. Too much reliance on "Wheeler's good right leg" put to naught all possible chance Grinnell had of winning the game. Wheeler played, it is true, but only once was the ball within reasonable distance of our goal line to try for a goal from field, and then Grinnell attempted a fake kick over our goal line but failed to fall on the ball.

The superior kicking of Warner was clearly evident. His punts averaged about 50 yards. On his last kick the ball sailed over thirteen of the chalk lines.

Howell at right tackle did good work and filled Captain Eby's place very well. It was a nice showing of Dr. Knipe's coaching that a substitute tackle should be at hand to fit in the place so nicely that the absence of the regular could hardly be felt.

F. Williams at end played an excellent game as usual. Williams has a faculty for recovering fumbles and he roped in several of Grinnell's balls at opportune moments.

The absence of slugging and of any objectionable features was noticeable. And, with the exception of two or three instances of tripping on the part of Grinnell, the game was free from foul tactics. Good feeling generally was shown.

The large number of people present was gratifying. It was undoubtedly the largest crowd that ever attended a game on our field. Grinnell sent over a large delegation and 140 rooters for old gold come down on a special train from Cedar Rapids. Fully 2,000 people witnessed the game.

The enthusiasm of the students scarcely diminished from the call of time until the disbandment of the white-appareled escort to Dr. Knipe's carriage. And there will be thrice as much at the close of the Iowa-Illinois game to celebrate the final victory of the team whose goal line has not been crossed.

Delphic Humor.

Drake University stands for pure athletics.—Drake Delphic.

Really we are at a loss to account for the above statement. In view of Drake's record in the past and the late unpleasantness over Holland, the professional, it would look as though the quoted statement was meant to be humorous.
and with such a start, we feel assured that The Delphic will soon surpass Puck or Judge—The Iowa Wesleyan.

Our Celebration.

"You cannot do too much honor to your team," were Dr. Knipe's words to the crowd of enthusiastic students Saturday night, and their hearty approval of this statement was expressed by prolonged cheering for the team and every man on it.

It was not that so much honor was due because Grinnell was shut out, but it was honor due to the men who for the last eleven weeks have worked and toiled for the honor of our Alma Mater. The defeat of Grinnell, the last considerable victory we shall have this year on our home gridiron, was the signal for this outburst of enthusiasm. The full and intense respect and love of the student body for the football team burst out spontaneously, and all the wearers of old gold rejoiced in the splendid work of the picked eleven and cheered the best team Iowa ever had.

Iowa.

The University of Iowa football team holds today what it is right and proper it should hold the first place in football circles of the state. As in all our neighboring states there is one team representative of that state, one team that stands for football in its entirety, in that state so henceforth our team will stand for Iowa. In fact it will be Iowa.

It has gained this right by its record in the state and without; it has deserved this distinction because it is representative of Iowa football in growth, in quality and in spirit; and it has always held this position in the sense that it was the University team.

We feel confident that succeeding teams will uphold this title, and we begin to look forward to the time when Iowa shall gain a similar distinction in the West.

Sophomore Cotillon.

One of the old and well established customs of the University is the giving of the class parties. The Junior Promenade and Senior Hop, and within the last three years the Sophomore Cotillon, have become events of no little importance to the social side of our college days. They are events which are most cosmopolitan in their character; events which round out the full sphere of college life.

As University affairs, conducted by student enterprise and industry, they deserve the hearty support of the student body, and this, too, even if one can get a trifle more for his money at some non-student party.

The Sophomore Cotillon will occur soon after the holidays and it behooves us to see that it is well patronized and to make such events a success to the class and an honor to the University.

The Class Football Games.

The Athletic Managers of the Collegiate classes met last evening and decided upon the following schedule:

Sophomore-Freshman game Thursday afternoon at 3:30.

Senior-Junior game Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

The winners of these two games to play
each other Saturday morning November 25th.

The officials for the games will be chosen by the captains of the teams from the men on the side-line.

The managers meet this evening with Professor Smith, President of the Board of Control, to determine whether or not second eleven men will be allowed to play.

Miss Ruth Paxson, '98 is visiting with friends in the city. Miss Paxson has been attending the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago the past year. Commencing with January 1st, 1900 she will have charge of the Y. W. C. A. interests of the state, a position for which she is eminently fitted.

The inter-class trophy cup recently presented to the Athletic Union by the Alumni of Ft. Dodge is on exhibition in Townsend's window. It is now the property of the Sophomore Medics, going in succession into the possession of the winning class in the University home fields meet.

The Burlington Gazette of Saturday says: Prof. McBride, of the State University, delivered a lecture at library hall last evening, it being the second of his group in the world making series. His theme treated of the simplest form of animal life and the subject was treated in a clear and charming manner. The next lecture will be the "Fern World."

It is one of the factors that augur the success of President MacLean of the University of Iowa that the VIDETTE-REPORTER could say of him that he is an approachable man. It is such conditions as we have in our association with president and faculty, such as the university students possess in relation with President MacLean, that makes life in a great college one of the highest benefits, and one of the most estimable gifts of modern civilization.—I. S. C. Student.
