In the spring of the above changes. This is the general plan of locating all advanced students in part time at least, or by individual work. From then, though situated in the regular classes, they may be given independent problems to solve, thus being initiated into the methods of research. Naturally there will be a considerable number of independent research workers who will also stimulate some of the classes.

Courses will be offered in field science, animal science, mathematics, history, biology, and agriculture and advanced botany. The staff for the semester will include Prof. R. B. Wylie, acting director and instructor of botany; Prof. G. P. Stapp, assistant; Dr. J. C. Stapp of Ithacopolis, research work with birds of the region; and A. F. Reeds of St. Louis, field course in plant taxonomy.

FRESHMEN MUST FILE THREE DECLARATIONS
March 1 is the last day for the filing of the freshman declarations. These are to be of not more than 1200 words. They must be handed in at 3:30 at Professor Murray's office. The final results will be published in the college songbook. The writer believes that the number of applications in the long run, though it may tend to reduce it for a few years, the number of students will be taken some time before the laboratory opens. The total number that can be accommodated is a thirty-four, and to this week, twenty-four applications have been received. Of this number, all but four are graduate students.

HOLD ALL DAY CLASSES
The second feature of this year is that of all-day sessions for the entire summer months. Under this plan each class will have both afternoon and afternoons approximately the entire day may be spent in the field. This system continues to be a feature of the school, and to this week, twenty-four applications have been received. Of this number, all but four are graduate students.

DEEMER CLOSE FRIEND OF STATE UNIVERSITY

In the death of Justice Horace E. Deemer Monday morning at his home in Red Oak, the University lost one of its warm friends, according to Prof. C. Horack of this college of law.

“Ever since his graduation from this college in 1879,” says Professor Horack, “he had taken an intense interest in the welfare and the activities of his alma mater, something more than the interest of an alumnus. It is seldom that one sees this type of devotion in the graduates of a school.

Justice Deemer was a member of the law faculty, giving lecture courses on criminal law and appearing before the Iowa supreme court, where he continued his services in part, coming here in the spring of each year to lecture on the subject “Legal Ethics.” He was known to almost everyone connected with the law school in many years, spending his summers in connection with the Iowa bar as many years as possible.

Justice Deemer was appointed as justice of the Iowa supreme court, continuing his legal duties for many years, teaching law courses here, and as clerk of the Iowa supreme court, he continued his services in part, coming here in the spring of each year to lecture on the subject “Legal Ethics.”

BOY TO BE A COWARD

Professor Bohumil Shinko has no sympathy for the “didn’t-ralee-my-his-to-be-in-soldier” spirit. He declares he has a son who will follow the flag if he is needed, and the boy’s father, old as he is, may go along.

“Of all the unfortunate words of cousins or sons of recent times, the most unfortunate is that phrase ‘I didn’t raise my boy to be a soldier,’” Professor Shinko said in a recent address.

“We have a boy at our home, and the times may come very soon when he will be called upon to leave our homes and go to fight for the flag under whose protection he has been reared, and of course it will grow so if this comes to pass, but we shall never bid him go.

“We did not raise our boy to be a soldier either, but neither did we raise him to be a coward of the type of those who wave the flag and pretend to partake in some of the times and those behind and take up the cause of those in danger, if it be it will go with him. If I am getting old, but I would be worth a whole regiment of the peace prattling motorists.”

STUDENT TRADE

There are 3000 students in the University of Iowa, one-third of whom are girls. It takes the kindly patience and willing service of every Iowa advertiser to adapt his business to the demands of this ever changing, heterogeneous body of students.

Their personal desires are stated as well as their actual needs, in order that each one may be satisfied. And they do satisfy this great body of people to a remarkable degree. The student, as a rule, does not appreciate just what it really means to be on the alert, ever ready to extend little favors to suit individual faculties. Yet our advertisers co-operate with every student activity, not for their personal satisfaction, but in order that they may be able to know just what the student needs and student desires are.

Moreover, it is only through the assistance of those who advertise in the Daily Iowan, that it can exist. It is not your turn, then, to do all that you can to co-operate with those advertisers, and to aid them, as they aid you, by turning to them for what ever you wish to buy.
