CAPACITY TO SERVE MUST BE TAUGHT

Tributes to President Jeppson on Services He has Rendered

In this world, the capacity to serve must be taught, not just expected. It is the responsibility of educators, and those who lead in society, to instill in the young the value of servitude and the importance of giving back to their communities. This is not just a call to action, but a call to consciousness.

THE NEW YEAR

The inauguration of President Jessup today is an event to give satisfection and confidence to the students of the University. The day year will be no engine after an exile. At last the University has found the man upon whom to place the burden of administration for the next half century or more.

500 GIRLS TO TAKE RED CROSS COURSE

Announcement of Training by S. E. T. and J. B. Fleming Alise at Home Service.

More than 500 girls from all parts of the state are expected to attend the special session of the Red Cross summer course at the University this summer, according to Prof. C. E. Walker, one of the principal persons who have charge of the training of this course. Miss May E. Horr, superintendent of the Iowa "Girl\'s training school of the University, who will be the director of the summer training, has spent a week in the hospitals of New York and Washington, D. C., investigating the Red Cross work and securing advice to the instructional staff.

The work of this course will not be to teach Red Cross success for work in the field but to instruct girls and women with the Red Cross service that they can render at home, such as the making of surgical dressings, nursing and caring for children, neighborhood sanitation and works service.

"Although the girls who take this course will probably not be destined to the front," declares President Walker, "every student should become a pupil of the Red Cross in order to conserve their time and abilities. The general public is not yet ready to assume the burdens of the crops which we have to bear. The present course is fundamentally important. Every citizen who is physically fit should be equipped with fundamental facts and knowledge which will enable him to assume his duty in case of war."
