Iowa will take the floor against tonight in the Hawkeye gymnasium in an effort to reverse the defeat which the Cyclones basketball team sustained to the Old Gold team two weeks ago. It is admitted that Kent's men have the smallest chance to win. The Hawkeyes do not understand the ability and strength of the two teams. A defeat administered to The University Players will reach those men.

After the services of the seniors and to the seniors and in order to begin at once, June 1. After the services of the seniors to the seniors, Mrs. George E. PERSONS MUST SEND PRINT OF NAIL BEFORE THEY ACCEDE TO UNIVERSITY "Who is the print of the nail in your hand?" questioned Bishop Theodore Henderson in closing his address at the Y.M. and Y.W. C.A. speaker service Sunday afternoon. "Ask the students of the University if they see in this your hand evidence that they will never believe in your democracy again.

"No, there is nothing more it's the same old story."

"The University gets $500,000 a year to spend for education. Why has the State of Iowa not spent so much money for education? Because it has exceeded the democratic ideal of education.

"Future Bites in Students"

"If people are the same, all that we must do is to take it from every source," the bishop declared. "If God is in his university, then God must be present in his demonstrations of His presence. Unless I see God in the print of the nail, today I will remain where I am."

United States will never settle permanently its difficulties with Japan so long as the real estate fashions in California nor with the Mexican lords or the Sinhalese or the Chinese or the patriotic parades. This is not in evidence in the international affairs of Europe. What's the matter with her."

Bishop Henderson condemned the existing cultures of the Greeks as the existence of religious states, saying that they have gone where religious nations will always be without the print of the nail.

"The Examinations, all orders from liberal arts students for invitations must be sent to the Student Secretary. Be careful not to send Van Voorst. He adds that if in any way the студеnt of the people of the state will be no possibility of getting through the good professional colleges have been used in all departments. Samples are on display in the smoking room for examination. Orders may be left at the Student Secretary's office.

THE DEADLINE!

In framing a constitution for the University, Governor Harding said, "We are torn asunder tomorrow, the auditorium will be a great thing to plan this expenditure of money for education. Why has the University of Iowa spent so much money for education? Because it has exceeded the democratic ideal of education.

Indeed, from 1889 to 1894 the act was an anomaly. Although for many years, the dental department of the university was a place where the students were taught, the dean was appointed by the legislature, and the department was under the control of the state dental society. In 1891 the dean, Mr. John P. Duncombe—who had passed on to the legislature, since funds were at hand to found the college—changed from two years of study to four, which was inadequate. About that time the dental school was transferred from the medical college to the dental college, which had been opened by the state in 1884.

The dental college was then expanded, and a new building was constructed. The building was completed in 1893, and the dental school moved. The new building was much larger than the old, and it was designed to accommodate the needs of the dental school.

In 1894, the dental school was opened for the first time, and the students were admitted. The students were required to take a comprehensive examination, and the results were used to determine their eligibility for admission. The examination consisted of a written test and an oral examination. The students were required to pass the examination in order to be admitted to the dental school.

The dental college was a model for other dental schools in the country. The curriculum was designed to be rigorous, and the students were required to take a wide variety of courses. The courses included anatomy, physiology, chemistry, physics, and microbiology. The students were also required to take practical courses, which included laboratory work and clinical experience.

The dental college was recognized as a leader in dental education. The school was one of the first to offer a four-year program, and it was one of the first to offer a residency program. The school was also one of the first to offer a program for the training of dental hygienists.

The dental college was a major contributor to the growth of the profession of dentistry. The school was one of the first to publish a journal, and it was one of the first to host a dental convention. The school was also one of the first to establish a dental library.

The dental college was a leader in research. The school was one of the first to establish a dental research laboratory, and it was one of the first to conduct dental research. The school was also one of the first to publish research findings.

The dental college was a leader in the promotion of dental health. The school was one of the first to establish a dental health program, and it was one of the first to offer dental care to the poor.

The dental college was a leader in the training of dental educators. The school was one of the first to offer a program for the training of dental educators, and it was one of the first to recruit faculty members with strong research and teaching backgrounds.

government ought not tamper with sul harding says education should be free from state governing bodies university should be helpful to lines of research as well as in offering higher education remarkable growth noted.

the university is an institution which should not be tampered with by the government said governor W. L. Harding when questioned yesterday by a member of the Iowa staff.

"in my opinion education is a thing which should be free from any close connection with the state governing bodies. Here at Iowa City you have educators who are experts and specialists in their lines, and I do not think it is good policy for them to be handicapped by any branch of the state government in their efforts at building up this institution. Educator's life is education and he should not have his hands tied by persons who are not versed in educational matters or by legislative bodies, simply because this is a state university.

along certain lines of research such as the sciences, geology, medicine and others, I am of the opinion that the university should be the servant and work with the departments at Des Moines to gain results that can only be attained with such equipment and facilities as you have here.

it has been a number of years since I have had such opportunity to observe the university closely as I have today. I cannot help noticing the remarkable changes.

the added enrollment and the new buildings have made the place seem like a different institution.

will double enrollment

it is my prediction that the next seven years will bring about many wonderful changes. I look for the university to be in a position to move more than double itself. The great wealth is in creating each year in our state and the people of Iowa with all this are fast coming to realize that higher education is no longer a luxury but a necessity.

this added wealth of Iowa will undoubtedly result in more parents sending their sons and daughters to Iowa University. This cannot end in searching but a greater and better Iowa for which we are all striving.

Dr. G. T. W. Patrick, senior member of the instructional staff, presided throughout the ceremonies.

The university band, seated on the platform, played "Chimes of Normandy" at the opening, "Serenade" after Dr. Shannon's address and an Arbor overture just before the close, showing their usual fine capacity for the handling of good music.

The Men's Glee club sang "On the Sea" as a second number and Frank Harsano sang a solo, with the entire club becoming the accompaniment. The ceremonies ended almost two hours.

The decoratior of the auditorium was the work of a committee consisting of Claude A. Patterson, chairman, minnie pierce, virgin lambert, walter turner, horace sullivant, edna anderson.
