JONES DRIVES MEN HARD IN PREPARING FOR PURPLE BATTLE

Realistic That Northwesterners' brilliant showing against Michigan that they have a tough one to be is beginning preparations next for the showdown which will feature the Northwesterners against the touch of the Old Gold this week. The game is a touch hardy taking the two teams more than a lively encounter, and has been a touch condition to go after more.

As a result of the many spots on the floor, the men of the conference are building up a touch of confidence, however, some has diffused Illinois. Minnesota, it is generally agreed, will not get more than a 1 to 5 decision over the Grizzlies. Northwesterners, while not being considered in the first rank of the Big Ten, would be able to make the game competitive enough that Iowa could win a point margin. With this funny mark to the records, it is a close thing, and with the old Gold State looking to be anybody's this week.

The many close followers of the gridiron on the campus here are beginning to believe that the strength of the picture has not been everywhere, and that the loss of the early part of the season has not been a result every man.

The pictures that have been shown in the Big Ten have been of the quality of the old Gold State which the Grizzlies have been able to get across the line.

The Northwesterners are now beginning to show some interest in the game and are looking forward to a good game of football.

THE COMING CONTEST:

The Illini and Gophers should be attended by a greater interest on the part of the student body than any other college game in many years. In self-governing body, voting is one of the most important duties, and here is a responsibility which should be taken seriously by the students of the University.

College politics are not trivial in themselves. The gain of one vote, which each student has, should be used wisely because politics are not a game in which he or she is interested. Then, too, college politics form a foundation for judging national politics, and students who take an interest in the best college politics are forming ideals for bigger politics later in life.

The election tomorrow has some points of even more than ordinary interest and importance. In the first place, it will select the first student-elected members of the student council. Some of the most worth-while men and women in the University have announced their candidacy for this body. It is up to the students to vote wisely and seriously, for it is this first student council which will set the constitution for the years ahead, and which will take the first step toward student government. If the candidates cannot be elected, but is to be hoped that the junior and senior voters will choose from the number, the best fitted to serve on a student-governing body.

Tomorrow will be the first time that the new plan of an All-University election day is tried, and the students should get behind the project to make it a success. The election is a student election, held by and for the students, to choose those who will help to make rules for their own government. By taking part in the elections, they are helping to make student government more strong and effective tomorrow.

Use the ballot tomorrow.

THE CONFERENCE MUSICLE:

With Ohio State as the one remaining undefeated eleven in the Big Ten, it is quite possible that the ten half over, conference football fans are predicting a modified championship when the fall contest rings down on the present season of surprises. The Ohio State may fall in one of its future contests is admitted, but for Saturday's games are proof that no team is unbeatable. Walter Eckerdoll of the Chicago Tribune, after reviewing the results of the Big Ten and Wisconsin adds, "one may almost expect to see Purdue defeat Ohio State on Saturday and put the Buckeyes in a complicated tie for the Big Ten championship."

It is not probable that Purdue can accomplish such a task, but it would be a complete surprise to see such a result. Few followers of football, except key-holders of the Big Ten, expect Purdue to win Wisconsin. But the Buckeyes and Gophers are in spite of advance predictions.

What future the health of the 1931 student council will be like is unknown. If Ohio State can come back and win, its remaining games, if Illinois and Missouri can do the same, and if Ohio State shows in defeat, then it will be mutually decided. But here at home the Hawkeyes have their heavy burden in the "easy" law can win the championship. If Iowa can defeat Northwestern and Chicago, and Chicago in turn can beat Michigan and Ohio State, while Minnesota, with the Illinois win, would not be fair for the Old Gold to boast of the Big Ten title.

If Ohio State is defeated, several elections can be, by a process of elimination, to determine and comparative scores, claim the championship, and they will even through their records be tarnished by unanswerable defeat.

A HIGH HONOR:

A high honor has just come to one of the students of the college of law. Virgil Hasker has won the election of being appointed to the Rhodes scholarship. Incidentally, the honor also reflects upon the University as a whole.

Hasker is one of those rare students who seem able to combine in varied and various activities with high scholastic standing. President of his class during his senior year in liberal arts, member of A. P. L. honor society of seniors, Phi Alpha Delta, law fraternity, and Sigma Pi, social fraternity, and in various other University organizations, he found time to become prominent in debating and oratory and at the same time to keep his grades up to the high record required for the Rhodes Award. He was elected to this latter organization with the highest honors, making a record of superiority over 90 per cent of his colleagues during his entire college course.

The University should be proud to have one of its candidates chosen for the scholarship; it should be

At a recent meeting of the Philosophical Club held at 7:30 p.m., Professor Dr. J. W. Figg talked on "The Psychology of Tragedy." In his analysis of tragedy, Mr. Goodenough showed that his dominant situation was fear and that the appeal of the tragic vision can be explained, in part, by the fact that mankind is such a fundamental trust in fear.

At the meeting also, Dr. C. E. Burnard read the report of a committee on the "Improvement of Psychological Association." Over the new problems of scientific examination of psychological tests for professional psychological students.
