we forgotten the toll of lives, the waste of human beings; of the generations that have grown old and new in the shadow of Belgium? Have we forgotten the toll of lives, the great sacrifices made in the cause of freedom, the gains and losses of the great war that has just ended? Do we not feel it as a/to begin to feel it as a national shame, a national loss for the world?

The writer is aware that the suffering of the little girl in Belgium is no different from the suffering of the child in any other country, but it is the suffering of a child who is looking to your aid to restore her lost home, her lost family, her lost happiness. It is the suffering of a child who is looking to your generosity to provide for her needs, her education, her future.

BACONIAN IS O'DEST SCIENTIFIC GROUP

Prof. C. C. Nutting, who conducted the University's Radcliffe-Osage expedition and one of the steadiest and most consistent of the scientists, has proposed an article to the American Journal of Science, expressing his opinion of the scientific work of the club.

The article was written in 1886 and published in the scientific journal of the time. It is noteworthy for its scientific accuracy and its appreciation of the value of scientific work in the world.

Twelve meetings of the two bodies with Dean C. C. Nutting have been held. Politcal aspirants have satiated their yearnings for an election. To no other agency does the world owe so much for what knowledge we have of scientific fields other than his own, and a correspondent stated that he has become relatively insignificant in these modern times.

PROFESSORS' BUSH LECTURES

Hammontree Society Hours Talk On
A. E. F. Men in French Schools

Prof. Stephen H. Bush, head of the department of Romance languages, lectured last evening on the subject "American Students in French Universities". Professor Bush opened the little last spring visiting the various French universities. As a result of his visit, he formed an opinion that the French are not interested in their language. The lecture was an interesting one, and the students showed a keen interest in the subject.
