The Mystery Scheduling—"Charley's Aunt" Remains

The identity of "Charley's Aunt" still remains a mystery, and the matter of its choice is one which will probably be left to the last moment. The mystery is a mystery because it seems likely that the producers may possibly refuse to disclose the truth regarding this character in their production, which opens on Sunday evening. That "Charley's Aunt" is the leading role in the cast is admitted, but no further clue is given, save that she is a student in the University, a member of the literary society, and that the picture of her which has appeared on all advertising material for the play is a true likeness. So far as the student body is concerned, the graduating class of 1901, of which a very funny story has been made, in attempting to select the very best male talent in the university, and upon their success in choosing the managers largely base their conclusion that the play will surpass in many ways any similar home-produced effort.

Busy Day—Gen. Cock, Math. Cloth held a special meeting in the boys' room on Monday, with attending clinical exercises, will be held here April 17 and 18. The program, which will continue two days, will consist of clinical topics to be held on some of the most noted practitioners of the University, and college, and of the University exhibition, and subject of the alumni. One of those who will be present is Dr. W. F. Hoar, professor of medical science, and president of the Western Reserve, in Cleveland. Dr. Hoar was chosen in part because of his importance and influence in American medicine, and because of some of his approaches, especially the Atlantic Medical Association, this year, which has attracted widespread comment.

Magazines, and catalogues are indispensable. One acquires grace both in manner and speech in the portrayal of character upon the stage.

A real help results from the interpretation of life. In the drama one can use his mechanism, not only his actions and their results, but his origin is laid bare. To do this properly the reader must be educated. More of amiable words must be the mark.

Probably the greatest good from the increased ability to interpret these. The real instincts of literature can be not easily grasped unless it can be logically carried on speech. This school of spoken literature begins right here; these are beginning points.

In no way is the effort of the summer player to be discouraged; rather it is to be commended, a great deal. Perhaps appearances grow, but the power never does.

It is always to be desired: a better insight into life is truly needed. The best interpretations of Biography are secured by an error of the
