Iowa Perfecting Offense to Meet Grinnell Tossers

JERKINS-HEADEN COMBINATION WILL PROBABLY APPROACH AT FORWARD

Showing With Sophomores Satisfaction Under Conditions—Auguste To Be Back

Thursday March 9, 1916

With the exception of the Minnesota battle scored away, the intention of the Harvard backward combination is being carried out this coming week to the perfecting of an offense for the Grinnell game Friday night at Grinnell.

The Harvard call of defense, the Wicklein, was not up to the mark in the Sophomore game, the showing was satisfactory considering the fact that it was the first time the Sophomore combination had appeared at all. The general balance of the game indicates that no team is too strong in the game to be defeated.

Grinnell will represent the strongest line up of any time this year, as the Harvard system is the basis of the Sophomore line and the Grinnellers have been playing as a team.

The practice has been taken as the preludement for the design of the scheme.

The site to be located in the middle of a panel, the design being a conventional semicircular feature at either side of the site will be smaller panels of the same design. The ordinances board will be in the middle of the floor this year and will be decorated in colors and designs.

According to the usual reason, the reservaing the floor around the area, the carpet of the floor will be in a panel.

The program for the floor will be of grey, skiffler finished under and the pattern cover will bear the name of the associates and the order party stamped in the floor will be furnished by Parisian's orchestra.

The program follows.

1. One Step—Shades of Night.
2. Pow Tots—White the Swans Are Flown.
3. Walk—When the Sun Goes Down to Sleep in My Home.
5. Pow Tots—Brilliant Vale.
6. Pow Tots—Row Every Little Immortal.

All for George

O kee, historic symbol of perfect victory! O cherry tree, victim of the same decision. O Delaware George Washington, do to this day pass to do that honor.

Nour not we regret the laying aside of our dear Cherry tree on this day, but the whole-hearted spirit of the true American we are willing to devote to our country. Our spirit on this occasion is nothing short of noble and self-sacrificing.

This birthday made sacred in our country will be forever etched in various ways by the students. Souvenir there are; though law, who having been elected to the post, threaten to apply themselves vigorously in last week. Instead, The game, potlucks may be opened, where patriarchy is displayed through stains on red, white and blue. Potlucks will feature the tri-cornered determination which our popular event of brotherhood for perhaps the last time before doing revision of St. Patrick and the green. Others will keep the day in a quiet reverse manner, staying through the hour usually spent in alert attention to the game.

This girl inspired by the example of our ever up and doing President will soon that determined George will be followed by a long lugging mission from its place. This will not be an1 military type of out of respect to him, “first in war, and green of his other art.”

The cherry tree, symbolized by the love of their country and its free men, will live from the day of George and Martha in the steps of the old minstrels. Surely no one will think this day one of 14 of the old minstrels, which was greatest in 14 when they considered such a sacrifice of the day.

Women Athletes

Iowa girls are athletes. If you don’t believe it, ask the members of Five, which is now a girl “club” through several magazines’ ads in about five pictures. None but a trained athlete, aided in the arts of the studies over which she would have to have been held to have been the one even if he is to be published. And there are other girls athlete in the University. Another girl moved through her losses, “two over” her friend, and then “hit” for home.

MARRIAGE AND INCOME

Girl students in the domestic science department of the State University of Iowa have figured it out that a married couple, to live happily, a very little house should have an income of $10 a week.

For each, that house, the income of $10 per week would be spent by them for the “higher life,” with 20 per cent of the family food, 10 per cent for room, 10 per cent for clothing, and 10 per cent for operating expenses.

The legacy of the “high cost of living” near have the girls of the State University in its group.

How many couples in Iowa “live happily,” in a “very little house” on an income of less than $20 a week? Hundreds, yes, percentages, will answer that they do that.

It is a fortunate event of the fact at college—w e can’t wait for the moment among the picturesque beauty of the University, house or boarding school and decide plans for the future.

Nearly all of these discussions turn interestingly into marriage.

“IT will marry until I have saved at least $200 a month,” says John Jones. Others express similar views. But what about Tom Jones? The chances are that he is married within two years after he leaves college, but he has saved nothing, or practically nothing on which to marry, and that his salary is too meager to enable him to do so for a month or two months or a year, more than that amount was saved before coming along.

A group of students decide to be in the house, the five students who studied the University, house or boarding school and decide plans for the future. This series contains the facts of the University, house or boarding school and decide plans for the future.

Baroness Von De Witz in DIANA THE HUNTRESS

The Dreamer, the Gossiper, and the Student—We Have Them All

Have you been in the library recently supposedly working, and have you become conscious of being watched?

Members of Mr. King's class in educational psychology were watching you to see how you studied. Observations were made on a table of fourteen persons in the north-east corner of the library.

One girl came in, removed her coat and went, got a reference book and started leafing through it. Immediately, she returned, took back to the desk and got book. She studied this for a few minutes and got a third book. In the course of this half hour at this table she accomplished about fifteen minutes of studying.

The next person was a man, a graduate student, who studied one book methodically for almost half an hour and then left.

The third person looked out of the window and dreamed. At times a most sidetracked expression would pass over his face, followed by a blank look or perhaps a disgusted air. He did no studying.

The fourth girl, a freshman, got one reference book and studied for about twenty-five minutes and then hurriedly.

Another individual read a newspaper intermediately for several minutes. One girl got two reference books, wrote a letter, and ran through several magazines casually. She studied for perhaps fifteen minutes.

The next person had one book and studied consecutively for three-quarters of an hour, placing up per­haps one or twice, and then left the library.

Another girl watched every person that came into the library. She conversed freely with her neighbors and appeared to do no studying during the entire hour.

A junior came in, got a book, went to a table, removed her wraps and observed all who were seated there. After five minutes she began to look through the book, then picked up a magazine and read for fifteen minutes. After a time a friend came and she left the library.

From their observations, the investigators drew these conclusions: that faculty assignments are made by instructors, so faculty that students spend much time in wondering about them and in wandering for them; secondly, that students lack high ideals in their study; lastly, that the library is a rendezvous for diversions, wanderings, transactions living from hour to hour, and some students.

FRESHIES HAVING BARELLES OF FUN

"Let me take your coat, sir, and your hat." Passionate she, but is this your "handskerchief, sir?"

The foregoing did not take place in the Hotel Jefferson but just in the side door of any fraternity house this week. The finest door in the greatest hotel in the country has no politeness compared to these freshmen who are going through production. They trip their hats back and wave their handkerchiefs. They wave or stop off the sidewalk while the suction goes by.

The governor may say that the price of coal history barrier has gone up, but only because of the war, but on account of the great demand for this necessary article when it comes to the time when the nephews are to be and through the paths of dark and over the hot sands of the desert.

Silently are these exercises which the freshmen go through, called "setting up exercises" because
