Tributes and Eulogies Both of First Order—Towel List Was Well Read

The fourth annual university dinner was held last evening, in honor of the retiring students. The dinner was attended by over 1,000 guests, making it the largest dinner attended by the students.

The evening started with speeches of tribute to the departing students. Each senior was given a special tribute from a faculty member or a fellow student. The speeches were heartwarming and emotional, capturing the essence of the students' time at the university.

The dinner concluded with a performance by the University Choir. The choir's performance was well-received, and the evening was remembered as a memorable event for all who attended.

GREAT FRIENDSHIP
It is a noticeable trend of the presentday college to develop a closer bond of union. A time arrived when there was no such elastic entity as the college world. It is now becoming apparent that the institution is permeated with a characteristic of a progressthat permeates every pore of modern society.

In the past students were prone to expunge a narrow pride in their own particular future power to bear on society to such a degree that it alone adorns their horizon of intellectuality. They saw it only. What good other schools have was of our striking advantage. They limned influence forever. Much to the credit of the present and immediate past a change has been brought about. A genuine interest attaches in the minds of every college man and woman to know of the events that transpire in other institutions. A neighboring school may claim interest in a surprising degree. It is all a beacon, well-intentioned interest, one that makes for the solidification of all that pertains to mental advance. Numerous influences pass and date for the benefit of all that pertains to mental advancement. Numerous influences pass and date for the benefit of all that pertains to mental advance.

YOU'RE not so much interested in the remodeling of our store as we are, of course; we don't expect that. But it is an event of some importance to you; because it means a better store; and that means a greater opportunity for us to be of service to you.
