WALKER WILL SPEAK TO DRAMATIC CLASS
ORGANIZERS AND DIRECTOR OF PORTLAND'S NEWS
TUESDAY AFTERNOON
Stuart Walker, originator and di-tor of the Portlandian drama society, will be brought to the Elkhart Tuesday, March 15, to explain the dramatic classes in the natural science auditorium at 4:15 that afternoon, according to an announcement made by Manager MacVair yesterday. Any student interested is welcomed to attend.

Mr. Walker's subject will be "The Modern Theatre," a topic with which he is so well acquainted, having for six years been manager for David Sauls.

This lecture was given at Ann Arbor two weeks ago, and was very well received by the audience.

Isolating the next mile for the evening, Mr. MacVair declares that the players are well pleased. Over Elsah has already been pledged, which was in answer of the expectations.

In the art of abolishing, Business was merely directing field work during the game. Merely as an example of some of the work as field captain during some game of the 1915 football team. As soon as 8. 00 a.m., he made personal calls to men, thus stirred up spirit among the players. Each man was sought near, each man was sought out, each man was sought when they left. Stub was always out working among the men and keeping them going.

Other things, other sports, other captains might be cited in a similar manner to illustrate the point. When a coach has a captain with fire and enthusiasm such as this, he certainly stands a better chance than with himself, and the school would no doubt notice the difference in the team. To the close of the season, the chosen captain of an athletic team is one of the big honors of a man’s athletic career and should be guarded as such by faithful service. The ball of the difficulty does not lie with the men under which the captain is chosen, but rather with the man who is chosen, if it is not practical. The remedy need not be the abolition of the system.

THE CAPTAIN’S DUTY

Athletic coaches in a few of the larger colleges and universities are abolishing, or looking with disfavor upon, the system of captains for athletic teams. Several tried out the system last fall during the football season and apparently found it successful. The chief argument by which this system is upheld is in the fact that all of the members of the team, or a large number at least, are given an opportunity to sit in this position of honor during each season as field captain during some game.

The idea of organizing a field captain for each game has some strong points, but there are also some broader and more fundamental principles which must be considered among the duties of the captain than merely directing field work during the game. Simply as an example of some of the work which a captain may do, we cite Stub Harris, captain of the 1915 football team. As soon as Stub had been elected in the fall of 1914, he began his plans for the team in the fall and in the summer he made frequent trips to the registrar’s office to look up grades and if a man was down in his work, Harris saw to it that he was caught up; he made personal calls to the rooms of prospective candidates in the evenings; stopped men on the street to enquire how they were going along and, by his own enthusiasm, thus stirred up spirit among the men.

When spring practice started, Stub was always out with the men, forcing the coaches and urging the men in their efforts to master the principles presented. When summer term the crew near, each man was sought out and encouraged to get into some work which would condition him for the team in the fall and in the summer the men, frequently receiving letters asking if they were handling the ball which had been given to them when they left. Stub was again on hand when practice started in the fall, always working among the men and keeping them going.

Other things, other sports, other captains might be cited in a similar manner to illustrate the point.

With some 200 dentists and others related to dental health, from throughout the nation, received by President Jessup at a reception Wednesday evening at his home.

President Jessup, in remarks to his meeting with a group of dentists attending the University's annual meeting on Thursday, said that you, probably the majority of your dentists, must face the problem of becoming a public teacher.

President Jessup was handed a comprehensive report on the present status of the dental profession and the dental schools.

"You are going to the future," he said, "in spite of the fact that the dental profession is in a state of receivership. The future is demanding 100 per cent more men."

President Jessup emphasized the importance of the dental profession and the dentists' role in the future.

"The whole universe" was the keynote of President Jessup's speech.

Dr. W. A. Hoofard, president, summed up the banquet by saying that the annual session of the Alumni Association was a unique occasion.

"We are gathered here tonight," he said, "to renew old friendships, to make new ones, and to strengthen the bonds of our association with the University.

"We are all here tonight to renew our acquaintance with our old and new friends, to strengthen our ties with the University, and to foster the good fortune of the University.
