WELCOME EDUCATORS

Once again the University welcomed its annual conference of educators, including superintendents and superintendents. Many of the visitors have been here before and are acquainted with the appearance of the University and with the farmers' Institute. At the beginning of the junior high school and must be 15 years old. The students are expected at their places in the school and have special teachers. The juniors must be graduates of a normal school, or have a degree from a college, or have five years of experience, two of which must have been in Iowa.

The four courses of study in the junior high school are English, teaching, common branches, and education. The teachers, and superintendents, and industrial work including preparation of tech manuals, manual training, seat work, and agricultural work.

The purpose teaching includes work in the rural schools, and during the period the student is visited by the supervising superintendent, who helps her to improve his teaching.

One year's certificates are awarded at the end of the term. The teacher may receive evidence of successful teaching and take away on evidence of unprofitable work.

Prof. E. E. Lewis

Standards for the junior high school were set up by Prof. E. E. Lewis of the University, and are based on the following:

It must include two years.

It may be one year.

It is placed in the junior high school.

All the information is basic.

Our goal is to train the student.

The advantage of reading tests described as experimental is that they are designed to test the student in the same way, without knowing the materials.

December

December's first few days mark the beginning of the end; for with them a brighter winter day is forecast. Not that Leithman notes here no further day of our course. It is almost as thrilling a prospect with a previous charge. There are hopes, growing, and many that the year will bear fruit.
