WISCONSIN IS VICTOR

"DOLLS AND IDEALS" WINS N. O. L. CONTEST

Minnesota Takes Second and Third—Oberlin has Next Contest

A telegram late this afternoon gives the results of each R. C. L. contest in order as follows: Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, Indiana, Oberlin, Chicago, Iowa.

Wisconsin through her representative Max Leob won the first place in the Oratorical Contest last night and the prize of $100 given by Frank D. Lowden, Theodore Christianson of the University of Minnesota, was given to John With, with the oration "Patrick Henry, the Agitator" and Hugh Stiles Merriam of Michigan third. The judges decision for the rank of the remaining orations could not be obtained this morning. The success of the contest was the third of a family to try for the honors of the N.O.L. and I. O. L., and the shaving devotion to money and the orations were as follows: achievements of worth from this stand.

The seven universities and colleges which comprise the league are Michigan, Northwestern, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Chicago, and Iowa universities and Oberlin College. Each school had one representative chosen in a preliminary contest.

The seniors of the class in every university and college were enrolled at Bryan of Indiana University, C. N. Kendall of Indiana College, and James S. Reeves of Richmond.

As We Think You Were

The seniors of the class in every university and college were enrolled at Bryan of Indiana University, C. N. Kendall of Indiana College, and James S. Reeves of Richmond.

"The Autocrat at Bay," Joseph R. Ellis, Oberlin.

"Patrick Henry, the Agitator," T. Christianson, Minnesota.

"Ideals and Ideals," Max Leob, Northwestern.

High School Dance

The seniors and alumni of the Iowa City high school gave a very picturesque dance last night at Smith's Arcady. The back ground of the Junior from decorations were returned and further decorated with the high school colors. About a hundred students and guests were in attendance and Mr. Melody's orchestra furnished the music.

CHICAGO.
The situation became acute when the state universities will have only two alternatives to choose from. They must either increase their faculty salaries to the point that will enable them to make provision themselves as they go along for their support after retiring or they will have to improve some scheme for a state pension fund to be created out of the same resources from which the universities themselves would be impoverished. The difficulty here would be that if the state could not maintain state universities to provide pensions for their university professors they will not be able to stop there, but will have to provide for pensions for teachers in all branches of their public school system, and then for all permanent employees in the state civil service. That none of the state university commonwealths are ready for such a radical departure goes without saying.

On the other hand, one other solution remains to prevail upon Mr. Carnegie to remove the un called for mischievous discrimination against state universities and to open his pension fund foundation to all higher educational institutions alike. We do not believe Mr. Carnegie thoroughly realized the pernicious consequences sure to follow the rule he has attached to this endowment, or that he would intentionally put the people of those states who have assumed the burden of supporting their own universities as public institutions without waiting for private gifts or bequests, as a disadvantage as compared with those who have had their universities supplied to them almost without cost by benefactions of wealthy philanthropists. Mr. Carnegie's people in the distribution of his bounty has been to help people to help themselves and none deserve better under this rule than the state universities which have been established and maintained by the people and for the people.
