Echoes from the School of Citizenship

Frank E. Horack, professor of political science, traced the development of commissions from this time of our "hands-fair" policy to the present under which we go to the other extreme by spending $100,000 annually for the inspection of the bones of the state.

I should like to see a chair of "town-ladies" established in our colleges in the state," said Benjamin F. Schamburg, professor of political science. "For if you want to make a citizen an American, you have to make him a voter.

Because the prohibition party did not cast 2 per cent of the total vote in the last election, it does not exist in this state, according to O. E. Kilgusman, director of the extension division.

Campaign oratory is a spectacle all by itself," said Arthur M. Schenck, head of the department of history in his lecture Thursday morning. "A delegate to a national convention once nominated a farmer and called upon the convention to support this illustrious statesman, this lady, "Miss Gracius, of the G-Grace, of the west."

..."I cannot speak highly enough of the women voters. "By the way, every honest notion of equal rights by your party, you would think that the party ticket was the passport to paradise," said Miss Friz. "There should not be a woman's party, but there should be a league in which women can express their platform and declare their principles."

Mrs. G. A. Swiney, democratic chairman of Johnson county, said: "The problem is an extension of housekeeping. If the women are going to make the home worth while they must go on with municipal housekeeping, state housekeeping, and national housekeeping."

Excerpts from Prof. Benjamin F. Schamburg's Thursday address:

"Yesterday someone from the ballot box wanted to the statement I made that all the great ideas and ideals in government came from the West. I stand by that statement! I also said that that splendid spirit of democracy in government and law, that is distinctly American came from the west. I stand by that statement. But when I say "West," I do not mean the Pacific coast, nor do I mean that which is west of the Father of Waters; I would not despise the home at the foot of the Alleghenies. The west is America. It comes to Plymouth Rock even. It is a state of mind that stands for freedom."
