CHANGE TO BE GREATER THIS YEAR

Central Powers Cannot Withstand Outfight of Allies, Says Former Student.

The central powers are steadily growing weaker and simply cannot withstand the great onslaughts our allies are giving. The Germans are on the point of being divided in the western war by now.

These opinions were expressed by Mr. T. Potter, student in the University 43 years ago, now serving in a Canadian company on the French front, and who is the older brother of Ray Potter, previous brothers.

"Artillery shelling is very frequent and we are always on the move. We are expecting a German counterattack by dawn."
Some Folks Say
That an Automobile Show is simply
"A Lot of Automobiles"

FAMOUS MUSICIANS WILL RETURN

Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra: Opening at 7 o'clock.

Announcement is made that arrangements have been completed for the appearance of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra on May 8 under the joint auspices of the University Student Council and the Iowa City Symphony Club. Universal interest has already been shown in the project and the festival this year promises to be a great success. Assistant Manager L. E. Todd states that no fewer than a hundred names have been added to the guest list, or forty names as many as the list last year. According to reports the list may have been extended a good deal longer if it had seemed an absolute necessity to have included even more.

FALLACIES OF PACIFISM

A Miltiary is one who believes in universal service. This is the duty and obligation of every citizen. We are not slaves nor cowards, but to get around our duty when we are threatened by ruthless despot, backed by a military force is weak and unworthy. THINKS WAR SHOULD BE FINANCED BY TAX
Bond Issuance, University Economists Say, Would Make Budget Fall on Poor.

Transition rather than becuase of bonds must be the method adopted to finance the United States' war in the view of the view of Dr. E. W. Whitney, professor of banking and finance at the University.

Dr. Whitney believes that the country must pay its gooses and that every patriotic citizen must economize in every way possible to meet the cost.

There are two ways of financing war, Dr. Whitney points out—borrowing and taxation. Heavy taxation will prevent extravagance, whereas bond issues would lead to extravagance.

If all the surplus in the individual's homes is taken he will be forced to economize, but if goods are used and are paid for merely by promise to be much more reckless in expenditures. If the war is financed by bonds, individuals who have a surplus will not make the mistakes they would if they were taxed. They merely earn their surplus funds and get a gift-interest invested.

Would Hold Prices Down.

Transition, Dr. Whitney says, will tend to prevent a rapid increase in prices. Whereas government borrowing would inflate prices, the funds which would be loaned to the government would be obtained mainly through advances made by the banks. The advances would be in the form of credit on the books of the banks.

Hence there would be no enrichment of bank deposits or bank currency. The increase in the quality of money would left to an increase in prices.

Another consideration in favor of taxation is that the rich and the moderately rich—those people who would be able to buy bonds to any extent—would bear their full share of the extraordinary charges on the state.

Serious objections to financing the war by means of loans is that it results in creating a reckless class within the nation to which the rest of the nation is indebted. In the year following the war the great mass of the people who own none of the bonds will not have the privilege to be required to give for the war.

The people of the day that they would be repaying tribute to the Jew for a country that should have been met by each according to his ability.

Maid Borrow Roads.

Of course the war cannot be financed entirely without borrowing because money will be needed indepdendly and a tax system, no matter how wisely arranged, will not raise considerable revenue for months.

It cannot be too strongly impressed upon the people of this nation, so we are entering upon the war, Dr. Whita.

me says that laborers are almost unbelievably expensive and that every person who is nourished by patriotism or even by self-interest will economize in every possible manner.

This economy will be of little assistance to Americans to bear because we have been for generations an extravagant people.

The secretary of agriculture estimates that the people of the United States spend $7,000,000,000 worth of food annually. A conservative estimate of the number of savings accounts per one thousand of population in this country will give the other leading nations shows that we are far less than any of them.
