REPORTER HAS MERCURY CURE CUTTING EXPERIMENT AGAIN

"The higher they go, the further they fall," was first applied to the nervousness of the air, but it can just as correctly be used to describe our own little effey-Old Man Mercury. Last Sunday, he yielded a thank of oxygen and ascended to the dizzy heights of 53 degrees above sea. During the night, he reached other high altitudes.

There is said to be a fee that gets all aviators sooner or later, and one of these is the man with dry Mercury. Wednesday, as he was drifting along with his customary unhappiness, something went wrong with his machine, and he began to fall with terrific swiftness. At 7 o'clock yesterday morning, he re- gained control but he was then at an altitude, or lack of altitude, of ten degrees below zero. His immediately begins to climb-nastily, but it is not expected that he will be able to much serious altitude for several days.

LOOK OUT FOR THE BUFFALO

In about three weeks students should be careful about romancing around the halls and studying buildings, as they might suddenly meet a huge buffalo on its way to the athletic field and be crushed flat.

According to Prof. H. B. Dill, the last of the group of buffalo in the country will soon be finished and will be placed with the female and youths that are in the men's main hall. The model is finished and ready for the skin.

Would Give State Board Power to Complain Foundation—Recom mission—Plans may be Suggested by Law Now after

Not one sanitary drinking fountain in ten thousand is really sanitary, according to Prof. J. B. Dunlap of the department of health and recreation. Most of them are only a little better than the old "punch balls." Nothing is confusing flowing type as manufacturing or built on principles of health. The main difficulty with the international fountain is that persons who fill their glasses too high and too fast. They will not solve the whole problem. In this particular type, too little liquid flows from the fountain than may be desired. When the drinker first begins to fill the vertical direction of the water drops back into the receptacle and many of the germ life settle in the ashes of the fountain or down in it. The next time the fountain is filled, these areas are lifted up to the drinker.

The international fountain is little or no more sanitary than the "punch balls." From the standpoint of a one who will retail expend the cost of the water column for a period of from 3 to 4 hours. Most of the organizes are financed away, but some remain the danger of a possible explosion as a half chance on the oxygen fountain, even though it may be hereafter to the top of高度 of four inches.

An investigation recently made to determine forty-five out of seventy-seven bubble fountains were contaminated. They were proved to have a marvelous sensitivity for an epidemic of disease... In the belief that some should be passed and enforced requiring the approval of all fountains by the state board of health. Prof. Dunlap outlines, "The best way we know to the spread of disease by drinking fountain is to condemn the fountain so that the column of water is threw up at a speed. In this way there can be no danger whatsoever to the germ will not remain suspended in any but a vertical stream of water any but a vertical stream of water and the water would not touch the receptacle after it had traveled the top of the user."
