CHANGES IN RULE.

"Big Eight" Likely to Take Similar

Action—Prof. ed. Talks of Iowa's Problem.

Present indications seem to point to a revival of the rules regarding semester baseball in both the Chippewa and Missouri Valley confederacies. That many good players are now barred from participation in intercollegiate contests because they have earned money by taking part in off-season amateur playing situations is well known. Report has it that many of the major college institutions have now barred on the rule that anyone who has earned money in that way shall be penalized in the future just as he has been in the past.

The seemingly sure "all-peats" from both

Chicago and Missouri Valley are now barred from participation this year just as they have been in the past.

There are indications that at least some of the major college institutions have made a change in the rule that has been in effect for the last two or three years. It is a rule that states that all players who have earned money by taking part in off-season playing shall be barred from college competition for a year or two or three. Many of the major colleges are now considering a change in the rule that will allow some of the major college institutions to continue earning money during the off-season and still have their players eligible for competition. The rule that has been in effect for the last two or three years is that all players who have earned money by taking part in off-season playing shall be barred from college competition for a year or two or three.

The new rule that is now being considered is that all players who have earned money by taking part in off-season playing shall be barred from college competition for a year or two or three but that those who have not earned money by taking part in off-season playing shall be eligible for competition.
