HARVARD SECURES MAURER'S GREAT LIBRARY

Now has Best Scandinavian Library in Country—Walking Match at Cornell

The great library of the late Konrad Maurer, Professor of Old Norse History and Law in the University of Munich, Germany, was recently secured by Harvard University.

By this purchase, Harvard University becomes the possessor of one of the best libraries of Scandinavian History and Law, outside of Scandinavia, having already the largest library in Scandinavian Philology in this country.

Eighteen football men received Minnesota "Ma" for the season's work.

Dr. Edwin Booth of the chemistry department of the University of California, in some recent conducted experiments affected photographic plates to the extent of securing pictures of rays and coins by means of radium rays.

The "Jackson Club" of the University of Indiana is planning a political banquet in January at which William Jennings Bryan will speak.

An orchestra of forty pieces has been organized at the University of California.

A six-mile walking match will be held at Cornell University next Saturday.

INTER CLASS MEET

'06 and '07 Will Try Conclusions With Track Teams

Not content with the exhibition of physical prowess in the cross-country and track meet, the men will take matters into their own hands and have a track meet with the sophomore class. The same committee is to report to the class a list of suitable names for the capacity of the class track team. The election will occur before Christmas and the work of organizing a strong team will be begun immediately. It is possible that an indoor contest will be arranged for the winter months in addition to the regular contest which will take place on the home ground.

of the typically 4-year course and the 50% of the total cost which must be raised by the students themselves, the university is forced to seek alternative means of raising funds. These methods include the sale of yearbooks, the operation of on-campus businesses, and the sale of insurance policies to students. The university also receives funds from the state and federal governments, which provide a significant portion of the revenue necessary to support the institution.

Modern College Training

While the practicability of the professional colleges is generally admitted, there are some who consider collegiate training as purely theoretical. The evidence to disprove this conception is being constantly increased by the demands for college trained people. The sentiment of a large class of Iowans was shown through the committee on secondary school relations when they expressed that none but college graduates should be employed in accredited high schools.

The practicability of college training is further shown by the numerous calls, received by Professor Boson, for college graduates. The modern college course which with the aid of various university functions seeks to and does develop the student mentally, physically, and morally is giving them a training that is useful and practicable in every vocation.

Whose Lack of Interest?

Some of our neighboring University anticipates great results from a newly launched policy of giving credit to their debaters and orators for their work in such contests. In Iowa where such a system has existed for some time and where, with the exception of prizes, the inducements given to students to enter such contests are unsurpassed we must look to other causes for lack of interest. The only party to which the cause for lack of interest in these contests can be ascribed is the student body. If it were fully appreciated what good futures mean to the participants and the university more candidates would enter these contests.
