DRESS YESTERDAY A.M.

Many Papers Read by Prominent Historians of the Mississippi Valley Today

The first two sessions of the meeting of the Mississippi Valley Historical Society were held yesterday morning and afternoon in the Assembly room of the hall of liberal arts. A large number of papers were presented by well-known historians from all parts of the Mississippi Valley and a variety of subjects were of such a high degree of excellence.

The meeting was opened by President George E. M. Lachen. The president of the Mississippi Valley Historical Association, Professor Orin G. Libby, of the State University of North Dakota, gave the address of greeting to the university on the subject of "Professional Idealism." Professor Libby made a telling speech in which he announced a variety of subjects and devoted a half day of excellence.

The closing session of the meeting was held in the Assembly room at 4 o'clock. President George E. M. Lachen presented the roll of members, and President Orin G. Libby gave the address of the university on "The Flower and the Rose." Professor Libby made a telling speech that illustrated the address of the university.

The papers read in the morning session were by Mr. Albert Walckena, historian of the State Historical Society of North Dakota; Mr. John B. Brown, historian of the State Historical Society of Iowa, and Mr. John C. H. Ralston in the president of the association.

north in Davis and瀛州. "This an economic empire has been built up west of the Alleghenies and, by its position it furnishes the necessity of interest that will provide the irreparable bond of the United States. As it has half great significance in the past and has so much vitality directed the destinies of the United States, it is to be expected that it will have a significant influence in the world's history even more profusely." For the first address, Mr. John Lee Webster of Ft. Dons, president of the Nebraska State Historical society spoke of the "Duty of the State in Its Relation to History." "History," he said, "is the foundation of all nations and of all interest; it is an honest with every human being. In view of this fact it is the state's duty to gather and present to the people, all history in the most interesting and must vivid form. This can well be done by utilizing every opportunity to portray some great historical event in the moral and spiritual development of our countrysides and places. This is the state's duty to mould and to preserve."
